Mr. M. R. Cornejo,

Manila.

My dear Mr. Cornejo:

The copy of Cornejo's Commonwealth Directory of the Philippines which you so kindly loaned me for inspection has proven very interesting indeed, so much so that I have found myself giving up much time in reading the history and addresses so attractively presented therein, together with the infinite amount of local information and knowledge not readily available elsewhere.

It is truly an encyclopedic edition and every advanced class of students should have access to it. It should be found in every local library. It is a veritable mine on the worth while history of the Philippines.

I assure you I shall avail myself of securing an early copy when it comes off the press and I thank you for the courtesy you have shown me.

Very sincerely yours

L. R. HOLBROOK,
Major General, U.S. Army.

A MESSAGE

The publication of a Commonwealth Directory of the Philippines, such as this one that Mr. Cornejo has compiled, is very useful to students of the history and contemporary life of the Philippines. It contains important facts that make up Philippine history for the general reader who does not care to go into the details of important events.

The comprehensiveness of the work which includes data not only on the political but also on the business, educational, and social life of the country which no single book attempts to give, will appeal to a wide audience.

Mr. Cornejo and his associates have done a good service in making easily accessible within a single volume many facts which ordinarily would be difficult to obtain. It should prove a useful book and a ready reference to busy persons who do not have the patience and much less the time to look around for the information that the directory makes available.

S i r :

The publication of an encyclopedic Commonwealth Directory of the Philippines is an enterprise worthy of commendation, specially in view of the tremendous progress made in the last three years under the leadership of His Excellency, the President of the Philippines. You have my best wishes for a successful venture in the field.

Very respectfully,

R. B. ALUNAN
Secretary of the Interior

Mr. M. R. Cornejo,
221 Barbosa Street,
Manila.

My dear Mr. Cornejo,

I have read with interest your "Commonwealth Directory of the Philippines" for the year of 1939 which you were kind enough to lend me. The volume has a wealth of information and is a useful source of reference as well as study for those who desire to know more about this prosperous and growing country.

Yours sincerely,

C. KUANGSON YOUNG
Consul General for China in the Philippine Islands.

EDITOR'S FOREWORD

TWENTY ONE YEARS ago, the first volume of Cornejo's Philippine Directory came into light, just a few days before its publisher answered the "Call to Arms" sounded by the then Senate President Manuel L. Quezon, who spontaneously offered to President Woodrow Wilson of the United States of America 25,000 men to fight for Democracy in the battlefields of France.

The second issue came out in 1920 and both volumes, which were exhibited at the Manila Carnival and Exposition of 1926, were awarded first prize with gold medal by the Philippine Carnival Association. The succeeding volumes should have been published continuously and regularly every two years thereafter had it not been for the same spirit of service to the country that had launched him into the political arena. But his past experiences in military and public life paved the way for a bigger and better edition, as he has learned more of his country's needs which inspired him to present to the people, here and abroad, this Encyclopedic Edition of the Commonwealth Directory of the Philippines.

The fact that the work on research and compilation for the present edition was begun in the early part of 1929 is well known to many of its subscribers whose biographies were written and revised from that time to the present. The difficulty encountered by the editor in making personal interviews and communications with thousands of persons, prominent in public and private affairs, such as civil and military authorities, business executives, professionals, educators, writers, ecclesiastics and others, for the purpose of obtaining their biographical data and photographs, which required years of painful waiting before they could have been assembled as a whole, had naturally and inevitably consumed much time in the preparation and printing of this volume.

As the reader will notice from the table of contents, this book consists of six main parts, not including the introductory matter or supplement and the appendixes. The front pages contain facts and figures about the Philippines, Philippine road maps, Manila street directory, and the directory of Commonwealth officials for 1939-1941, supplementing Part Three, or the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, 1935-1938; while the appendixes are included as a supplement to Part Two, or the Government of the United States of America. All the other parts of the book, except the military and naval rosters, business directory and ecclesiastical guide, are more or less permanent in nature, such as the History of the Philippines, from the pre-Spanish era to the present administration, featuring important state documents from the so-called Malolos Constitution of 1898 to the Report of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs of 1938.

To all persons and government and private entities, who have given their valued assistance toward making this book a success, the publisher wishes to express his heartfelt gratitude, especially to all the authors of articles and illustrations used in this edition, whose names are herein mentioned together with the books and newspapers from which they were taken.

THE EDITOR.

FACTS AND FIGURES ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES

DISCOVERY.—As a result of the search for the Spice Islands, Ferdinand Magellan (Hernando Magalhaes), a Portuguese navigator who made a daring expedition under the auspices of Spain, discovered the islands, now known as the Philippines, on March 16, 1521.

Magellan and his men sailed from Seville, Spain, on August 10, 1519, with a fleet composed of five ships, namely, La Trinidad, Victoria, San Antonio, Concepción, and Santiago under his command. Of these vessels one only, the Victoria, returned to Spain three years later, the rest were destroyed or lost. And of the two hundred and seventy men who had set out on that journey, only eighteen saw their native land again. Magellan, the discoverer, was killed in Mactan, Cebu.

NAME.—This rich and beautiful group of islands has been known previously under many names. About 450 B.C., it was known, according to ancient writings, by the name of Mahi, or Ma-yi. Chinese merchants who traded with the natives about 300 B.C. called the Archipelago "Ma-yi-ya." Later in 260 B.C., Claudius Ptolemaeus, an astronomer and geographer who resided at Alexandria, Egypt, called it Insulae Manilae. And when Magellan accidentally landed on its shores in 1521, A.D., it was named Islas de San Lázaro because it was on the day of this Saint that he discovered the islands. The archipelago was also called Islas Ponientes, or Western Islands. Spanish voyager Ruy Lopez de Villalobos gave it another name, Felipinas, in honor of King Philip II of Spain. In 1564, however, Miguel Lopez de Legaspi and Fr. Andrés Urdaneta modified said name, and since that time the archipelago has been known as "las Islas Filipinas" — the Philippine Islands. By the Constitution of the Philippines which went into effect upon the inauguration of the Commonwealth Government on November 15, 1935, the name "Philippines" has been officially adopted.

GEOGRAPHY.—The Philippines is composed of approximately 7,083 islands, of which 2,441 are so far known by names; and the rest, mostly of coral reef, are still without names.

Area.—Of the reported 7,083 islands, the largest is Luzon, on the North, with an area of 40,814 square miles. This island is about the size of Denmark, Belgium and Holland combined. The next in size is Mindanao, on the South, with an area of 36,906 square miles, about the size of Portugal. The other large islands, in the order of their respective areas, are: Samar, 5,124 sq. m.; Negros, 4,903 sq.m.; Palawan, 4,500 sq.m.; Panay, 4,448 sq.m.; Mindoro, 3,794 sq.m.; Leyte, 2,799 sq.m.; Cebu, 1,695 sq.m.; Bohol, 1,534 sq. m.; Catanduanes, 680 sq.m.; Basilan, 350 sq.m.; Busuanga, 323 sq.m.; Marinduque, 287 sq.m.; Dinagat, 259 sq.m.; Tablat, 250 sq.m.; and Sulu, 241 sq.m. The total land area of the country is 115,000 square miles. This is larger than the combined area of the States of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. It is about two-thirds the size of Spain; about 5,000 square miles larger than Italy; twice as large as either Cuba or Java; and only about 7,000 square miles smaller than the British Isles. The whole Philippines measures 1,152 statute miles from north to south, and 688 statute miles from east to west.

Physical Features.—The great majority of the islands are mountainous with alternating fertile valleys or plains, endowed with the beauty of limpid lakes and gorgeous waterfalls or streaked with rushing rivers and landlocked harbors. The mountain ranges serve as the natural fortifications against the elements to protect the abundant resources from heavy monsoons.

Climate.—The climate of the Philippines, being a tropical country, is generally warm; but it is regarded as one of the most healthful in the tropics. Sunstroke is unknown in the Islands. It is agreeably warm during the day, with pleasant early mornings, delightful late afternoons, and cool nights. Monsoon breezes regulate the temperature the year round. All parts of the islands receive rainfall sufficient for agriculture.

The year is divided practically into three seasons, namely, (1) the wet season (from June to November); (2) the dry-cool season (from December to February); and (3) the dry-hot season (from March to May). The most delightful months are November, December, January and February, when the days are clear, sunny and dry, with an average temperature of 78 degrees F. (25.5 degrees C.), and the minimum temperature early in the morning is 17 degrees F. (9.5 degrees C.) lower than the maximum in the afternoon. The maximum day temperature during the dry-hot season is from 91 degrees to 93 degrees F. (33 degrees to 34 degrees C.); while the minimum night temperature is 70 degrees to 75 degrees F. (21 degrees to 24 degrees C.).

POPULATION.—According to the preliminary report of the Commission of the Census, the total population of the Philippines as of January, 1939, was 15,984,247, as against that of 10,314,810 for the year 1918. In 1938, the foreign population of the islands was estimated as follows: Chinese, 98,000; Japanese, 25,000; Americans, 8,000 (including those in the Army and Naval service of the U.S.); Spaniards, 5,000; German, 700; British, 600; French, 250; Swiss, 100; and Others, 1,500—or a total of approximately 139,150, not including, of course, the new comers or refugees from Europe.

Religion.—Of the total Philippine population, about 92% are Christians, and about 8% only are non-Christians. The Christian Filipinos are divided into three principal religious classifications known as the Roman Catholic, the Philippine Independent (Aglipayan) Catholic, and the Protestant, which generally includes different sects or religious denominations, such as the Evangelical, the Episcopalian, Methodist Episcopal, the Presbyterian, the Baptists, the Seventh-Day Adventists, the Churches of Christ, etc.

The Non-Christian Filipinos are the Malay Mohammedans or Moros and the Pagans. The Moros are concentrated chiefly in Mindanao and Sulu, and they number more than half a million. The Pagans, numbering more than 200,000, are semi-civilized Malay descendants who live in the mountainous regions of Northern Luzon, East Coast of Luzon, Zambales, Mindoro, Panay, Negros, Samar, Palawan, and Mindanao.

Government.—In spite of their religious differences, the Filipinos as a whole are a united people, generally peaceful and law-abiding, and very hospitable. They run their own government, patterned after that of the United States of America, republican in form, with a Constitution that serves both for the Commonwealth and the coming Republic of the Philippines.

Languages and Dialects.—There are more or less eight established native languages, the most prominent of which are the Tagalog, the Ilocano, and the Visayan. The other five languages are the Pangasinan, the Pampango, the Bikol, the Ibanag, and the Sambal. All the rest of the population speak their local dialects; but most of the young people throughout the country speak English, while some of the old folks in the provinces understand Spanish. Many government officials and employees, teachers of public and private schools and colleges, agriculturists or planters, businessmen and professionals, and other learned people of the Philippines speak and write either English or Spanish, or both, aside from their native language or dialect. Some of them, especially the travelers, also speak other foreign languages, like French, Italian, German, Chinese and Japanese.

On December 30, 1937, the Tagalog language, upon recommendation of the Institute of National Language (created by Commonwealth Act No. 184), was officially proclaimed by the President of the Philippines as the basis for the adoption of a national language. Said Institute is now busy preparing the Filipino national language dictionary and other books needed for teaching it in the public and private schools of the Philippines. At present, the Tagalog language is widely spoken throughout the country. There are several Tagalog newspapers and magazines, not to mention thousands of books and pamphlets and novels published in that language, which have a wide circulation like the Taliba, the Mabuhay, and the Liwayway. This last named publication has a weekly circulation of about 100,000. Even in the United States of America, in the Territory of Hawaii, and in the neighboring countries of the Philippines, the Tagalog language is used as the common tongue of the Filipino residents. To-day, some of the foreign residents in the Philippines, particularly the Chinese and Japanese merchants, and also some Europeans, are taking interest in learning the Tagalog language. There is no doubt that this language, which is rich in literature and poetry, may creep into other countries and be one of the commercial languages of the Far East.

For the information of local and foreign students, the dialects existing in the different parts of the Philippines at present are, in the order of their number, as follow:

1. The Gaddang—in North Central Luzon.
2. The Kalamian—in Calamianes and Cuyo Islands.
3. Ivatan—in Batanes Islands.
4. The Isinai—in North Central Luzon.
5. The Dumagat—in South Luzon, Kalawat Islands.
6. The Sulu—in Sulu Archipelago.
7. The Magindanao—in South Mindanao.
8. The Samal—in Southwest Mindanao.
9. The Lanao—in West Mindanao.
10. The Yakan—in Basilan Island.
11. The Sanggil—in Davao.
12. The Palawan—in South Palawan.
13. The Hugao—in North Luzon.
14. The Kalinga—in North Luzon.
15. The Bontok—in North Luzon.
16. The Igorot—in North Luzon.
17. The Bukidnon—in North Mindanao.
18. The Manobo—in Central and East Mindanao.
19. The Subanon—in West Mindanao.
20. The Tinggian—in North Luzon.
21. The Mandaya—in East Mindanao.

22. The Apayao—in North Luzon.
23. The Tagbanua—in Palawan.
24. The Mangyan—in Mindoro.
25. The Bilaan—in Davao, Mindanao.
26. The Bogobo—in Davao, Mindanao.
27. The Atao—in Davao, Mindanao.
28. The Tiruray—in South Mindanao.
29. The Tagakaulo—in Davao, Mindanao.
30. The Ilongot—in East Central Luzon.
31. The Kulaman—in Davao, Mindanao.
32. The Mangguangan—in Central Mindanao.
33. The Isamal—in Samal Islands, Davao, Mindanao.
34. The Mamanua—in North-East Mindanao.
35. The Batak—in Palawan.

In addition to the above-mentioned dialects, there are different minor dialects spoken by the hill peoples living in the mountains of East Coast of Luzon, Ilocos, Zambales, Negros, Panay, and Samar.

COMMERCE.—Because of the strategic position of the Philippines in the international commercial routes in the Orient, there is every reason to believe that, in the not-distant future, its capital—the city of Manila—can serve as a convenient distributing center for the Asiatic trade which the United States of America, Great Britain, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and other European countries can not well ignore. The important countries on the south and Japan and Siberia on the north form almost a semi-circle, with Manila in the heart or center.

The Port of Manila.—Taking the outer or sea-end of Pier No. 7 as the point of calculation, the Port of Manila is situated in latitude 14° 34' and 58" N., and longitude 120° 57' and 55" E. It is on the eastern shore of Manila Bay, approximately 30 miles from the entrance to the Bay on the west central coast of the Island of Luzon, and about 600 nautical miles from the nearest commercial point of the Continent of Asia, near Hongkong (British colony). Taiwan (Japanese) on the north, Celebes (Dutch) on the south, Borneo (British and Dutch) and Java and Sumatra (Dutch) on the southwest, are the important islands which surround the Philippines.

Piers and Wharves.—There are four piers and one wharf which constitute the present berthing facilities of the Port of Manila for vessels engaged in the foreign carrying trade. The four piers are Pier No. 1, owned and operated by the United States Government for official use, and Piers 3, 5 and 7, operated by the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. Pier No. 7 is the largest and most modern pier in the whole Orient. It is 1,400 feet long over all and 240 feet wide, having a berthing length of 1,200 feet and accommodating four of the largest vessels on the Pacific. A fifth vessel may also be berthed at the end. The pier is covered by a modern concrete and steel cargo and passenger structure 1,235 feet long and 160 feet wide, leaving open cargo aprons 40 feet wide on each side and at the end, and is piped for fresh water and bunker fuel oil. The mechanical cargo-handling equipment is complete and modern, consisting of six electric heavy lift cranes of the jib type, of four- and fifteen-ton capacity, mounted upon trackage on the aprons. Within the cargo structure is a flexible system of overhead electric hoisting and stacking cranes which move both longitudinally and laterally. These cranes are twenty-three in number and of two- and three- and one-half-ton capacity. Electric floor tractors, motor trucks and trailers and hand trucks complete the efficient and elaborate cargo-handling equipment of the pier.

CUSTOMHOUSE.—At present, the Bureau of Customs occupies temporary quarters in a two-story building fronting Pier No. 5. Plans have been drawn and the foundation laid for a fine reinforced concrete customhouse building which will be a credit to the port. Completion of the customhouse has, however, been indefinitely postponed due to the need of more urgent public works' projects.

two customs general bonded warehouses and one private general bonded warehouse; the two former having a total capacity of 5,000 tons, and the latter 2,800 tons. All are situated on the Port Area near the piers. Customs regulations require that all merchandise remaining on the piers three days after the last package has been discharged from the carrying vessels shall be transferred to a bonded warehouse. Merchandise not covered by shipping documents (bill of lading and Consular invoice) is transferred to a customs bonded warehouse for storage at P4.50 per ton per month. Merchandise covered by shipping documents is transferred to the private general bonded warehouse for storage at the rate of P2 per ton per month. Transfer charges from pier to bonded warehouse are P0.80 per ton. There are nine private bonded warehouses in addition to the above.

RAIL FACILITIES.—The port has no belt-line rail facilities in direct connection with its piers. Cargoes are transported to and from the piers by motor trucks and river lighterage. Trackage of the Manila Railroad Company, which serves the great central plains of Luzon, parallels the wharves on the Pasig River where coastwise vessels are berthed; but the extension of its trackage to the piers would entail the heavy expense of a railroad bridge across the River—an expense not believed warranted by any benefits to be gained at present. Conditions at present greatly favor the haulage of bulk import and export cargoes by river lighterage between warehouses on the river and foreign vessels anchored in the harbor, rather than by land to and from vessels berthed at the piers. General merchandise discharged upon the piers is conveniently hauled from there to warehouses by motor trucks and river lighterage.

LIGHTERAGE FACILITIES.—Lighterage of all kinds (open, covered, and tankage) is available for all classes of cargo. Approximately 520 lighterage vessels, having a total gross tonnage of 38,000 tons, are licensed for the river and harbor service of the port; and of these, 390 vessels of 28,000 tons, including tank lighterage for coconut oil, are available for public lighterage service. All lighterage facilities are privately owned, and arrangements must be made with the lighterage companies for their services. Advance arrangements are advisable for shipments in quantity. General import merchandise, except such as may be granted ship-side delivery, is discharged upon the piers either directly from carrying vessels berthed at the piers or from lighterage furnished by vessels anchored in the harbor. The regular charge for lighterage of general cargo from vessels at anchor in the harbor to the piers is ₱2.50 per ton, weight or measure, and the cost is borne by the carrying vessel. Other lighterage charges are moderate and according to contract.

STEVEDORING.—Stevedoring is also a private enterprise. The major portion of the stevedoring service of the port is performed by long-established and well-equipped companies holding contracts with the principal steamship lines. Efficient and plentiful labor is always available, and there is no delay on account of serious labor trouble such as frequently obtain at many ocean ports. Discharging and loading of vessels is accomplished rapidly and efficiently, and with continuous day and night, Sunday and holiday service, when desired. Charges for the service are moderate and compare favorably with other ports of the Orient.

TRANSIT CARGO.—Facilities for receiving, handling, storing and re-shipping cargo in transit to foreign and interisland ports are excellent. Transit cargo is received and stored upon the piers, with free storage for 30 days, and placed into slings of the forwarding vessel, or onto transportation for transfers to forwarding vessel, at the very low rate of ₱0.75 per ton of 40 cubic feet or 1,000 kilos. This includes all labor and handling charges from the time the transit cargo is received until delivery. Transit cargo destined for transshipment by the Manila Railroad Company is allowed 15 days of free storage. Interisland cargo brought to the piers for shipment on interisland vessels to interisland ports is handled and stored for ₱0.60 per ton of 40 cubic feet or 1,000 kilos. With these low rates of charges and long free storage under cover, transit cargo facilities of the port are unexcelled.

FUELING FACILITIES.—Imported bunker coal, crude oil in bulk or in drums, and refined oil in cases or drums are available in quantities adequate to ordinary needs of the port. Coal importing firms are prepared to furnish bunker coal in quantity and on short notice, with their own lighterage facilities, from storage yards on the lower Pasig River; and the U. S. Navy maintains a large coaling station at Cavite Naval Station for Army and Navy uses. Fuel oil in bulk is furnished to vessels of the United States Government by pipeline connections at the piers. Four large oil companies maintain storage tanks and warehouses on the upper Pasig River, and operate tank and pump barges for delivering crude oil in bulk and other mineral oil products to vessels at anchor in the harbor.

FRESH WATER.—An abundance of potable fresh water is available at the piers by direct pipe-line connections with the city water-mains at ₱0.25 per ton, and by privately owned water barges for vessels at anchor at ₱1 per ton. Distilled and artesian water may be obtained in moderate quantities from the Government Ice Plant, now leased to San Miguel Brewery.

PILOTAGE.—Pilotage at Manila is optional with the Master when entering and leaving the inner anchorage harbor; but compulsory for vessels entering and leaving berths at piers and wharf. Pilots are available at all hours, day and night, with double charge for night service. Pilotage fees, calculated on registered net tonnage, are as follows:

To and from Harbor.—Vessels up to 1,000 tons, net, ₱20; from 1,000 to 3,000 tons, ₱30; and vessels of over 3,000 tons, ₱40.

To and from Piers and Wharf.—Vessels up to 1,000 tons net, ₱30; from 1,000 to 3,000 tons, ₱50; and vessels over 3,000 tons, ₱75. Towage is available if desired, but is not compulsory.

PIER BERTHS AND FEES.—All vessels except those having inflammable or explosive cargo on board are permitted to berth at the piers. Berths at the piers are assigned by the Chief Pilot in the order of arrival in port. Vessels with cargo only and vessels with limited passenger lists are usually assigned berths at Piers 3 and 5; while vessels with large passenger lists and with heavy-lift cargo to discharge are usually assigned berths at Pier 7. Pier berthing fees are as follows: P0.015 per registered gross tonnage of vessels for the first 24 hours or part thereof; and for each succeeding 24 hours, or part thereof exceeding 6 hours, the same charge is made. Provided, that the maximum charge shall be P200 per day. Vessels with passengers only and vessels berthing for the purpose of taking on fresh water or fuel oil for bunkers only are charged berthing fees at the rate of P0.01 per gross tonnage of vessel for a period of 8 hours; but if such vessels remain at the piers more than 8 hours, the same charge is made as for vessels discharging or loading cargo.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.—United States Public Health and Quarantine Service Regulations obtain at Manila and at all other entry ports of the Philippines. All vessels arriving at Manila directly from foreign ports are required to anchor outside the break-water entrance to the inner harbor, display the quarantine flag and await inspection. Inspection hours are from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. Vessels are inspected in the order of arrival in port. Original bill of health from the port of dispatch and supplementary bills of health from each intermediate port at which the vessel has entered en route are required. Fumigation facilities are provided and, when done by order of the Quarantine Officer, there is no charge for the service; but when fumigation is requested by the Master of the vessel, the charge for the service is P0.26 per 1,000 cubic feet for the sulphur process, and P0.29 per 1,000 cubic feet for the cyanide process. Vessels berthed at piers and wharf are required to maintain rat-guards on all lines and similar devices, and gangways and ladders must be removed at night unless in use or guarded.

COMMUNICATION.—The following radio communication companies are operating in the Philippines:

Globe Wireless, Ltd.—City Office, 209 Crystal Arcade, Escolta, Manila.
Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co.—123 Juan Luna, Binondo.
R C A Communications, Inc.—Insular Life Bldg., Plaza Moraga.

The Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company.—Under the efficient management of Major J. E. H. Stevenot, this company has established not only local telephone service in Manila and neighboring towns but has also extended the telephone service to various points of the Philippines in Luzon, Cebu, Iloilo, Davao and many other places, and overseas—to Europe, Asia, and the United States. (For Overseas Telephone Rates to Europe and Asia and the United States, see Pages II and III of the Manila Telephone Directory.)

Postal and Telegraph Data.—In 1938 there were 1,044 post-offices, 447 telegraph offices, 105 radio stations, and 701 mail routes with a total length of 16,030.06 km., and 4 air mail routes with a total length of 1,754.90 km. The length of the cable lines was 613,640 km., while that of the telegraph lines was 14,365,520 km.

Roads in the Philippines.—The total roads in existence in all the provinces and cities of the country as of December 31, 1938, were: First-class roads, 10,408.5 kilometers; second-class roads, 5,975.3 kilometers; third-class roads, 2,790.7 kilometers, or a total of 19,174.5 kilometers, not including trails which measured a total length of 4,559.9 kilometers, according to the data furnished by the Department of Public Works and Communications. In addition to these provincial roads, there were the so-called National Roads which had a total length of 9,990.0 kilometers, while the trails during the same year had a total length of 844.9 kilometers. The Government has spent for the road and bridge work alone, not including other public works, the total sum of ₱19,957,169.54. More national roads are now being planned and two big projects in Manila and suburbs are now under construction. For the colonization and development of Mindanao, the Commonwealth Government has already appropriated millions of pesos from the coconut excise tax fund.

AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY.—For the purpose of helping the local farmers and manufacturers, an Agricultural and Industrial Bank, with a capital of ₱150,000,000.00, has recently been organized by the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines in accordance with Commonwealth Act No. 459 approved by President Manuel L. Quezon on June 9, 1939. Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce Benigno S. Aquino has been appointed chairman of the board of directors of said Bank, with Mr. Salvador Lagdameo as general manager.

Commercial Banks.—There are at present twelve banks operating in the city of Manila. They are—

Bank of the Philippine Islands—10 Plaza Cervantes.
Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China—Wilson Bldg., Juan Luna St.
China Banking Corporation—China Bank Bldg., Dasmarinas & Juan Luna.
Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation—35 Juan Luna.
Monte de Piedad and Savings Bank—Plaza Santa Cruz & Ongpin.

To the above-named banks may be added the Savings Bank of the Commonwealth at 105 Plaza Santa Cruz, which bank will soon begin general banking business according to the plan now being worked out by its board of directors, and the Bank of Communications. The Philippine Economic Bank is still under process of organization.

Economics.—With the recent approval of the Philippine Economic Bill by U. S. Congress, amending the economic provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Independence Law, the economic stability of the Philippines is assured by the Commonwealth Government. The National Assembly has enacted several legislative measures tending to protect the economic resources of the Philippines and to promote friendly relations between capital and labor, and between nationals and aliens.

Baguio, Mt. Data, Bontoc and Ifugao Rice Terraces

By Percy Warner Tinsan

MADE in either one of two routes this complete tour of nearly 1,000 kilometers includes approximately 500 kilometers of travel over the greatest system of all high-altitude motor roads on any continent. Not only is it the outstanding motor tour of the Orient—many world travelers have conceded it first place among all similar tours in the United States or Europe.

From the rice and cane fields of the lowlands one ascends over mountain roads that are marvels of engineering to the pine clad heights of a section that might be the high Sierras of California. One of these mountain highways less than 25 miles in length represents a cost for building and subsequent maintenance of over $5,000,000. From the beautiful and captivating city of Baguio with its 40 miles of asphalted parkway streets one continues along gradual grades with seldom a shift to "low" up to elevations just under 8,000 feet with breath-taking scenery at every turn. This route pierces the heart of a great gold mining country up to Mt. Data Lodge—show place of the mountain district and a vacation spot par excellence—thence to Bontoc, capital of the famed Igorot country.

In some of these sections it is not even necessary to leave the car in order to see the wild life as it has existed for hundreds of years.

From Bontoc there is a choice of two return routes, preferably No. 4, to the southeast through the marvelous rice terraces, which rival the pyramids as examples of prehistoric engineering and incalculable human labor. Thence through dense hardwood forests of mahogany, ebony and other valuable hard woods to another mountain pass and a gradual drop to the plains.

The alternate return route is 4, 3 and 7 to the coast line, which may be followed for nearly the entire distance to Manila, passing the U. S. Naval Station at Olongapo.

LAGUNA ACADEMY

SAN PABLO, LAGUNA

Partial View of the Academy Main Building

The LAGUNA ACADEMY is a complete private high school recognized by the Government, and jointly founded in 1923 by the late Don Melecio Fule and by the late Ex-Municipal President Zacarias Sahagun with an enrollment of 16 students. After seven years of pioneering struggle in the field of education, the institution had an enrollment of over 500 students in the high school department alone. And, today, the Laguna Academy is one of the largest private provincial high schools, with a beautiful two-story modern school building.

The gradual increase in the number of students, not only from the locality of San Pablo but also from many other towns and provinces all over the Philippines, is indicative of the stability of the school and of the faith and confidence that the general public has in the educative mission of this institution.

PROVINCE OF MINDORO

The Province of Mindoro consists of the Island of Mindoro, the Island of Lubang, and all other islands adjacent to any of them, not included in the territory of some other province. It contains the following municipalities:

1. Abra de Ilog
2. Baco
3. Bongabong
4. Budulacno
5. CALAPAN
6. Looc
7. Lubang
8. Mamburno
9. Mansalay
10. Naujan
11. Paluan
12. Pinamalayan
13. Pola
14. Puerto Galera
15. Sablayan
16. San Jose
17. San Teodoro

MINDORO ISLAND

It has an area of approximately 3,794 square kilometers. The mountains of Mindoro divide the island into two distinct parts. There are large forests, good grazing areas, and fertile soils. The forests of Mindoro contain fine timber and an abundant supply of rattan. At the mouth of most of the rivers are large mangrove forests and nipa swamps. Fishing and farming are the most important occupations of the people. The island has very few inhabitants. Like Mindanao, it awaits the arrival of new settlers.

ROMBLON AND MASBATE PROVINCES

THE ISLAND OF PANAY

The Island of Panay, which resembles the shape of North America, is divided into three provinces, namely, Antique, Capiz, and Iloilo. Antique consists of 13 municipalities; Capiz, 28; and Iloilo, 36, including the city. Panay is one of the most progressive islands of the Visayas. The City of Iloilo was created by Commonwealth Act No. 57, approved October 20, 1936, and inaugurated August 25, 1937.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The Philippine Islands, situated in the western Pacific Ocean, consist of a group of islands, the largest of which is Luzon, followed by Mindanao, Samar, and Negros. The islands are separated by numerous straits and channels. The climate is generally tropical, with a wet season from June to November and a dry season from December to May. The population is estimated at approximately 70 million in 1940.

Published by the Bureau of Census, Manila, 1940. Price, 100 pesos. The map is a detailed outline of the Philippine archipelago, showing the relative positions of the major islands and surrounding bodies of water. It is a valuable reference for understanding the geography of the Philippines.

PROVINCIAL CHIEF EXECUTIVES FOR 1939-40

PHILIPPINE DELEGATE TO U. S. CONGRESS

HON. JOAQUIN M. ELIZALDE
Resident Commissioner in Washington, D.C.
(Appointed September 29, 1928)

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE COMMONWEALTH (1935-1938)

Speech Delivered by Former Speaker Manuel A. Roxas, Now Secretary of Finance, on the Occasion of the Celebration of the Third Anniversary of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, at the Luneta, Manila
November 15, 1938.

THREE YEARS AGO, the government of the Commonwealth was inaugurated. We established a constitutional regime under a charter approved by our people. That was one of several definite steps, a most important one, leading to our complete liberation by the great people of the United States. On this day, therefore, we rejoice in the memory of a signal achievement in our age-old quest for freedom, and we give expression to feelings of thankfulness to Divine Providence and of genuine gratitude to America for the blessings of democracy and material progress that we now enjoy, and because in the midst of a troubled world, when the shrieks of agonizing freedom rend the air in many lands, we live in peace and security under the blended shadow of the American and Philippine flags.

The progress we have attained since the establishment of the Commonwealth has fully vindicated the hopes of our people and the faith of America in our capacity for self-rule. During this short period, we made advances in many fields. Hundreds of school buildings have been erected, increasing the enrollment in the public schools by over 350,000. Sanitary, hospital and other public services have been afforded to scores of new communities. Several thousand kilometers of roads have been built, several hundred paved or cemented, and many bridges have been constructed to provide employment for labor and more adequate transportation facilities. The railroad line to Southern Luzon has been completed. The geological and soil survey of the whole country is being pushed forward to an early termination that we may determine our agricultural possibilities and the extent of our mineral wealth. The business enterprises of the government have been operated at a reasonable profit, and constructions of factories that will supply a part of the national requirements in food and clothing have been started. Definite steps have been made looking to a re-orientation of our educational policies. Measures are being taken to increase Filipino participation in domestic trade, to stimulate foreign trade and to safeguard our products in foreign markets. Financial assistance has been tendered to Filipino interests to induce the creation of a merchant marine.

Earnest endeavors are being made to formulate a plan for the development of a sound and stable national economy. A system of national defense is being developed.

Every safeguard possible has been established to shield labor against exploitation. Women and children are protected in the factory and in the field. Working and living conditions of wage-earners have been improved. A minimum wage for laborers in government projects has been fixed. Daily working hours have been limited and the laborer has been given a voice in the settlement of industrial disputes. Without coercion upon, or discrimination against, either the employer or the employee, widespread or long-drawn-out strikes have well-nigh become impossible. We are, I think, definitely on the way towards a universal application of the principles that both capital and labor are entitled to a living wage or income.

The present administration has shown the keenest interest in behalf of the workingman. This is because the common man, he who in derision is called the "tao", is still the substance and the backbone of the nation.

TRIBUTE TO QUEZON

In the realm of government precedents and traditions are being created which will be of wholesome enduring effects upon future administrations. The processes of democracy are being successfully adapted to the solution of complex and urgent social and economic problems. A high standard of morality in the public service is being maintained. The courts have administered prompt and impartial justice and have stood resolutely as the bulwark of the Constitution and the rights and liberties of every man. There has been no compromise with corruption or inefficiency in public office, constantly guarding against the deleterious influence of special groups.

The public finances have been maintained in a sound and strong position.

The accomplishments of the Commonwealth are the accomplishments of the Filipino people. But the one man who is deserving of the greatest credit is he who, as the head of the state, has steered its course during the last three years—President Manuel L. Quezon. A courageous and inspired leader, a statesman of vision and wisdom, a man in whose soul are fused the virtues and highest traits of character of our race, inspiring the people with his great faith in our destiny, he has led the nation during these trying days with great ability and success. We follow his leadership because we believe in him. His rectitude of purpose, his unswerving devotion to justice and righteousness, his responsiveness to the sufferings and needs of the common man, have made him, in the estimation of the people, their benefactor and trusted apostle of their liberties and well-being. Quezon, the man, is stronger and greater in influence upon the hearts of the masses than Quezon, the President—because they love him.

The extraordinary accomplishments of the Commonwealth government were made possible, in large measure, due to the unstinted cooperation of His Excellency, the High Commissioner of the United States to the Philippines. A statesman of the highest order, a leader of men, a convinced liberal, High Commissioner McNutt has given to the Philippines every assistance that was in his power to grant.

GOSPEL OF THE HOUR

The Filipino people have every reason to be proud and happy over the progress attained during the last three years. But to organize the Philippines for independent nationhood, and to insure the stability and permanency of that state, as well as the prosperity and happiness of the people, much more need be achieved, especially in the realm of economic and social advancement. This nation, if it is to survive must produce more wealth and hardier men. We must establish an indigenous economy based on abundance and a free and untrammelled interchange of the fruits of labor among producers. The President recently stated the compelling need of the hour when he appealed for a regeneration of the character of the Filipinos. With our progress thus far, we have merely built the avenue towards national security and social betterment; but we can only advance on that road without fear of setbacks, if the people as a whole resolve to revitalize and develop the traits of character which were the proud possession of our forbears. We must become an adventurous and enterprising nation, confident in our capabilities and determined to apply them to useful and desirable ends. The government can merely pave the way. Individual and national progress must come through individual and collective productive effort. The gospel of the hour is work, strenuous work, fruitful work. Let us glorify work and the right to work. Let us preach it everywhere. Let it be taught in the schools and in the homes until it forms part of our being and of our instincts. Let it be established as one of the cardinal duties of the citizen to the state, for the promotion of the common welfare. Let it be so woven in the very fabric of our political and social philosophy that those who by choice remain idle shall be considered outcasts in every community. Let no one say that in a country like ours, where vacant public lands are so abundant, that any man is denied the opportunity to engage in productive toil. Only through work can we build a strong national economy that shall be adequate to insure the well-being of the people and the fiscal requirements needed to safeguard our national integrity. Governments are not the fountain-source of spiritual or material progress. They can merely establish conditions and regulate and guide the social forces towards desired objective. Governments are essentially static; progress must come, if at all, from the dynamic energies of the people themselves.

CITIZENS' TASK

We have faith in the intelligence and patriotism of the masses of our population. We believe in the great man who leads our nation today. We are favored with the assistance of the noblest and most powerful nation of the world. We have a country with abundant resources. It will be what we make of it. Its destiny is in our hands. Let us, my fellow citizens on this anniversary, dedicate ourselves resolutely to the task of making the Philippines not only a free and prosperous country but a nation that shall be the friend of other nations, a nation that shall command their respect, a nation eternally wedded to liberty and democracy, loved by its people and blessed with the joys and the endearments of happy homes.

A WORD OF THANKS

TO ALL HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS, BUREAUS, OFFICES AND GOVERNMENT-OWNED CORPORATIONS:

The Editor wishes to express his thanks for their kind assistance in furnishing this publication with the list of officers appearing in this issue.

Another edition will be published for the years 1941-1942. It is the intention of the Editor to present a GRAPHIC DIRECTORY, showing the pictures of all national officers, department and bureau heads, chiefs and assistant chiefs of divisions, technical assistants and advisers, and ranking employees, including their brief biographies whenever available.

The history of the organization of each bureau or office will also be published, followed by a complete list of officers and employees.

B. PHILIPPINE POPULATION ACCORDING TO 1939 CENSUS AND PROVINCIAL AND MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS FOR 1939-1940

SHOWING THE POPULATION OF EACH PROVINCE AND OF EACH MUNICIPALITY AND DISTRICT FOR THE YEAR 1939

AND

A List of City Officials, Provincial Governors, Members of the Provincial Boards, Secretaries of Provincial Boards, Provincial Treasurers, Provincial Auditors, Provincial Fiscals, District Health Officers, District Engineers, Provincial Inspectors of Philippine Constabulary, Division Superintendents of Schools and Principals of Provincial High Schools; and a List of Municipal Mayors and Municipal Treasurers

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The following is a supplement to pages 984-1008 (City of Manila) and pages 1009-1079 (Provincial and Municipal Officials, Etc.), giving the list of the present incumbents as of Aug. 19, 1939, and the population of each province and of each municipality (city or district) of the Philippines as reported by the Commission of Census. The Census for 1939 shows a total population of 15,984,247, representing an increase of 55% over that of 1918 which was placed at 10,314,810. It is estimated that by 1971 the population of the Philippines may reach 32,000,000; but in the opinion of the writer, it may (and should) reach over and above 60,000,000 before 1971, if the Government and the people of the Philippines will only encourage early marriages and frequent births, and give adequate aid or pension to large and poor families, as the law may wisely and effectively provide for the purpose of rapidly increasing the population.

TELEPHONE SERVICE

To Many Places in

THE PHILIPPINES

You can talk from any telephone in Manila with any Long Distance Telephone subscriber in Cebu, Iloilo, Davao and many other places in the Philippines . . . with any telephone in the United States and other countries reached by the overseas telephone service. These are achievements which, not so many years ago, would have seemed miraculous. Now these miracles are taken as a matter of course. Seldom do you realize what extraordinary powers the telephone gives you. You use it daily for a dozen different purposes in addition to its "Long Distance" facilities.

For list of Philippine points reached by the Long Distance Telephone and the corresponding rates see page IV of the telephone directory. For information regarding out-of-town telephone service call

HISTORY OF THE PHILIPPINES

Periods of History.—The Philippines' Pre-Spanish Era.—The Spanish Regime in the Islands.—The Erstwhile Philippine Republic.—The American Administration.—The Commonwealth of the Philippines.

PERIODS OF HISTORY.—Unlike the General History of the world which divides itself into Ancient, Medieval and Modern, the History of the Philippines is marked with five distinct epochs, viz.: (1) The Pre-Spanish Era; (2) the Spanish Regime; (3) the Erstwhile Philippine Republic; (4) the American Administration; and (5) the Commonwealth of the Philippines, leading to complete Philippine Independence. "It is noteworthy that the Philippines have thus been touched by three civilizations—(a) the Aboriginal and the Oriental, (b) the Latin and the European; and (c) the Anglo-Saxon and the distinctly American. One has been that of the patriarchal, the second that of the monarchical, and the last, that of the democratic form of government."⁽¹⁾

CHAPTER I

THE PHILIPPINES' PRE-SPANISH ERA

HINDU, Chinese and Japanese sources only can be used with advantage to look into the ancient history of the Philippines.

The Hindus, who now occupy the land badly called East-India, came after 2,000 B.C. from North-west and took possession, after a hard struggle with the dark-colored natives Dasyu, of the Pandschab or Punjab (sanskrit: Pant-schanada), that is, the land of five rivers. The Hindus (Sindu) called themselves Arya (Aryans); they were of a light color and formed a trunk of the Indogermanic race. In time these intruders spread to the South and East, and occupied the country of the river Ganges. The Vedic system of Brahmanism was the prehistoric religion of the Hindus. Among the states which the Hindus from Ganges southward formed was the most powerful kingdom of Magadha with the royal residence at Radschagriha. Westward from Magadha lived the Kasi with the capital Varanasi (today: Benares), and eastward on both banks of the Ganges the Anga, with the capital Tschampa

(near the modern Bhawalpur). Northward on the other bank of the Ganges were situated the kingdoms of Vridschi and Mithila. The name Hindu, or Sindu, is derived from the river Indus or Sind (sanskrit: Sindhu, this is river). The language of the Hindus was Sanskrit.

Brâhadratha (1327-1324 B.C.) was the founder of the kingdom and the first dynasty (1327-1207) of Magadha. The people lived in villages, some of which were surrounded with ramparts as defense against rapacious neighbors.

In the second chapter of Genesis is said: "the name of the river is Pishon which compasses the whole land of Chawilah where there is gold, bedorah (sanskrit: badara,—this is the cotton-tree), and shoham, or the onyx stone." Pishon is the Ganges and Chawilah is the western India, also called "Ophir." South of India lies the island of Ceylon (Sanskrit: Lanka or Singhala). The chief occupation of the Hindus was agriculture and cattle raising; besides this, they had horses as draught-animals, sheep and goats. The second dynasty Barhadhratha reigned from 1208-803 B.C. in Magadha. The third dynasty Pradjota (803-665) was followed by the dynasty Saisnaga (665-403). Under the reign of king Bimbisara (603-551) came Buddha ("Siddhattha Sakya," later on called "Gautama Sramana" and "Sakya Muni," born 723—died 543), the founder of Buddhism, to Magadha, and the king with thousands of his subjects were converted to the new religion. The Egyptians, Tyrians and Chinese had now entered in commercial relations with the Hindus. Hindu colonists visited the islands of Suma-drah, Ja-vah, and Prony or Ponî (Borneo). Buddhism, as taught by its founder, obliged its followers to a strict, moral life and was almost in every way opposed to Brahmanism with its spirit of caste. Since Bimbisara's son, Adschatasatru (551-522), was also a convert to the teaching of Buddha, many adherents of the old religion left the country and went to Sumadrah, Ja-vah and Prony where they obliged the dark-skinned natives whom they called Dasyu to retire to the hills or deserts. Under Cisunaga (471-453) had Hindus come to the land northward of Prony,—Ma-yi-ya, where they had met Chinese and dark-skinned Dasyu (Ajta or Aetas). Kalasoka (450-416) left the old capital Radschagriha and built the new capital Pataliputra (Palibothra) not far from the present Patna. The kingdoms of Vridschi, Bharata and Kosala and others had been under Adschatasatru united with Magadha. In Suraschtra (Guzarat, Gujarat) reigned the family Pandu, a prince of which had gone to Ceylon in 543 B.C. and had founded a kingdom there, spreading Aryan culture and customs. Chinese merchants had come during the reign of the emperor Lingwarng (571-544) to the land Ma-hi, which was the Chinese name for the Sanskrit name "Ma-yi-ya" and which was the name given to the middle part (with Manila) of what was under emperor Wuti (140-86) called Laoshun (later Lo-zon, Lusong and Luzon). Chinese traders had also now arrived in Prony (now, "Brunei" or "Borneo") and in Pulilu (sanskrit: Puhi-lu, now Bohol). Nanda, a brigand chief, had in 403 B.C. killed the youngest son of Kalasoka and usurped the throne of Magadha (403-377). Under him emigrated many Hindus to the island of Sumadrah from where the first Hindu settlers after a terrible fight with the newcomers went to Ma-yi-ya, from which no doubt the name of Manila (Ma-ni-la) is derived. The intruders chased the dark-skinned Ayta (Dasyu) to the hills and mountains and occupied the valleys and the shores. These Hindu wanderers came now also to Pa-lao-yo (Palawan or Paragua). Dasasiddhika (359-352) was the last king of Nanda's house; his barber, Indradatta, fell in love with Queen Sunanda, and killed the king, usurping the throne of Magadha (352-340). His son Dhana-nanda (340-317) was the richest king of the Hindus. Tschandragupta (317-291) founded a new dynasty, Maurja (317-173). He delivered India from the Greek-Macedonian power into which some states had fallen during the expedition of Alexander the Great. His son, Vindusara (291-260), maintained diplomatic relations with Egypt and Syria. His son, Asoka (260-219) soon became a follower of Buddha (in 254 B.C.) and under him spread Buddhism all over the country. Asoka built many monasteries (Viharas). Although he did not persecute the adherents of Brahmanism, since his time many dissatisfied Hindus, even such of the better class, left their homes and went to Sumadrah, Ja-vah, and Ma-yi-ya. In Suma-drah and Ja-vah were Hindu principalities formed, and from time to time sailed Hindus to the northern island, to Say-bu-ya (Cebu), Puhilu (Bohol), Li-tey (Leyte), Pa-lao-yu (Paragua), San-ga (Samar), Lima-siya (Negros), Ma-yi-ya, etc. Everywhere the newcomers drove the dark-skinned Dasyu and even descendants of the first immigrants to the hills. King Devanamprija-Tischja, of Ceylon (Lanka), 245-205, favored much Buddhism and Ceylon became a principal seat. Precious stones, gold, cotton goods, arms, sandals, earthenware, glass, silk, tea, spices, etc., were brought by Chinese and Hindus to the northern islands,—the present Philippines. Shortly after the death of Asoka, direct relations of Hindus with these islands were discontinued, and descendants of Suma-drah and Ja-vah. Hindus occasionally sent boats with newcomers to the Philippine shores. Claudius Ptolemaeus, who was an astronomer, mathematician and geographer, living about 295-265 B.C. at Alexandria, Egypt, called a group of islands to the north of Borneo "Insulae Manilae," which shows that time the letters "y" in Ma-yi-ya were already changed to "n" and "l," thus reading correctly "Ma-ni-la." Ptolemaeus, no doubt, had obtained his information from Arabs who in turn had obtained it from Hindus. The present Negritos are the descendants of the dark skinned Dasyu or Ayta (Aetas) mixed with other blood, and the present Igorrote tribes are descendants of the first Aryan immigrants mixed with blood of Suma-drah tribes whereas the civilized Filipinos—Tagalos, Pampangos, Ilocanos, Pangasinanes, Visayans, Bicolanos, etc., are more or less pure descendants of the succeeding Aryan immigrants mixed later or often with Chinese blood. The Aryans (Hindus) called the descendants of these immigrants Mo-Arya (Ma-Alaya, Malaya) as they called the peninsula to the south of Siam, where Aryans from Ceylon (Lanka) had founded colonies, Ma-Lanka (Malaka, Malakka.)

From the time of emperor Wuti (140-86) Chinese traders visited frequently Lao-shun and Ma-hi, and Chinese settlers formed in time the bulk of its progressive colonists. Buddha (this is the enlightened) had taught the belief in one God, and declared Love the source of all virtues. Buddhism had soon become corrupted and its founder was made one of the many Gods. The adherents of Buddhism accepted customs of other nations and the Hindu emigrants to Malakka, Suma-drah, Ja-vah, Ma-hi, etc., became the worst polytheists. Sanskrit (this is: beautifully regulated) ceased in the fourth century B.C. to be the popular language, and local dialects took its place, whilst Sanskrit continued at the schools and in the writings of Brahmanism and was made later on the court-language. For hundreds of years there happened nothing of importance with reference to the Philippine Islands.

Under Mahmud Ghasni (998-1030 A.D.) was Mohammedanism brought to India and spread gradually all over the country. From here Mohammedanism was propagated to the Malakka peninsula, Suma-drah, Ja-vah, Prony and the other islands of the Indian archipelago. From 1214-1236 were Mohammedan principalities founded at Atchen (Suma-drah), Dchokyakarta (Ja-vah), Menado (Ze-lebis), Pru-ny (Borneo), Dcho-hor (Malakka) and in Mag-Indana, So-luk (Jolo) and Ter-nate. The title of the rulers of these principalities was "Radchah", in some principalities later on changed to "Sultan". Tchao-chu-kua (died 1274) wrote in 1271 A.

D. under emperor Tutsong (1265-1275) about the Chinese trade, telling something of Chinese relations to the land of *Mo-yi and other islands; he had been in India and probably also in Korea. In 1382 came Mohammedan Ma-Arya (Malaya) to Ma-ind-uro (Mindoro) and Lu-yu-ban (Lubang). In Lu-yu-ban the Mohammedans built forts with high stone walls, and from here they went to Lo-zon where radchah (rajah) Avi-jir-koya of May-nila (1379-1385) fell in battle. May-nila was at that time the capital of a small principality towards the south of the present city of Manila, whilst another radchah (rajah) resided at Tun-duk (Tondo). The chief of the intruders, Ahmed, became radchah (rajah) of Maynila. His 14th successor, Soliman ben Mahmaud (1558-1571), was killed by the Spanish invaders under Martin de Goiti. In 1392 were Malakka, Suma-drah, Ja-vah, Pruney, Zelebis, Mag-Indana, So-luk, Ter-nate, Ambo-yna, Se-ram, Hal-ma-hey-ra (Dochilolo), Ty-mor, etc., entirely, but only small parts of Lo-zon, Ma-ind-uro, Say-bu, Puhilul, Li-tey, San-gar, Lima-siya, Palao-yu, and Pan-yay, converted to the faith of the Arabian prophet. The Chinese traders saw in the coming of Mohammedan Ma-Arya to the shores of the Philippine Islands a menace to their commerce and existence. The Chinese believed, when they saw that fanatic messengers were passing to and from, between the islands and the Malakka peninsula, that a plot was being formed to destroy them. Chinese relations to the people of the islands became now shorter. Ferdinand Magellan (1521) and Miguel de Legaspi

* Philippines

(1565) came at the right time to the Philippine Islands. If they had not come, Mohammedanism would have taken hold of all the islands, and the poor inhabitants would not so quickly have come to the light of progress, culture and prosperity.

Mohammedan rulers had highly elevated in Europe (Spain) to a great position among nations, but in the Asiatic archipelago had Mohammedanism done very little. It had kept conquered lands only in tyrannical submission.

Many words in the native Filipino dialects can be traced to a Sanskrit origin, and the system of writing which the Filipinos used at the coming of the Spaniards was of Hindu origin. (See page 10.) There were in 1565 about 50,000 Dasyu (Ayta—"negritos"), 100,000 of the first Arya immigrants, and 400,000 of the late Arya immigrants, with 20,000 Chinese living in the Philippine Islands which should better be called Ma-hi or Ma-Arya Islands.

The feudal systems early introduced in Japan made civil wars and uproars common events in that country so that no relations existed between these islands and Japan prior to the Spanish conquest. Aryan wanderers certainly had settled down in Formosa and in the southern Japanese Islands where their traces can be found to-day. Climatic influences, exposure to the tropical sun, customs, and the living together with peoples of different origins formed the complexion of the different Filipino tribes, but Negritos were the first inhabitants of this archipelago whilst the rest of the Filipinos are of Arya or Indogermanic origin, and will in time take a very important part in the enlightenment of the Orient and in the progress and civilization of the world.*

Dr. Feodorovitch's narrations are indeed praiseworthy. They attest his high intellect and the variety of his activities. No doubt every Filipino would appreciate the keen interest this presbyter had taken in tracing back the origin of the Filipino race.

Other writers say:

As to Early Inhabitants, that long before the discovery of the islands by Ferdinand Magellan in March, 1521, the archipelago was inhabited by three distinct classes of peoples—the Negritos or Aetas, the Early Malays or "uncivilized tribes," and the Cultured Malays.

The Aetas.—The aetas are the aborigines of these islands. This means that, so far as is known, they have always lived here. But they are not all alike, there are at least two groups of them.

A Negrito Woman

One group the Spaniards called Negritos, because they were short and black. The men are only about one hundred and forty-five centimeters tall; the women are still shorter. They have dark skins, flat noses, and black hair, which is short and kinky. The people who live in the Zambales Mountains belong to this group.

Indonesians, who had already come to these islands from the south. Other Malays, who had spread into southwestern Asia, mixed with the Indonesians here. This is mainly why the later groups of people who came into the Philippines from the southwest were not pure Indonesians.

Early Malays

The Malays Most of the people who are found today in the valleys and plains of the Philippines are Malays. They were here the south from the Malay Peninsula and the Malay Archipelago. They came in waves, and spread over the Islands. Some of them that came first were rather primitive.

Most of the present Malays are the present day Indonesians. They are not so much like the Indonesians. They build houses of earth, and they cultivate the land. They raise water, rice, sugar, coconuts, and many vegetables. But they still have some barbarous customs. They are pagans. Very few of them have become Christians or Mohammedans. The natives of Mindanao and the Tagalogs of Palawan are of this type.

The Malays who came later were semi-civilized. The Haguas and Iguats of northern Luzon, for example, understand agriculture. They have converted their mountains into terraces for growing rice. Water is carried to these terraces by ditches and flumes, so that two crops are often produced in a year. The terraces of the Haguas are said to be the largest in the world.

After the primitive and the semi-civilized Malays, there came others who were still more civilized. These newcomers had better weapons. They put on more clothes. They had markets and weights and measures. They were intelligent and industrious. They were civilized.

The civilized Malays are the ancestors of many of the present Christian and Mohammedan Filipinos. They were neither Christians nor Mohammedans when they first came. They were pagans. But later, Mohammedan priests came from the south and preached to them the religion of Mohammed. Still later Spanish priests from Europe preached to them the religion of Christ. When the Spaniards first found these cultured Malaysians, they were few in number. Now they are many. They live along the coasts and in many of the river valleys and plains throughout the islands.

Just when the Malays arrived in the Philippines is not known. We only know that as early as the fifth century of the Christian Era, they were found by the Hindus on the island of Java. This was about a thousand years before the Portuguese navigator Vasco de Gama reached India. From Java the Malays probably went to Borneo, and from Borneo to the Philippines. It took them many years to reach these shores. Some of the civilized Malays probably came as late as the fourteenth or fifteenth century, but most of them were here at a much earlier period than that.

The civilized Malays traveled in a large and swift kind of native boat, called barangay.^{*} In each boat was a datu, or chief, with his followers. Some of the Malays arrived at Luzon, by way of Borneo, Balabac, Palawan, the Calamian Islands, and Mindoro. Others reached Mindanao, by way of the Sulu Archipelago and Basilan. From Mindanao they came to the Visayan Islands. In this manner the Malay wanderers found a new home.

Hindu Culture.—More than two thousand years ago India had a wonderful civilization. At that time the Hindus had many great cities. They built large stone houses and palaces. They had systems of writing.^{} They developed poetry and philosophy. They had two great religions — Brahmanism and Buddhism. About fifteen hundred years ago this civilization of the Hindus spread over Burma, Siam, and the island of Java. At that time Java was inhabited by Malays. The neighboring islands of Malaysia were also occupied by the same kind of people. In this way the Malaysians were greatly affected by Hindu civilization. The Malays that came to the Philippines at a later period gave signs of this Hindu influence. They were, therefore, better civilized than those who had come earlier.

The contact between the groups.—When the Malays came to the Philippines, they found Aetas and Indonesians already here. Some places the newcomers occupied peacefully. In other places they met opposition; but they had more knowledge of warfare than the first inhabitants, and better weapons, and were often able to make slaves or servants of the conquered peoples.

The civilized Malays who came last also conquered many of the primitive Malays who lived in the plains. These primitive Malays became serfs and worked the lands of their conquerors. Only those peoples who lived in the mountains and forests were not conquered by the cultured Malays.

Later the civilized Malays in the south were converted to Mohammedanism; those in the north became Christians. The chiefs, the privileged classes, the serfs, and the slaves were nearly all converted and civilized. Only those who lived in the mountains and forests remained pagans.

The civilized Filipinos have become so mixed and blended that to-day the descendants of the primitive Malays cannot be distinguished from those of the cultured Malays. Those whose ancestors were Europeans, Indonesians, or Aetas can sometimes be told by their different features. Men who make a study of races believe that in the future there will be a common Malay type, which may be called the Filipino race. (2)

(2) From the Brief History of the Philippines, pp. 1-9, by Prof. Leandro H. Fernández, of the University of the Philippines.

The "Filipinos," in the restricted sense of the word, were the cultured Malayan tribes, who, in the course of their migration from the Malay Peninsula, landed on these islands, bringing with them their household belongings, their effects, the customs and the laws of their country and the legends of their ancestors, which ultimately formed the seed of the social growth of the present-day Filipinos.

Social and Economic Conditions.—The Spaniards found the Filipinos then possessing considerable wealth. They had industries, government, religion and culture of their own. Their chief occupations were agriculture, fishing, weaving and some manufacturing. Their trade was done generally in the form of a barter or exchange of goods. At that time there was no money in existence, but they used beads, gold dusts and other metals in lieu thereof. Many of them were expert sea-farers, using paraos in their voyages from one island to another. They divided the year into twelve lunar months, and reckoned the time by the position of the sun and shadow, by the cocks' crow, and by the harvest season. They also had their own system of weights and measures, and a peculiar phonetic alphabet.*

Religion.—The Filipinos of olden time believed in a Supreme Being called "Bathala" (in Tagalog) or "Cabunian" (in Visayan), meaning God. The tradition of the "bambu," believed to be the origin of man; that of the "baliti", a powerful fetich, and that of the "tic-balang", a monstrous being, are but instances of their many superstitions. Like the Ancient Romans and Persians, the Filipinos believed in the existence of evil and good spirits; thus, infusing into their minds an element of fear which made them the easy objects of conversion to Christianity by the early Spanish missionaries.

Government.—Their government, especially in the matters of legislation and judicial procedure, resembled that of the Ancient Romans, except that "there were no kings or lords throughout in the manner of any kingdom or republic; but in every island, and in each province, many chiefs were recognized by the natives themselves." Such chiefs were called "Datus" or "Rajahs", and they ruled over their own "barangays," or groups of people.

Classes of Society.—There were three conditions of persons among the ancient Filipinos, viz: the nobles or headmen; the freemen; and the slaves. The nobles were the datus or rajahs; the freemen (called "Maharlika," in Tagalog, or "Timawa," in Visayan) were the descendants and relatives of the headmen. They usually did not pay tribute to the chiefs, and could own their land and slaves, but had to accompany the headman in war at their own expense. The slaves were either absolute or semi-slaves, who were made such by reason of birth, indebtedness, captivity in war, or as a punishment for offenses.

Ancient Laws.—The natives' laws throughout the islands were based upon traditions and customs of the ancestors, promulgated by the chief after consultation with the elders, and same were strictly observed and respected until the first years of Spanish rule. Among the laws then in force were those governing the respect of parents and elders, adoption, marriage, husband and wife, property, contracts and partnerships, which it is said could be favorably compared with those of the ancient Greeks and Romans. Partnerships were formed and the respective obligations of the partners enforced. Penalties were severe. According to the Penal Code of Calantiao, written in 1433, the penalties were death, incineration, mutilation of the fingers, slavery, flagellation, being bitten by ants, swimming for a fixed time, and other discretionary penalties. Notwithstanding the seemingly cruel and illogical penalties, "the scale of penalties and the manner of their execution stand out in bold relief not only as against Greek and Roman laws but also as against prior and contemporaneous Spanish laws, and the proceedings adopted to determine the author of the theft, in case he was not known, compare favorably with the tortures to which the suspected persons were subjected under the Fuero Juzgo and The Partidas."

The usual procedure is described by Father Colin as follows:

"For the determination of their suits, both civil and criminal, there was no other judge than the said chief, with the assistance of some old men of the same barangay. With them the suit was determined in the following form: They had the opponents summoned, and endeavored to have them come to an agreement. But if they would not agree, then an oath was administered to each one, to the effect that he would abide by what was determined summarily. If the proof was equal (on both sides), the difference was split; but if it were unequal, the sentence was given in favor of the one who conquered. If the one who was defeated resisted, the judge made himself a party to the cause, and all of them at once attacked with the armed band the one defeated, and execution to the required amount was levied upon him. The judge received the larger share of this amount, and some was paid to the witnesses of the one who won the suit, while the poor litigant received the least.

"In criminal causes there were wide distinctions made because of the rank of the murderer and the slain; and if the latter were a chief, all his kinsmen went to hunt for the murderer and his relatives, and both sides engaged in war, until mediators undertook to declare the quantity of gold due for that murder, in accordance with the appraisals which the old men said ought to be paid according to their custom. One half of that amount belonged to the chiefs and the other half was divided among the wife, children, and relatives of the deceased."

Old Filipino Oath.—The oath taken by the principales of Manila and Tondo in promising obedience to the Catholic Kings of Spain in 1571, was as follows: "May the sun divide us in halves, the alligators bite us, the women refuse us their favors and refuse to love us well, if we do not keep our word."

The Blood Compact.—The oath of friendship or reconciliation between two enemies was solemnized by blood compact, that is, taking from each party a few drops of blood which they both drink together with "tuba" (palm wine). (3)

In resumé, the early Filipinos were by no means savages; they had a culture of their own; they had shown high intelligence and moral virtues. They recognized woman's place in society. Husband and wife toiled for a common benefit. When the curtain of the history of the Philippines was first raised by the advent of the Spaniards in the 16th century, the Filipinos were already in a degree of civilization. (4)

A BLOOD COMPACT

CHAPTER II

THE SPANISH REGIME IN THE ISLANDS

Discovery of the Philippines.—As a result of the search for the Spice Islands, Hernando Magalhaes (Ferdinand Magellan), a Portuguese navigator in the employ of Spain, who sailed from Guadalquivir on August 19, 1519, with the ships "S. Antonio," "Concepción," "Santiago," "Victoria" and "La Trinidad" under his command, discovered these Islands on March 16, 1521.

FERDINAND MAGELLAN

Prof. Leandro H. Fernandez, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, University of the Philippines, in his Brief History of the Philippines, says as follows:

Ferdinand Magellan.—About twelve years before Columbus discovered America (1492) a boy named Ferdinand Magellan was born in the little town of Sabrosa, in Portugal. The father belonged to the fourth order of Portuguese nobility, and the boy was brought up as a page in the court of the queen. There he learned astronomy and navigation. He went to India as a soldier. While in the East, he was sent on various expeditions to Sofala, Malakka, Java, and the Molukkas. He was a good soldier, and was made captain.

Magellan's change of allegiance.—Ferdinand Magellan was a brave man. He fought in many battles for his king and exposed himself to danger again and again to prove his loyalty. But he had many enemies, who tried to discredit him with the King. They were successful at last and Magellan lost the royal favor. Consequently, he left Portugal and went to Spain, where he became a subject of Charles V. Early in his service to his new king he asked for a commission to try to find another route to the Indies by sailing west.

The Molukkas, or Spice Islands.—In 1512, fourteen years after their discovery of the new route to India, the Portuguese discovered the Molukkas, or Spice Islands, the much-desired land of pepper, cinnamon, and cloves. But at this time nobody knew the exact location of these islands. The Portuguese navigators had found them by sailing east. Magellan believed that he could reach them by sailing west. He thought these islands were so far to the east that they were really on the western side of the Line of Demarcation, and belonged to Spain; if this was so, the western route ought to be shorter than the eastern route.

THE VOYAGE OF MAGELLAN

Magellan in search of the western route.—With the help of his friends Magellan succeeded in laying his plan before the king. He proposed to sail westward. When he reached America, he would go south until he found a passage to the west. This passage would lead him to the Indies.

At first the king would not listen to him. But several influential men supported the daring explorer. They believed that he was right. Among these men were the bishop of Burgos, the astronomer Ruy Faleiro, and the wealthy merchant Christopher de Haro. After much persuasion the king accepted the proposition. He agreed to furnish the necessary money, ships, and men. Ferdinand Magellan and Ruy Faleiro were made joint captains of the expedition, and were to share in the profits. They were also to receive, for themselves and their heirs, the government of any lands they might discover, with the title of "adelantados."

The fleet.—Everything was made ready for the voyage, and the order was issued at Barcelona for the departure of the expedition. Faleiro had finally decided not to go, and Magellan was in sole command. He had five ships, the Trinidad, the Victoria, the San Antonio, the Concepción, and the Santiago. His flagship was the Trinidad. He had about two hundred and seventy men. Thirty-seven of these were Portuguese; about thirty were Italians; nineteen were Frenchmen; most of the others were Spaniards.

The trip to Port Saint Julian.—With his five vessels Magellan sailed from the city of Seville on the tenth of August, 1519. His course lay by the Canary Islands, where he stopped for a few days. On the twenty-ninth of November he reached South America, and turned southward. In February, 1520, he came to the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, which he entered and explored. Some of his men thought that at last a westward passage was found, but they were disappointed. The crew were getting disheartened, but Magellan's courage never faltered; he bravely kept on sailing to the south. In March, 1520, he arrived at Port Saint Julian.

The mutiny.—At Port Saint Julian he had serious trouble with his crew. There were several men who were jealous of him and tried to break up the expedition. These men told the sailors that if they went farther to the south, they would soon have no food; that it was impossible to go far south on account of the cold climate; and that there was no hope of finding a passage to the west. Many of the sailors believed this and mutinied.

But Magellan was not afraid. He told his men that he was going to continue the voyage to the south till he reached the end of South America or found a strait. He suppressed the mutiny and ordered some of the leaders to be executed.

The discovery of the strait.—Magellan was so long delayed by the difficulties with his crew that he did not leave Port Saint Julian until late in August, 1520. Near Cape Santa Cruz the ship Santiago was wrecked. This made the sailors more discouraged than ever, but Magellan continued sailing southward. At last, late in October, he found the opening he was looking for. A cape at the entrance he called the Cape of the Eleven Thousand Virgins. On entering the passage he found it to be long and wide. To the south, at his left, lay an island inhabited by savages. He called the island Tierra del Fuego, because of the many lights on the shore. It took him more than a month to make his way through the strait. He called the Strait "All the Saints," but it now bears his own name, in honor of his discovery. He completed his passage through the strait on the twenty-eighth day of November. He and his men had suffered much; the ship San Antonio had deserted.

The Pacific.—Magellan now began the long voyage across the ocean. His voyage was so smooth and peaceful that he called the body of water the "Pacific."

We must not think Magellan knew that the Pacific was a great ocean. He supposed that by sailing to the north he should soon come to the Indies. So he turned his ships first in that direction and then toward the west. He expected every day to find the Spice Islands; but he sailed on and on without arriving at the desired land. The scurvy broke out among his crew, because of bad and insufficient food. They suffered terribly from this disease, and twenty of them died. But in spite of these hardships the brave commander kept his face westward. For more than three months he saw no land except too small uninhabited islands, which had neither food nor fresh water. In his disappointment he called these islands the "Unfortunates."

The Ladrones.—Early in March, 1521, he touched at several small inhabited islands.

Magellan's route on his voyage of discovery.

The natives came out in their little boats, and Magellan was able to obtain supplies of food and water. There were so many small sailboats in the harbor that Magellan called the islands the Isles of Sails; but the natives stole one of his boats, and he changed the name to the "Ladrones," or Islands of Thieves.

MAGELLAN IN THE PHILIPPINES

The discovery of the Philippines.—From the Ladrones Magellan continued to sail west. He was still looking for the Spice Islands. On the sixteenth of March, 1521, he sighted an island on which there were lofty mountains. He afterwards learned that this island was called Zamal; it is now called Samar. On the following day Magellan landed his worn-out sailors on an island named Humunu or Homonhon, and had two huts built for the sick. This island was not inhabited; but some natives came from the island of Suluan, in a native prau. These were the first Filipinos seen by the Spaniards.

Naming the new islands.—After about eight days Magellan decided to leave the place because of the difficulty in getting food. He sailed to Limasawa, a small island south of Leyte. Here he found a prosperous Filipino village. The Filipinos were cultivating rice and breadfruit. They had coconuts, oranges, and bananas, as well as citron and ginger.

On this island Magellan found Rajah Calambu and Rajah Siagu, two Filipino chiefs from Mindanao. These Filipino chieftains were friendly to the Spaniards; they feasted them and exchanged presents.

Before leaving Limasawa, Magellan had Mass celebrated, the first ever celebrated in the Philippines. He erected a cross, and took possession of the Islands for the king of Spain. He called the Islands the Archipelago of Saint Lazarus, because it was on the day of this saint that he reached these shores.

Magellan in Cebu.—From the inhabitants of Limasawa, Magellan learned of the large and rich town of Cebu. Being in great need of food, and unable to obtain a sufficient amount in Limasawa, he was anxious to go to Cebu.

With one of the chiefs as guide, and accompanied by several Filipinos, he set sail for Cebu. This town, according to the reports of some of Magellan's men, was strongly defended. The king was Rajah Humabon, a powerful chief who had under him as many as two thousand warriors with lances. In Cebu alone he had eight subordinate chiefs. Several of the neighboring islands belonged to him.

The Cebuans seemed to be familiar with the neighboring countries. They knew of China and of the Molukkas. This would indicate that they had commercial dealings with these countries. Several days before Magellan came to Cebu, a junk from Siam had anchored in the port. A Moro from the junk remained at Cebu to trade in gold and slaves. Brass gongs made in China were found in the town. There were other signs, too, that extensive commercial relations existed.

Rajah Humabon tried to make Magellan pay tribute. He said that it was a custom followed by all vessels entering his port. Magellan refused to pay the tribute, declaring that the king of Spain was the greatest king of all. After a time, Humabon became friendly with the newcomers and exchanged presents with them. The Spaniards were allowed to land and visit the town. Trading then began. Spanish bells, mirrors, glass beads, red caps, and other trifles were exchanged for the native rice, swine, goats, and fowls.

We should remember that the king of Spain desired Magellan to spread Christianity. Magellan, soon after landing at Cebu, had Mass celebrated. This pleased the people, and after a while they desired to be taught the newcomers' religion. Soon more than eight hundred Cebuans, including Rajah Humabon, were baptized. The queen was also baptized and received an image of the Child Jesus.

The death of Magellan.—If you look at the map of the Philippines, you will observe that close to Cebu there is a small island called Mactan.

Monument to Magellan where he was killed on Mactan Island

At the time that Magellan was in Cebu, the island of Mactan must have been a prosperous community. It had several chieftains, some of whom refused to recognize the king of Spain. Magellan burned one of the villages on this island because its inhabitants refused to obey him.

One day a friendly chief of Mactan sent one of his sons to Magellan to ask for help. This chief was called Zula. He was an enemy of Lapulapu, the chief of another village on the same island. Magellan was glad to lend aid to his new ally. With three boatloads of Spaniards and twenty boatloads of Cebuans, he started for Mactan. At dawn on the following day he led out his forces against Lapulapu. But Lapulapu's men proved to be brave and able fighters. They routed the Cebuans and drove the Spaniards back to their boats.

Magellan himself was killed. A monument marks the spot where this boldest adventurer and most daring navigator of his day fell. (See page 16.)

The vengeance of a slave.—After the death of Magellan, the remaining crew chose Duarte Barboza and Juan Serrano as commanders. Barboza began to treat Magellan's slave harshly. This slave was a Malay who acted as interpreter between the Spaniards and the Filipinos. To revenge himself on Barboza, he went to the king of Cebu and advised him to seize the ships of the Spaniards. A plot was laid. At a banquet twenty-three of the Spaniards, including Barboza, were killed. Juan Serrano was captured.

MAGELLAN'S SHIP THE FIRST TO SAIL AROUND THE WORLD

The Spice Islands at last.—Let us not forget that Magellan was looking for the Spice Islands, and not for the Philippines. He was in search of a western route to the Indies. On his way he discovered the Philippines accidentally. After his death the one hundred and fifteen men left of the expedition prepared to resume the voyage. They burned the Concepcion and sailed in the two remaining ships, the Trinidad and the Victoria. They passed along the western coast of Mindanao, Cagayan, Sulu, and Palawan. Still seeking for the famous Spice Islands, they were guided to the city of Brunei, on the large island of Borneo. At that time Brunei was a prosperous Mohammedan town containing more than twenty-five thousand families. The house of the king was made of stone. There was a brick fort, defended by about sixty brass and iron cannon. The town had an extensive trade in ginger, gums, camphor, and Sulu pearls.

From Borneo the two vessels sailed eastward and passed by the Sulu Archipelago. They touched again at Mindanao. Here they captured some natives, who guided them to the Spice Islands. At last, on the eight of November, 1521, they arrived at Tidore. Once in the Molukkas, they began to exchange presents and to trade with the natives. A rich cargo of spices, sandalwood, and gold was obtained. In Tidore a trading station was established. The native chiefs acknowledged the king of Spain and promised to obey him.

The return trip.—It was decided to send the Trinidad back to Spain by way of Mexico. The Victoria was to return by way of the Cape of Good Hope. The Trinidad failed to accomplish the return trip; after great hardships she fell into Portuguese hands. The Victoria, under the command of Juan Sebastian de Elcano, crossed the Indian Ocean and rounded the Cape of Good Hope. At the Cape

SEBASTIAN DE ELCANO

Verde Islands the ship barely escaped seizure by the Portuguese. De Elcano, however, was too clever to be caught. On the sixth of September, 1522, he reached Sanlucar de Barrameda. The circumnavigation of the earth had been accomplished. The good ship Victoria had circled the globe. Of the five vessels that had left Seville more than three years before, one only, the Victoria, returned. Of the two hundred and seventy men who had set out on the expedition, only eighteen saw their native land again."

Conquest.—Mageilan reached the Philippines March 16, 1521, and landed on the Island of Malhon (Homonhon), south of Samar. Later, he and his men proceeded to Cebu, where he made a blood compact of peace * with Rajah Humabon, but in a fight against the Chief of Mactan Island, Magellan was killed. Many of his men were massacred in Cebu, and the rest returned to Spain by the ship "Victoria."

King Philip II, of Spain, induced with repugnant motives of an unselfish desire for the increase of the Holy Catholic faith, a selfish desire for commerce, and ambition for political aggrandizement, ordered the vice-roy of Mexico to send an expedition in 1559 to explore the Philippines. Miguel Lopez de Legaspi, a Spaniard, then chief clerk of the city of Mexico (born 1502) was sent with an Augustinian monk of said city, Andres de Urdaneta (born 1498), who was appointed chief navigator and spiritual head of Legaspi's expedition. They sailed from Mexico November 21, 1564, and arrived at Cebu February 13, 1565. In Cebu, Legaspi made friends with the native chief, Tupas, and other Cebuans, who were easily converted and baptized.

In 1568, the Portuguese attacked Legaspi at Cebu, but they failed. Two years after, Martin de Goiti and Juan de Salcedo arrived in Manila and conquered most of Luzon. They defeated Li-Ma-Hong,  a Chinese pirate, who attacked Manila in 1574. Rajah Soliman was then chief of old Manila, and Rajah Lacandola, his uncle, was chief of the village of Tondo, with whom the Spaniards made a blood-compact. In June of that same year, Legaspi organized the city of Manila, and when the rest of the Islands acknowledged the force of the Spanish arms, the sovereignty of Spain was proclaimed.

The Encomienda System.—Seeing many of the Spanish soldiers were poor, starving and stealing from the natives, Legaspi thought it advisable to grant each of them a tract of land, called an "encomienda," with the people living on it. The Spaniard, to whom an encomienda was granted, was known as "encomendero." The encomenderos had the duties to protect the people of their respective encomiendas, act as their governors and judges, and furnish them religious instructions, in return for which they were to collect the tribute for themselves, for the government and for the church. The tribute was an annual tax paid by every Filipino male between sixteen and sixty years of age. But the excessive tribute the encomenderos collected from women, children and slaves, caused the first revolts in Ilocos Norte in 1589. In 1591 there were about 267 encomiendas, of which 31 belonged to the king, the rest to officers and favorites of the king, or the governors.

CHINESE AND MORO PIRATES

Soon after the conquest of the Philippines by the Spaniards, Chinese and Moro piracies held sway, the latter extending down almost to the end of the eighteenth century. In the year 1574 Limahong, a notorious Chinese pirate who had been infesting the China Sea, came to the Philippines and demanded the surrender of the Islands from the Spaniards. Upon refusal of the Spaniards, he attacked Manila with a force of four thousand Chinese soldiers and sailors. The Spaniards made a brave stand. But he could have easily captured the city with his formidable army had it not been for the timely arrival of Salcedo who came hurriedly to Manila from Vigan to reinforce the few Spaniards who were defending the capital. The Chinese pirate was unable to subdue the city, and he finally withdrew his army by sailing northward along the Zambales coast and landing in Lingayen, Pangasinan, where he made his camp. Salcedo, with a force of 250 Spanish soldiers and 1,500 Filipinos, followed him there and in the battle that ensued the pirate was completely defeated. Hurriedly leaving the place with the remnants of his soldiers, he set sail out to the China Sea and has never been heard of since then.

Moro piracies gave the Spanish government the greatest trouble and worry. They lasted almost throughout the whole of the Spanish domination. A whole chapter may be devoted to describing these piracies, so much so that some historians called them by the dignified name of "Wars with the Moros." Embarking in their swift vinias,* the Moro pirates would swoop down on a peaceful village at the coast of any of the islands from Mindanao to Luzon, surprise the inhabitants thereof, pillage and plunder the village, burn the houses and carry away many of the terrified inhabitants to sell them into slavery in Jolo or Borneo. The ruins of watchtowers in many of the coast towns and villages in the Philippines testify silently but eloquently to those eventful days when Moro piracies were rampant. These towers were erected for the purpose of watching the approach of Moro vinias and give the alarm to the inhabitants of the village when they were sighted at the horizon.

The Spanish Governors.—The Governor-General was the personal representative of the Spanish Crown in the Philippine Islands. He possessed all the powers of the King, save where it was otherwise specially provided. His authority was supreme and complete—almost absolute—practically unlimited. The functions of the Governor-General included, as Captain-General, the chief command of the military and naval forces of the Islands, and had complete control over all executive matters. He had judicial powers too. For a long period of time the Governor-General was President of the Audiencia (Supreme Court). But an appeal could be taken from the decision of the Governor-General to the Council of Administration or to the supreme Spanish government, according to the nature of the case. (5) at Cebu in 1565 up to 1899, when Diego de los Ríos left the Philippines, there were ninety-one Spanish Governors-General of the Islands. The following is a list of all of them, giving some principal events during their administrations in the Philippines: (6)

MIGUEL LOPEZ DE LEGASPI (1564-1574)
GUIDO DE LAVEZARES, governor from 1574 to 1575.

FRANCISCO SANDE, governor from 1575 to 1580. Manila was rebuilt and the first horses brought by him to the Philippines from China.

GONZALO RONQUILLO DE PESALOSA, governor from 1580 to 1583, brought 600 Spanish soldiers to the islands, organized the towns of Laloe and Hoilo, and sent an expedition to Borneo and replaced Sultan Sirela on the throne; and drove the Japanese pirates from Cagayan Valley (N. Luzon).

DIEGO RONQUILLO (1583-1584).

SANTIAGO DE VERA, acting governor from 1584 to 1590 and chief justice of the first Audiencia (Supreme Court), had the first stone house built in Manila.

GOMEZ PEREZ DASMARINAS, governor from 1590 to 1593, had a conflict with the friars. He constructed the Manila Walls and Fort Santiago; conquered the Negritos of Zambales; built 200 ships for the purpose of sending an expedition to Moluccas Islands; etc. He was killed by his Chinese boatmen at the island of Marican (off Batangas) in 1593.

PEDRO DE ROXAS (1593).

LUIS PEREZ DASMARINAS (son of Gomez Perez Dasmariñas), governor from 1593 to 1595. During same period, Antonio de Morga, lieutenant governor and judge of the Supreme Court, wrote the first full history of the Philippines in Spanish times, entitled "Los Sucesos de las Islas Filipinas", and defeated the Dutch in the naval battle near the island of Corregidor in 1600.

ANTONIO DE MORGA (1595-1596).

FRANCISCO TELLO DE GUZMAN, governor from 1596 to 1602. College of San Jose was founded by the Jesuits, and the Archbishopric of Manila was created.

PEDRO BRAVO DE ACUNA, governor from 1602 to 1606. During this period many excitements took place. The Chinese revolted in Manila and were defeated; about 20,000 of them were killed by the Spaniards. In 1606 Acuña made a great expedition against the Moluccas, capturing Tidor and Ternate.

CRISTOBAL TELLEZ DE ALMANZA (1606-1608).

RODRIGO VIVERO (1608-1609).

JUAN DE SILVA, governor from 1609 to 1616. There was again a naval battle with the Dutch near Mariveles in 1610. The Dutch were defeated and goods to the value of half a million pesos captured. A great fleet was built. Silva sailed to attack the Dutch, in 1616, with five thousand Spaniards and Filipinos, and died at Malacca.

A. VIVERO (1616-1618).

ALONSO FAJARDO DE TENA, governor from 1618 to 1624. A revolt arose in Bohol in 1621, caused by heavy taxes and forced labor. The rebels were defeated, but renewed the revolt in Leyte under Bancao, chief of Limasawa, who was killed. Fajardo lessened the labor tax.

FERNANDO DE SILVA (1625-1626).

JUAN NIÑO DE TABORA, governor from 1626 to 1632, built many ships, also the first stone bridge across the Pasig River in 1631. He brought the "Virgin of Antipolo" to the Philippines.

JUAN CEREZO (1633-1635).

SEBASTIAN HURTADO DE CORCUERA, governor from 1635 to 1644. The massacre of 1603 greatly reduced the number of Chinese in Manila, but the immigration continued in such large numbers that by 1639 there were more than 20,000 Chinese in the Islands. In this year another Chinese rebellion broke out in Manila and the neighboring provinces. The chief cause of this revolt was an order of Governor Hurtado de Corcuera compelling the Chinese to go to work in Calamba. An additional cause was the harassing of the Chinese for delinquency in paying their licenses and tribute.

(*) Jernegan, Philippine History.

About 20,000 Chinese were killed and seven million pesos' worth of property destroyed. (Fernandez, Brief History of the Philippines, pp. 97-98.)

DIEGO DE FAJARDO, governor from 1644 to 1653. Forced labor in shipyards caused the revolt of Sumoroy in Samar; other revolts were caused by forced labor and taxes in Luzon and Mindanao. In 1645 occurred a great earthquake, killing about 600 people and destroying many buildings in Manila.

SABINIANO MANRIQUE DE LARA, governor from 1653 to 1663. In 1660, about 1,000 natives of Pampanga revolted because of the hardships of forced labor in cutting timber for ships. De Lara, quietened them by diplomacy. About 800 natives of Ilocos Sur were killed by Manzano with the rebels. There was frequently a conflict of authority, which resulted in quarrels between the governors and the church authorities.

A Spanish Galleon, used in the trade between Manila and Acapulco DIEGO DE SALCEDO, governor from 1663 to 1668. He tried to keep the galleon trade for himself, and was seized by conspirators and sent to Mexico, dying on the ocean.

MANUEL DE LEON (1669-1677).

JUAN DE VARGAS HURTADO (1678-1684).

GABRIEL CURUZELAEGUI Y ARRIOLA (1684-1689).

ALFONSO FUERTES (1689-1690).

FAUSTO CRUZAT Y GONGORA, governor from 1690 to 1701. During his administration many good laws were adopted, among which were (1) The equalization of the taxes of the rich and the poor; (2) the prohibition of provincial governors to engage in trade; (3) farmers were ordered to cultivate the land; (4) reforms were made in the prisons; (5) the Spaniards were forbidden to live in the pueblos; and (6) the Christian natives were forbidden to speak or trade with the people of the wild tribes; etc.

CARLOS DE LA TORRE, first democratic governor-general from 1869 to 1871. The leaders of La Torre's party said: "We hope that under his rule individual rights may be proclaimed in the Philippines." After La Torre's rule, the succeeding governors became harsh.

RAFAEL DE IZQUIERDO, governor from 1871 to 1873, was a proud, harsh man who did not believe in political liberty. During his government, the Cavite insurrection took place, the conspirators planned to mutiny the military garrisons of Cavite and Manila on the evening of January 20, 1872, with the object of freeing the Philippines from the tyrannical rule of Spanish Governors in the Islands. The plan was not a success, as a result of which the three Filipino priests—Burgos, Gomez, and Zamora—were accused, and although they pleaded to be

RAMON BLANCO Y ERENAS, governor from 1893 to 1896, was a kind and just man. He believed in liberal ideas, and for this reason was disliked by those in the islands who approved of the old way of subjugating the Filipinos. Blanco desired to attach the Filipinos to Spain by ties of affection and was opposed to any violence. When Father Gil denounced the existence of the Katipunan to Governor Blanco, the latter appeared to be the only cool-headed man in Manila. A period of terror reigned in the city. Every Filipino, whether connected with the association (Katipunan) or not, feared, for his safety. But the last week of August, 1896, as many as three hundred men were under arrest. During the month of September many more were arrested, and thirty-seven were executed. Blanco, who was then governor, granted Dr. Jose Rizal's request to go to Cuba as a surgeon in the Spanish hospitals and permitted him to return to Manila from his exile at Dapitan (Mindanao) so as to enable him to take a steamer to Cuba by way of Spain. But unfortunately Rizal reached Manila about two weeks before Father Gil made his discovery of the Katipunan. Governor Blanco was convinced that Rizal had nothing to do with it, and after about a month's delay allowed him to start on his trip. Rizal's enemies, however, used every means within their power to implicate him in the uprising. They sent a message by cable to Spain. As a result of this intriguing, Rizal was imprisoned on his arrival in Spain and was soon sent back to Manila. He was tried by a court-martial for sedition and rebellion.

CAMILO G. DE POLAVIEJA, governor from 1896 to 1897, assumed office on December 13, 1896. Dr. Rizal was condemned to death, after a mock trial by the court-martial, and early in the morning of the thirtieth of December, 1896, he was taken to the Luneta (Bagumbayan) and shot to death. Early in 1897 Governor-General Polavieja, at the head of about 28,000, took the field against the insurrectionists. He tried to put down the rebellion in Bulacan, Morong, and Cavite. He fought many pitched battles. In Cavite his army was aided by the Spanish squadron. Here, after about three months of hard campaigning, he defeated with heavy loss the forces of General Aguinaldo, who had once driven the Spaniards out of the province.

FERNANDO PRIMO DE RIVERA, governor from 1897 to 1898. In April, 1897, Primo de Rivera, who had been governor-general of the Philippines from 1880 to 1883, returned to rule the Islands for the second time. Spain was beginning to feel the drain of war, for a widespread rebellion had broken out in Cuba a year before the uprising in the Philippines. The new governor tried to make peace. He offered pardon to all who would lay down their arms. Although many Filipinos took advantage of this amnesty, many more chose to continue the struggle. Rivera became convinced that drastic measures were necessary. He commanded in person the Spanish forces operating in Cavite. He attacked the towns of Indang, Naic, Alfonso, Maragondon, Mendez-Núñez, and others. At the same time he sent General Monet to Zambales and Pangasinan, and had General Núñez conduct the campaign in Nueva Ecija. In these campaigns many brave men, both Spaniards and Filipinos, gave up their lives. Finally Aguinaldo and his staff withdrew to the mountains of Bulacan. It was in these mountains called Biac-na-Bato at Bulacan where Aguinaldo issued a proclamation declaring that the Filipinos desired to be free and independent. This proclamation was translated into English, French, and Visayan. It is said that the Filipinos had long been deprived of their freedom, but that now they were going to show the world their ability to form an independent government of their own. Through the mediation of Pedro A. Paterno,* a distinguished Filipino of Manila who had been educated in Spain, who offered his services to Governor-General Primo de Rivera, the Pact of Biac-na-Bato was signed on the fourteenth of December, 1897. On the sixteenth of said month, Aguinaldo proclaimed the restoration of peace, and a week later he and forty other insurgent leaders left for Calumpit, and from there went to Dagupan. They reached the port of Sual early in the morning of the twenty-seventh of Deember, and on the same day embarked for Hongkong. Other Filipino generals remained in the Islands to see that the Filipino part of the agreement was fulfilled.

BASILIO AUGUSTIN, was appointed governor-general in 1898.

FERMIN JAUDENES, being the last Spanish governor-general to rule the islands in a very short time during the war with the United States in 1898.

Provincial Administration.—The Islands were divided for administrative purposes into provinces and districts. Alcaldes Mayores (successors to the "encomenderos"), with executive and judicial powers, were appointed. They were, in other words, the provincial governors. They received small salaries but were privileged to engage in trade, making the office very remunerative for them. When the executive and judicial functions were separated in June, 1886, eighteen civil governors were appointed to the principal provinces. Civil governors of the first class received a salary of P4,500 per annum; those of the second class, P4,000; and those of the third P3,500, with liberal allowances. In 1893 the establishment of a provincial council in the capital of the province was authorized. There were nine members, four of which were elected by the capitanes of the municipal councils for a term of six years, while the rest were ex-officio members.

Municipal Administration.—The pueblo (town) was the term applied to what is now called the "municipality." It ordinarily embraced an area of so many square miles and was divided into numerous "barangays" (or "barrios") of about fifty families each. The chief officer of the municipality was formerly called the "gobernadorcillo" (petty governor), and later, "capitan municipal" (municipal captain). He was the representative of the provincial governor, the arbiter of his subjects' questions, and was responsible for the collection of taxes. He was also under obligation to assist the parish priest and to entertain all visiting officials. His position was honorary.

The annual elections for "gobernadorcillo" were held in the same manner all over the archipelago. Thirteen electors, composed of six "cabezas de barangay", six of the ex-gobernadorcillos, and the actual gobernadorcillo, were first chosen by lot in the presence of the provincial governor (or his deputy), the parish priest and the clerk, acting as canvassers. Each elector was allowed to write on a piece of paper three names of the candidates for "gobernadorcillo", and the candidate who obtained the most votes was forthwith named "gobernadorcillo" for the coming year, subject to the approval of the Governor-General or his representative. There were other municipal officers elected in the same manner after the new "gobernadorcillo" was chosen.

By Royal Decree of May 19, 1893, a municipal council of five, consisting of the "captain" and four "lieutenants," was constituted. The term of office was four years. The officers together with two substitutes, were elected by twelve delegates of the "principalia" (municipal officials).

The "tenientes" (deputies), the chief of police, chief of fields, the chief of cattle, and "cabezas de barangay" were also prominent officials of the town, who assisted the gobernadorcillo in the discharge of his office. The "aiguaciles" were but subordinate employees who were always busy taking orders of the "gobernadorcillo" or "capitan municipal."

Filipino Representation in the Cortes.

—When Napoleon Bonaparte, the Emperor of France, conquered Spain in 1808, it induced the Spanish government to offer Filipinos parliamentary representation in the Cortes in 1809. Ventura de los Reyes, of Manila, was the first Filipino delegate to go to Spain in 1810. The Philippines did enjoy this right only for three periods of time: First from 1810 to 1813; second, from 1820 to 1823; and the last, from 1834 to 1837. In 1837 a law was passed, excluding the Philippine deputies from the Cortes. After that year many attempts were made to revive the right, but failed. As a last effort, through the activities of the Filipino Association of Madrid and the review "La Solidaridad," fifty-two petitions praying for the restoration of parliamentary representation for the Philippines, were presented to the Cortes by Deputy Emilio Junoy in its session of February 21, 1895. The same deputy shortly thereafter submitted a bill, providing for thirty-one deputies and eleven senators for the Archipelago, which received scant consideration from the government. The Filipino prayer eloquently stated by Marcelo del Pilar was "in exchange for the loyalty of so many generations, in exchange for so much blood shed for Spain, the present generation does not ask for any thing which will mean a sacrifice to the metropolis of its ideals, nothing which should impose any burden on its interests at all; it does not ask anything but a little consideration; it only asks to have its voice heard; that it be allowed to express its necessities by means of representatives freely elected by the vote of the interested parties." But the grant of what to the Filipinos appeared as a natural right, failed. And the failure brought an end to peaceful agitation, caused minor revolts, and eventually came to the one of the fagots which kindled the national conflagration.⁽⁷⁾

Spaniards and Filipinos were equal before the law but, socially, the former treated the latter as inferior. All the higher positions were filled by the Spaniards, while the Filipinos, except in some very rare cases, were given share in the petty offices only. However, in spite of all these, the victors and the vanquished, the oppressors and the oppressed, worked harmoniously for a common benefit up to the time when the Spanish yoke could no longer be tolerated. It was only when Spanish despotism weighed heavily on their shoulders that the Filipinos showed signs of deep animosity in frequent outbreaks and revolts, for conditions, economic and governmental, were such that it was impossible for the people to bear their misfortune without at least manifesting a protest against the harsh and arbitrary rule to which they were subjected. Philippine representation in the Cortes, liberty of press, of cults and of associations; the discontinuance of certain governmental proceedings by which a man was condemned without being heard; the inviolability of the domicile and correspondence on mere secret denunciations; the secularization of the parishes; the great facilities and few obstacles for agriculture, industry and commerce; and the equalization of the Filipinos to the Spaniards in all political and civil rights—these were what they asked for but to which the Spaniards turned deaf ears. It was only when Spain spurned their humble petitions for the exercise of such rights that they, as a people, appealed to the court of arms for the absolute dissolution of all political ties, and the trial was in progress when Dewey's guns in the Battle of Manila Bay heralded the dawn of a new era in the annals of the Philippines.*

* Adjutant E. Hannaford, in his book entitled "The Picturesque Philippines," described Aguinaldo and the Insurrection of 1896 as follows:

"The Governor-General Despujol was an eminent example of how a just administrator might be overborne for selfish ends, by an incorrigible bureaucracy and the friars. The Filipinos idolized him as their savior, and when he left, recalled by cable, an innumerable multitude crowded the shore to wave farewell, and every steamer belonging to the port accompanied him far out to sea. This was late in 1892. By the year 1895 ominous whisperings began to circulate at Manila, noting among other things the persons who were seen high up on the mountain-sides in the interior, and suddenly going out. Men shook their heads at mention of the gathering strength of the Katipunan, or League of Blood, the secret revolutionary society that the government had striven in vain, by craft and cruelty, to stamp out. That in the financially important mestizo class certain individuals were known to be seriously disaffected was a fact working both ways; for, though with characteristic cunning these kept in the back-ground, many high-grade natives rather than affiliate in any way with so despised an element at first held aloof. Considering how feeble class distinctions are in Manila, the extent to which it makes a virtue of racial antipathies is remarkable.

The agitation set on foot by the rich mestizos and creoles at Madrid for colonial reform was a flat failure. The only significant response it called forth being that political rights were gained not by begging, but by fighting for them—a brutal rebuff that largely decided the course of some. In August, 1896, the expected happened. A revolution broke out in the province of Cavite, and in the following December Governor-General Blanco, unwilling to lend himself to a policy of indiscriminate vengeance, was replaced by Polavieja, and the latter in a few months by Rivera. Meanwhile the leadership of the revolt, the fury of which astonished everybody had gradually been taken by a young Tagal with some training in Spanish military tactics, a small landed proprietor of Iloilo, his native pueblo in Cavite province, named Emilio Aguinaldo, who ten years before had been a passing student at the threshold of the University at Manila, and later was the "little governor" of his town, and then its municipal captain. Aguinaldo was born about 1870. He is described as weighing scarcely one hundred pounds, being undersized for even a Tagal. The accounts that made him teach a term or two in a pueblo school possibly confounded him with his cousin, Baldomero Aguinaldo, who was a pedagogue for years. One legend respecting him is that when a Spanish officer with a file of native soldiers came to apprehend him, Aguinaldo shot the officer with his pistol, then turned to the amazed squad and made them an impassioned address, with such effect that they decided to quit the service of their Spanish oppressors, and on the spot chose him their captain for revolutionary service. His ascendancy over the minds of his countrymen cannot be lightly explained away. The superstition that held him to be an anti-evil-man helped with the more ignorant, but his reputation for courage and generalship counted for vastly more, swaying all classes. Judged by the test of adapting limited means to comprehensive ends, Aguinaldo's capacity could not be doubted. The Tagals trusted him implicitly and the serious mindedness which he brought to his undertaking makes a creditable contrast with many later flippant references to him on the part of uninformed people. The struggle continued more than fifteen months, when notwithstanding the reinforcements that had come from Spain, amounting to nearly thirty thousand men, Governor-General Rivera had so secured it that he induced a wealthy native of Manila, named Paterno, to negotiate a peace. On December 14, 1897, was signed the treaty of Biacnabato, the outcome of which General Francis V. Greene, in an official report to the American government, summarized (September, 1898) as follows: "It required that Aguinaldo and the other insurgent leaders should leave the country, the government agreeing to pay them $200,000 in silver, and promising to introduce numerous reforms, including representation in the Spanish Cortes, freedom of the press, amnesty for all insurgents, and the expulsion or secularization of the monastic orders. Aguinaldo and his associates went to Hong-Kong bank, and a lawsuit shortly arose between Aguinaldo and one of his subordinate chiefs, named Artacho. Artacho sued for a division of the money among the insurgents, according to rank. Then Aguinaldo claimed that the money was a trust fund, and was to remain on deposit until it was seen whether the Spaniards would carry out their promised reforms, and if they failed to do so, it was to be used to defray the expenses of a new insurrection. The suit was settled out of court by paying Artacho $5,000. No steps were taken to introduce the reforms, more than two thousand insurgents who had been deported to Fernando Po and other places were still kept in confinement, and Aguinaldo is now using the money to carry on the operations of another insurrection.

"On the twenty-fourth of April Aguinaldo met the United States consul and others at Singapore," continues General Greene, "and offered to begin a new insurrection in conjunction with the operations of the United States navy at Manila. This was telegraphed to Commodore Dewey at Hong-Kong, and, by his consent or at his request, Aguinaldo left Singapore for Hong-Kong on April 26th, and when the dispatch-boat Hugh McCulloch returned to Hong-Kong early in May to carry the news of Commodore Dewey's victory, it took Aguinaldo and seventeen other revolutionary chiefs on board, and brought them to Manila bay. They landed at Cavite, and Admiral Dewey allowed them to take such guns, ammunition and stores as he did not require for himself. With these and some other arms which he had brought from Hong-Kong Aguinaldo armed his followers, who rapidly assembled at Cavite, and in a few weeks he began moving against the Spaniards. Part of them succeeded in getting some more arms, and the others retreated to Manila. Soon afterward two ships, the private property of Señor Agoncillo and other insurgent sympathizers, were converted into cruisers, and sent with insurgent troops to Subic Bay and other places to capture provinces outside of Manila. They were successful, the native militia in Spanish service capitulating with their arms in nearly every case without serious resistance. Between 2,000 and 3,000 of the native troops in the Spanish service surrendered during the months of June and July. They captured the waterworks of Manila, and cut off the water supply, and if it had been in the dry season it would have inflicted great suffering on the inhabitants for lack of water."

In Aguinaldo's True Version of the Philippine Revolution, published at Tarlac, September 23, 1899, of the Biacnabato treaty he says:—

"Don Pedro Alejandro Paterno came several times to Biak-na-bato to make propositions of peace which, after five months of lengthy deliberations, was concluded and signed on the 14th of December of the said year, 1897, on the following basis:

Firstly. I was to be free to live abroad with the companions who were willing to follow me; and in Hongkong, which I had decided on as a place of residence, the payment of $800,000 indemnification money was to be made in three instalments, $400,000 on receipt of all the arms that were in Biacnabato, $200,000 when the number of arms delivered up should amount to 800, and the remaining $200,000 on the total number of the same reaching 1000, when, as a thank offering, the Te Deum should be celebrated in the cathedral of Manila. The last two weeks of the month of February were fixed upon as the final term for the delivering up of the arms.

GEN. EMILIO AGUINALDO
As he appeared in his military uniform during the Revolution of 1897

Secondly. The money was all to be delivered to me personally, and I was to settle without interference with my companions and the other revolutionists.

Thirdly. Before the Philippine revolutionists should evacuate Biak-na-bato, Captain General Don Primo de Rivera was to send me two Spanish generals who were to remain as hostages till I and my companions reached Hongkong and the first installment of the indemnification, that is $400,000 had been received.

Fourthly. It was also agreed to suppress the religious societies in the Islands, and that political and administrative autonomy should be established, although by request of General Primo de Rivera these latter conditions were not put down in writing, owing to his assertion that otherwise the treaty would be in too humiliating a form for the Spanish government, while on the other hand he guaranteed on his word as gentleman and officer the fulfilment of the same.

General Primo de Rivera paid the first installment of $400,000, while the two generals were still detained as hostages. (See picture No. 3 on page 31.)

On our side, we the revolutionists, fulfilled the condition of delivering up the arms, the number of which exceeded one thousand, a fact that was known to everybody and published in the papers of Manila. But the captain general failed to carry out the rest of the conditions, namely, the payment of the other installments, the suppression of the friars and the reforms agreed upon, although the Te Deum was sung. This caused great grief to me and my companions, grief which changed into despair on receiving the letter of Lieutenant Colonel Don Miguel Primo de Rivera, nephew of the captain general and his private secretary, informing us that neither my companions nor I could ever return to Manila."

Conclusion

Let us, however, conclude with the remark that the Filipinos will never forget the fact that they owe an everlasting gratitude to Spain for all the good things she had done in these islands for over three hundred years, and that it is only wise for the peoples of both countries to bury into oblivion all sad incidents of the past.

CHAPTER III

THE ERSTWHILE PHILIPPINE REPUBLIC

Causes of Revolution against Spain.

—There had been several outbreaks and revolts against the Spanish government in the Philippines, the causes of which have already been briefly mentioned in the foregoing chapter. The uprising of 1872 in Cavite cost the lives of the three prominent Filipino clergymen—Burgos, Gomez, and Zamora, — which event produced a great change in the sentiments of the people; while the revolution of 1896 initiated by the "Katipunan" under the leadership, first, of Andres Bonifacio, and later, of Emilio Aguinaldo, caused the martyrdom of Dr. Jose Rizal, the author of the two patriotic novels known as "Noli Me Tangere" and "El Filibusterismo."

The "Pact of Biak-na-Bato."—The "Pact of Biak-na-Bato" was a treaty of peace between General Emilio Aguinaldo and Governor-General Primo de Rivera, signed at Biak-na-Bato on December 14, 1897, through the mediation of Pedro A. Paterno. It provided, among other things, that the Filipinos should stop fighting, surrender their forts and about 1,000 rifles, and that General Aguinaldo and his officers should leave the islands, having fixed upon Hongkong as their place of residence; while the Spaniards agreed to pay Aguinaldo and his officers $800,000.00 (Mexican), besides $900,000 for those who had lost property through the rebellion. The Filipinos kept their part of the agreement and Governor-General Primo de Rivera paid Aguinaldo 400,000 pesos, but the former made no reforms, and instead, he executed and imprisoned several Filipinos who had taken part in the revolution of 1896. As a result of the violation of the Pact of Biak-na-Bato by the Government, the Filipinos were forced to resume their fight against the Spaniards in April of 1898.

upon myself, whilst explaining that I had no authority to speak for the Government to point out the danger of continuing independent action at this stage; and having convinced him of the expediency of cooperating with our fleet, then at Hongkong, and obtained the assurance of his willingness to proceed thither and confer with Commodore Dewey to that end should the latter so desire, I telegraphed the Commodore the same day as follows, through our Consul General at Hongkong:

"Aguinaldo, insurgent leader, here. Will come Hongkong with Commodore for general cooperation insurgents Manila if arrange desired. Telegraph.

Pratt."

The Commodore's reply reading thus:

"Tell Aguinaldo come soon as possible."

I received it late that night, and at once communicated it to General Aguinaldo, who, with his aide-de-camp and private secretary all under assumed names, I succeeded in getting off by the British steamer "Malacca," which left there on Tuesday, the 26th.

Just previous to his departure, I had a second and last interview with General Aguinaldo, the particular of which I shall give you by next mail.

The General impressed me as a man of intelligence, ability and courage, and worthy the confidence that had been placed in him.

I think that in arranging for his direct cooperation with the commander of our forces, I have prevented possible conflict of action and facilitated the work of occupying and administering the Philippines.

If this course of mine meets with the Government's approval, as I trust it may, I shall be fully satisfied; to Mr. Bray, however, I consider there is due some special recognition for most valuable services rendered.

How that recognition can best be made, I leave to you to decide.

E. Spencer Pratt,
United States Consul-General

The Battle of Manila Bay.—Early in the morning of May 1, 1898, Commodore Dewey, with his fleet of six ships, found himself in the Manila Bay, where a battle between his squadron and a Spanish fleet took place the same day. As a result of this battle, ten Spanish ships were destroyed, and about six hundred Spaniards were killed, but no American.

After the said battle Governor-General Basilio Augustin and Archbishop Bernardino Nozaleda issued proclamations calling on the Filipinos to aid the Spaniards in the war against the Americans, but Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo did no longer believe what the Spaniards tried to promise him, so he decided to fight with the Americans, reorganized his army and won several battles against the Spaniards in the territories outside of Manila.

The Revolutionary Government.—In the honest belief that the Filipinos had accomplished their mission in freeing themselves from the Spanish sovereignty and it being necessary to maintain peace and order, a dictatorial government was established on May 24, 1898, upon the advice of Don Ambrosio Rianzares Bautista, with Emilio Aguinaldo as Dictator. Later, the Independence of the Philippines was proclaimed by General Aguinaldo in Cavite on June 12; and afterwards the Dictatorial Government gave way to the Revolutionary Government on June 23rd, 1898. The Revolutionary Congress, which, according to F. D. Millet, a journalist, was composed of "delegates exceptionally alert, keen, and intelligent in appearance," assembled at the church of Barasoain (Malolos, Bulacan), on September 15th; the political Constitution was approved on November 29, 1898, and promulgated by the President on January 21, 1899.

The English version of said Constitution is as follows:

OPENING OF FILIPINO CONGRESS AT BARASOAIN, MALOLOS

PRESIDENCY

REVOLUTIONARY GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES

Don EMILIO AGUINALDO Y FAMY, President of the Revolutionary Government of the Philippines, and Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

KNOW ALL PHILIPPINE CITIZENS: That the Assembly of Representatives of the Nation, in the exercise of its sovereignty, has decreed and I have sanctioned the political constitution of the State.

Therefore: I command all the military and civil authorities of any class or rank, to keep it and cause it to be kept, complied with and executed in all its parts, because it is the sovereign will of the Philippine people.

Done at Malolos on the 21st day of January in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

Emilio Aguinaldo

THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL,

Apolinario Mabini

WE, the Representatives of the Philippine people, lawfully convened, in order to establish justice, provide for common defense, promote the general welfare and insure the benefits of liberty, imploring the aid of the Sovereign Legislator of the Universe for the attainment of these ends, have voted, decreed and sanctioned the following:

POLITICAL CONSTITUTION

TITLE I

The Republic

ARTICLE 1. The political association of all the Filipinos constitutes a nation, the State of which is denominated Philippine Republic.

ART. 2. The Philippine Republic is free and independent.

ART. 3. Sovereignty resides exclusively in the people.

TITLE II

The Government

ART. 4. The government of the republic is popular, representative, alternative and responsible, and is exercised by three distinct powers, which are denominated legislative, executive and judicial. Two or more of these powers shall never be vested in one person or corporation; neither shall the legislature be vested in one individual alone.

TITLE III

Religion

ART. 5. The state recognizes the equality of all religious worships and the separation of the church and the state.

TITLE IV

The Filipinos and their National and Individual Rights

ART. 6. The following are Filipinos:

1st. All persons born in Philippine territory. A vessel flying the Philippine flag shall, for this purpose, be considered a portion of the Philippine territory.

2nd. The offspring of a Filipino father and mother although born outside the Philippine territory.

3rd. Foreigners who have obtained certificates of naturalization.

4th. Those who, without it, may have gained "vecindad" (domicile) in any town of the Philippine territory.

It is understood that domicile is gained by staying two years without interruption in one locality of the Philippine territory, having an open abode and known mode of living and contributing to all the charges of the nation.

The nationality of the Filipino is lost in accordance with the laws.

ART. 7. No Filipino nor foreigner shall be arrested nor imprisoned unless on account of crime, and in accordance with the laws.

ART. 8. Any person arrested shall be discharged or delivered over to the judicial authority within twenty-four hours following the arrest.

Any arrest shall be held without effect or shall be carried to commitment within seventy-two hours after the detained has been delivered over to a competent judge.

The party interested shall receive notice of the order which may be issued within the same time.

ART. 9. No Filipino can become a prisoner unless by virtue of the mandate of a competent judge.

The decree by which may be issued the mandate shall be ratified or confirmed, having heard the presumed criminal within seventy-two hours following the act of commitment.

ART. 10. No one can enter the domicile of a Filipino or foreign resident in the Philippines without his consent, except in urgent cases of fire, flood, earthquake, or other similar danger, or of unlawful aggression proceeding from within or in order to assist a person within calling for help.

Outside of these cases, the entrance in the domicile of a Filipino or foreign resident of the Philippines and the searching of the papers or effects can only be decreed by a competent judge and executed during the day.

The searching of the papers and effects shall take place always in the presence of the party interested or of an individual of his family, and, in their absence, of two resident witnesses of the same place.

Notwithstanding, when a delinquent may be found in flagrante and pursued by the authority with its agents may take refuge in his domicile, he may be followed into the same only for the purpose of apprehension.

If he should take refuge in the domicile of another, notification to the owner of the latter shall precede.

ART. 11. No Filipino can be compelled to make change of his domicile or residence unless by virtue of an executive sentence.

ART. 12. In no case can there be detained nor opened by the governing authority the correspondence confided to the post-office, nor can that of the telegraph or telephone be detained.

But, by virtue of a decree of a competent judge, can be detained any correspondence and also opened in the presence of the accused that which may be conveyed by the post-office.

ART. 13. Any decree of imprisonment, of search of abode, or of detention of the correspondence written, telegraphed, or telephoned shall be justified.

When the decree may fall short of this requisite, or when the motives in which it may be founded may be judicially declared unlawful or notoriously insufficient, the person who may have been imprisoned, or whose imprisonment may not have been ratified within the term prescribed in article 9, or whose domicile may be forcibly entered, or whose correspondence may be detained, shall have the right to demand the responsibilities which ensue.

ART. 14. No Filipino shall be prosecuted nor sentenced, unless by a judge or tribunal to whom, by virtue of the laws which precede the crime, is delegated its cognizance, and in the form which the latter prescribe.

ART. 15. Any person detained or imprisoned, without the legal formalities, unless in the cases provided in this constitution, shall be discharged upon their own petition or that of any Filipino.

The laws shall determine the form of proceeding summarily in this case, as well as the personal and pecuniary penalties incurred by him who may order, execute, or cause to be executed, the illegal detention or imprisonment.

ART. 16. No person shall be deprived temporarily or permanently of his property or rights, nor disturbed in the possession of them, unless by virtue of a judicial sentence.

Those functionaries who under any pretext infringe this provision shall be personally responsible for the damage caused.

ART. 17. No person shall be deprived of his property unless through necessity and common welfare, previously justified and declared by the proper authority, providing indemnity to the owner previous to the deprivation.

ART. 18. No person shall be obliged to pay contribution which may not have been voted by the assembly or by the popular corporations legally authorized to impose it, and which exaction shall not be made in the form prescribed by law.

ART. 19. No Filipino who may be in the full enjoyment of his civil and political rights shall be hindered in the free exercise of the same.

ART. 20. Neither shall any Filipino be deprived of:

1st. The right of expressing liberally his ideas and opinions either by word or by writing, availing himself of the press or of any other similar means.

2nd. The right of associating himself with all the objects of human life which may not be contrary to public moral; and, finally,

3rd. Of the right to direct petitions, individually or collectively, to the public powers and to the authorities.

The right of petition shall not be exercised by any class of armed force.

ART. 21. The exercise of the rights expressed in the preceding article shall be subject to the general provisions which regulate them.

ART. 22. Those crimes which are committed upon the occasion of the exercise of the rights granted in this title shall be punished by the tribunals in accordance with the common laws.

ART. 23. Any Filipino can found and maintain establishments of instruction or of education, in accordance with the provisions which are established.

Popular education shall be obligatory and gratuitous in the schools of the nation.

ART. 24. Any foreigner may establish himself liberally in the Philippine territory, subject to the provisions which regulate the matter, exercising therein his industry or devoting himself to any profession in the exercise of which the laws may not require diplomas of fitness issued by the national authorities.

ART. 25. No Filipino who is in the full enjoyment of his political and civil rights shall be hindered from going freely from the territory, nor from removing his residence or property to a foreign country, except the obligations of contributing to the military service and the maintenance of the public taxes.

ART. 26. The foreigner who may not have become naturalized shall not exercise in the Philippines any office which may have attached to it authority or jurisdiction.

ART. 27. Every Filipino is obliged to defend the country with arms when he may be called upon by the laws; and to contribute to the expenses of the state (government) in proportion to his property.

ART. 28. The enumeration of the rights granted in this title does not imply the prohibition of any other not expressly delegated.

ART. 29. Previous authorization shall not be necessary in order to prosecute before the ordinary tribunals the public functionaries, whatever may be the crime which they commit.

A superior mandate shall not exempt from responsibility in cases of manifest infraction, clear and determinate, of a constitutional provision. In the other cases it shall exempt only the agents who may not exercise the authority.

ART. 30. The guarantees provided in articles 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11, and paragraphs 1 and 2 of the 20th article, shall not be suspended in the Republic nor any part of it, unless temporarily and by means of a law, when the security of the state shall demand it in extraordinary circumstances.

It being promulgated in the territory to which it may apply, the special law shall govern during the suspension according to the circumstances which demand it.

The latter as well as the former shall be voted in the national assembly, and in case the assembly may be closed the government is authorized to issue it in conjunction with the permanent commission without prejudice to convoking the former within the shortest time and giving them information of what may have been done.

But neither by the one nor the other law can there be suspended any other guarantees than those delegated in the first paragraph of this article nor authorizing the government to banish from the country or transport any Filipino.

In no case can the military or civil chiefs establish any other penalty than that previously prescribed by the law.

ART. 31. In the Philippine Republic no one can be tried by private laws nor special tribunals. No person can have privileges nor enjoy emoluments which may not be compensation for public service and which are fixed by law. "El fuero de guerra y marina" (the jurisdiction, privileges, and powers of army and navy) shall extend solely to the crimes and faults which may have intimate connection with the military and maritime discipline.

ART. 32. No Filipino can establish "mayorazgos" nor institutions "vinculadoras" (title of perpetual succession by eldest son, nor institutions entailed) of property, nor accept honors, "condecoraciones" (insignia or decoration of orders) or titles of honor and nobility from foreign nations without the authorization of the government.

Neither can the government establish the institutions mentioned in the preceding paragraph, nor grant honors "condecoraciones" or titles of honor and nobility to any Filipino.

Notwithstanding the nation may reward by a special law, voted by the assembly, eminent services which may be rendered by the citizens to their country.

TITLE V Legislative Power

ART. 33. The legislative power shall be exercised by an assembly of the representatives of the nation.

The assembly shall be organized in the form and under the conditions determined by the law which may be issued to that effect.

ART. 34. The members of the assembly shall represent the entire nation, and not exclusively those who elect them.

ART. 35. No representative shall be subjected to any imperative mandate of his electors.

ART. 36. The assembly shall meet every year. It is the prerogative of the President of the republic to convoke it, suspend and close its sessions and adjourn it, in concurrence with the same or with the permanent commission in its default, and within legal terms.

ART. 37. The assembly shall be open at least three months each year, not including in this time that which is consumed in its organization.

The President of the Republic shall convoke it, at the latest, by the 15th of April.

ART. 38. In an extraordinary case he can convoke it outside of the legal period, with the concurrence of the permanent commission, and prolong the legislature, when the term does not exceed one month nor takes place more than twice in the same legislature.

ART. 39. The national assembly, together with the extraordinary representatives, shall form the constituents in order to proceed to the modification of the constitution and to the election of the new President of the Republic, convoked at least one month previous to the termination of the powers of the former.

In the case of the death or of the resignation of the President of the Republic, the assembly shall meet immediately by its own right and at the request of its president or of that of the permanent commission.

ART. 40. In the meantime, while the appointment of the new President of the Republic proceeds, the president of the supreme court of justice shall exercise his functions, his place being filled by one of the members of this tribunal, in accordance with the laws.

ART. 41. Any meeting of the assembly which may be held outside of the ordinary period of the legislature shall be null and void. That which is provided by art. 39 is excepted, and in that the assembly is constituted a tribunal of justice, not being allowed to exercise in such case other than judicial functions.

ART. 42. The sessions of the assembly shall be public. Notwithstanding, they can be secret at the petition of a certain number of its members, fixed by the regulations, it being decided afterwards by an absolute majority of the votes of the members present whether the discussion of the same matter be continued in public.

ART. 43. The President of the Republic shall communicate with the assembly by means of messages, which shall be read from the rostrum by a secretary of the government.

The secretaries of the government shall have entrance into the assembly, with the right to the floor whenever they ask it, and shall cause themselves to be represented in the discussion of any particular project by commissioners designated by decree of the President of the Republic.

ART. 44. The assembly shall constitute itself a tribunal of justice in order to try the crimes committed against the security of the state by the President of the Republic and individuals of the Counsel of Government, by the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, by the Procurer-General (Solicitor-General) of the nation by means of a decree of the same, or of the permanent commission in its absence, or of the President of the Republic at the proposal of the Solicitor-General, or of the counsel of the government.

The laws shall determine the mode of procedure for the accusation, preparation for trial, and pardon.

ART. 45. No member of the assembly can be prosecuted nor molested for the opinions which he may express nor for the votes which he may cast in the exercise of his office.

ART. 46. No member of an assembly can be prosecuted in a criminal matter without authorization of the same, or of the permanent commission, to whom shall immediately be given information of the act for proper disposition.

The arrest, detention, or apprehension of a member of the assembly can not take place without previous authorization of the same or of the permanent commission; but having once notified the assembly of the decree of arrest, shall incur responsibility if, within two days following the notification, it may not authorize the arrest or give reasons upon which its refusal is founded.

ART. 47. The National Assembly shall have, besides, the following powers:

1. To frame regulations for its interior government.

2. To examine the legality of the elections and the legal qualifications of the members elected.

3. Upon its organization to appoint its President, Vice-President and Secretaries.

Until the assembly may be dissolved, its President, Vice-President and Secretaries shall continue exercising their offices during the four legislatures; and

4. To accept the resignations presented by its members, and grant leaves of absence subject to the regulations.

ART. 48. No project can become a law before being voted upon by the assembly.

In order to pass the laws there shall be required in the assembly at least a fourth part of the total number of members, whose elections may have been approved and who may have taken the oath of office.

ART. 49. No proposed law can be approved by the assembly without having been voted upon as a whole, and article by article.

ART. 50. The assemblies shall have the right of censure and each one of its members the right to be heard.

ART. 51. The proposal of the laws belongs to the President of the Republic and to the assembly.

ART. 52. The representative of the assembly who accepts of the government pension, employment, or commission with a salary, shall be understood to have renounced his office.

The employment of the secretary of the government of the republic and other offices prescribed in special laws are excepted from this provision.

ART. 53. The office of representative shall be for a term of four years, and those who may exercise it have the right, by way of remuneration according to the circumstances, to a sum determined by the law.

Those who may absent themselves during the whole of the legislature shall not be entitled to this remuneration but will recover this right if they assist in those which follow.

TITLE VI

The Permanent Commission

ART. 54. The assembly, before the closing of its sessions, shall elect seven of its members in order to constitute a permanent commission during the period of its being closed, the latter being obliged in its first session to designate a president and a secretary.

ART. 55. The following are the functions of the permanent commission in the absence of the assembly:

1. To declare whether or not there is sufficient reason to proceed against the President of the Republic, the representatives, secretaries of the government, President of the Supreme Court of Justice, and the Procurer-General in the cases provided by this constitution.

2. To convoke the assembly to an extraordinary meeting in those cases in which it should constitute a tribunal of justice.

3. To transact the business which may remain pending for consideration.

4. To convoke the assembly to extraordinary sessions when the exigency of the case may demand; and

5. To substitute the assembly in its functions in accordance with the constitution, exception being made of the right to make and pass the laws.

The permanent commission shall meet whenever it may be convoked by him who presides in accordance with this constitution.

TITLE VII

The Executive Power

ART. 56. The executive power shall reside in the President of the Republic, who exercises it through his secretaries.

ART. 57. The conduct of the interests peculiar to the towns, the provinces, and of the state belonging respectively to the popular assemblies, to the provincial assemblies and to the active administration with reference to laws, and upon the basis of the most ample "descentralización" (distribution) and administrative autonomy.

TITLE VIII

The President of the Republic

ART. 58. The President of the Republic shall be elected by an absolute majority of votes by the assembly and the representatives specially met (convened) in constitutive chamber.

His term of office shall be for four years and he will be reeligible.

ART. 59. The President of the Republic shall have the proposal of the laws as well as the members of the assembly, and shall promulgate the laws when they have been passed and approved by the latter and shall watch over and insure their execution.

ART. 60. The power of causing the laws to be executed extends itself to all that which conduces to the preservation of public order in the interior and the international security.

ART. 61. The President of the Republic shall promulgate the laws within twenty days following the time when they have been transmitted by the assembly definitely approved.

ART. 62. If within this time they may not be promulgated, it shall devolve upon the President to return them to the assembly with justification of the causes of their detention, proceeding in such case to their revision, and it shall not be considered that it insists upon them, if it does not reproduce them by a vote of at least two-thirds of the members of the assembly present. Reproducing the law in the form indicated, the government shall promulgate it within ten days, announcing his non-conformity.

In the same manner the government shall become obligated if he allows to pass the term of twenty days without returning the law to the assembly.

ART. 63. When the promulgation of a law may have been declared urgent by a vote expressed by an absolute majority of the votes of the assembly the President can call upon them by a message, stating his reasons for a new deliberation, which can not be denied, and the same law being approved anew, shall be promulgated within the legal term, without prejudice to the President's announcing his nonconformity.

ART. 64. The promulgation of the laws shall take place by means of their publication in the official periodical of the Republic and shall take effect after thirty days from the date of publication.

ART. 65. The President of the Republic shall have command of the army and navy, making and ratifying treaties of peace, with the previous concurrence of the assembly.

ART. 66. Treaties of peace shall not be binding until passed by the assembly.

ART. 67. In addition to the necessary powers for the execution of the laws, the President of the Republic shall have the following:

1. To confer civil and military employment with reference to the laws.
2. To appoint the secretaries of the government.
3. To direct diplomatic and commercial relations with foreign powers.
4. To see to it that in the entire territory may be administered speedy and complete justice.

5. To pardon delinquents in accordance with the laws, excepting the provision relative to the secretaries of the government.

6. To preside over national assemblies and to receive the envoys and representatives of the foreign powers authorized to meet him.

ART. 68. The President of the Republic shall need be authorized by a special law:

1. In order to alienate, cede, or exchange any part of the Philippine territory.
2. In order to annex any other territory to that of the Philippines.

3. In order to admit foreign troops into the Philippine territory.

4. In order to ratify treaties of alliance, offensive and defensive; special treaties of commerce — those which stipulate to give subsidy to a foreign power—and all those which may bind individually the Filipinos.

In no case can the secret articles of a treaty repeal those which are public.

5. In order to grant amnesties and general pardons.

6. In order to coin money.

ART. 69. To the President of the Republic belongs the power of dictating regulations for compliance and application of the laws in accordance with the requisites which the same prescribe.

ART. 70. The President of the Republic can, with the previous concurrence adopted by a majority of the votes of the representatives, adjourn the assembly before the expiration of the legal term of its office.

In this case they shall be called for new elections within a term of three months.

ART. 71. The President of the Republic shall be responsible only in cases of high treason.

ART. 72. The compensation of the President of the Republic shall be fixed by a special law, which can not be changed until the end of the presidential term of office.

TITLE IX

The Secretaries of the Government

ART. 73. The Council of the government (cabinet) shall be composed of a President and seven Secretaries, who shall have charge of the offices of—

Foreign Affairs, Interior,
Finance,
Army and Navy,
Public Instruction,
Communications and Public Works, and Agriculture, Industry and Commerce.

ART. 74. All that which the President may order or provide in the exercise of his authority shall be signed by the Secretary to whom it belongs. No public officer shall give compliance to any which lacks this requisite.

ART. 75. The Secretaries of the government are responsible jointly to the assembly for the general policy of the government and individually for their personal acts.

To the Procurer-General of the nation belongs the accusation of them, and to the assembly their trial.

The laws shall determine the cases of responsibility of the secretaries of the government, the penalties to which they are subject, and the mode of procedure against them.

ART. 76. If they should be convicted by the assembly, in order to pardon them, there shall precede the petition of an absolute majority of the representatives.

TITLE X

The Judicial Power

ART. 77. To the tribunals belongs exclusively the power of applying the laws in the name of the nation in civil and criminal trials.

The same codes shall govern in the entire Republic without prejudice to modifications which for particular circumstances the laws may prescribe.

In them shall not be established more than one jurisdiction for all the citizens in common trials, civil and criminal.

ART. 78. The tribunals shall not apply the general and municipal regulations only in so far as they conform with the laws.

ART. 79. The exercise of the judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice and in the tribunals which are prescribed by the laws.

The composition, organization, and other attributes shall be governed by the organic laws which may be determined.

ART. 80. The President of the Supreme Court of Justice and the Procurer-General shall be appointed by the national assembly in concurrence with the President of the Republic and Secretaries of the government, and shall have absolute independence of the executive and legislative powers.

ART. 81. Any citizen can institute a public prosecution against any of the members of the judicial power for the crimes they may commit in the exercise of their office.

TITLE XI

Provincial and Popular Assemblies

ART. 82. The organization and powers of the provincial and popular assemblies will be regulated by their respective laws.

The latter shall be regulated according to the following principles:

1. Government and management of the interests peculiar to the provinces or towns, by their respective corporations, the principle of popular and direct election being the basis for the organization of said corporations.

2. Publicity of the sessions within the limits prescribed by the laws.

3. Publicity of the budgets, accounts, and important decisions.

4. Intervention of the government, and in the proper case of the national assembly in order to prevent the provincial and municipal corporations from exceeding their powers, to the prejudice of general and individual interests.

5. Determination of their powers in the matter of taxes, in order that the provincial and municipal taxation may never be in conflict with the system of taxation of the State.

TITLE XII

The Administration of State

ART. 83. The government shall present yearly to the assembly budgets of revenue and expenses, setting forth the alterations made in those of the preceding year and including the balance of the last fiscal year in accordance with law.

When the assembly holds its sessions, the budgets will be presented to it within ten days following its meeting.

ART. 84. No payment shall be made except in accordance with the law of budgets or other special laws, in the form and under the responsibilities fixed thereby.

ART. 85. It is necessary that the government be authorized by law in order to dispose of the goods and properties of the State or to secure a loan upon the credit of the nation.

ART. 86. The public debt which is contracted by the government of the republic in accordance with this constitution shall be under the special guaranty of the nation.

No indebtedness shall be created unless at the same time the resources with which to pay it are voted.

ART. 87. All the laws relating to revenue, public expenditures, or public credit shall be considered as a part of those of the budgets, and shall be published as such.

ART. 88. The assembly shall fix each year, at the request of the President of the Republic, the military forces of land and sea.

TITLE XIII

Reforms in the Constitution

ART. 89. The assembly, upon its own motion or at the proposal of the President of the Republic, can resolve the reform of the constitution, prescribing for that purpose the article or articles which should be modified.

ART. 90. The declaration having been made, the President of the Republic shall dissolve the assembly and convoke the "constituyente" (constituting power), which shall meet within three months following. In the convocation shall be inserted the resolution referred to in the preceding article.

TITLE XIV

The Observance and Oath of the Constitution, and Languages

ART. 91. The President of the Republic, the government, the assembly, and all the Filipino citizens, shall faithfully guard the constitution; and the legislative power, immediately after the approval of the law of budgets, shall examine as to whether the constitution has been exactly observed and as to whether its infractions have been corrected, providing that which is most practicable in order that the responsibility of the transgressors may be made effective.

ART. 92. Neither the President of the Republic nor any other public functionary can enter upon the performance of his duty without previously taking the oath.

Such oath shall be taken by the President of the Republic before the national assembly.

The other functionaries of the nation shall take it before the authorities determined by law.

ART. 93. The use of the languages spoken in the Philippines is optional. It can only be regulated by the law, and solely as to the acts of public authority and judicial affairs. For the purpose of these acts shall be used at present the Castilian language.

TEMPORARY PROVISIONS

ART. 94. In the meantime and without prejudice to the 48th article and the commissions which may be appointed by the assembly for the preparations of the organic laws for the development and application of the rights granted the Filipino citizens, and for the regime of the public powers determined by the constitution, the laws in force in these islands before their emancipation shall be considered as the laws of the Republic.

In like manner shall be considered in force the provisions of the civil code in respect to marriage and civil registry, suspended by the general government of the islands, the instructions of the 26th of April, 1888, in order to carry into effect articles 77, 78, 79 and 82 of said code; the law of civil registry of the 17th of June 1870, referred to by article 332 of the same, and the regulations of the 13th of December, 1870, for the execution of this law, without prejudice to the local chiefs continuing in charge of the entries in the civil registry and intervening in the celebration of the marriage of Catholics.

ART. 95. Pending the approval and enforcement of the laws referred to in the preceding article the provisions of the Spanish laws temporarily enforced by said article may be modified by special laws.

ART. 96. After promulgating the laws which the assembly may approve in accordance with the 94th article, the government of the republic is authorized to issue the decrees and regulations necessary for the immediate formation of all the organizations of state.

ART. 97. The President of the Revolutionary Government shall at once assume the title of President of the Republic, and shall exercise said office until the constituting assembly meets and elects the person who is to fill said office definitely.

ART. 98. This congress, with the members who compose it, and those who may be returned by election or decree, shall continue for four years—that is to say, the whole of the present legislature, beginning the 15th of April of next year.

ART. 99. Notwithstanding the general rule established in the 2nd paragraph of the 4th article, during the time the country may have to struggle for its independence the government is hereby authorized to determine, at the close of congress, whatever questions and difficulties, not provided for by law, may arise from unforeseen events, by means of decrees, which may be communicated to the permanent commission and to the assembly on its first meeting.

ART. 100. The execution of the 5th article of title III is hereby suspended until the meeting of the constituting assembly.

In the meantime, the municipalities of those places which may require the spiritual offices of a Filipino priest shall provide for his maintenance.

ART. 101. Notwithstanding the provisions of arts. 62 and 63, the laws returned by the President of the Republic to congress can not be reproduced until the legislature of the following year, the President and his council of government being responsible for the suspension. If the reproduction be made, the promulgation will be compulsory within ten days, the President stating his non-conformity if he so desires.

If the reproduction be made in subsequent legislatures, it will be considered as being voted for the first time.

ADDITIONAL ARTICLE.

From the 24th of May last, on which date the dictatorial government was organized in Cavite, all the buildings, properties, and other belongings possessed by the religious corporations in these islands will be understood as restored to the Filipino government.

BARASOAIN, January 20, 1899.

PROCLAMATION OF AGUINALDO AS PRESIDENT OF THE ERSTWHILE PHILIPPINE REPUBLIC AT MALOLOS, JANUARY 23, 1899.

"Admirable was the constitution then drafted. Statesmanlike were the proclamations issued," said former Justice George A. Malcolm, who, quoting Senator Hoar's statement, continued: "If they were found in our own history of our own revolutionary time we should be proud to have them stand side by side with those great state papers which Chatham declared were equal to the master pieces of antiquity."⁽⁸⁾

"In spite of the circumstances which then existed, when it seemed as if nothing could stand, when everything was tottering in its foundations, when the very secular institutions and all which with more zeal respected the past was threatened with death and destruction, it was yet possible to frame with serenity and rectitude a Constitution, which was reflexive, rigid, formal, alone in its class, a beautiful and imperishable document which constitutes according to the Message of Aguinaldo, 'the most glorious token of the noble aspirations of the Philippine Revolution and an irrefutable proof before the civilized world of the culture and capacity of the Filipino people for self-government,' a Constitution which established—one is forced to admit—in spite of its being provisional, the first democratic republic in the Orient, for even the Constitution of Japan of the year 1889 can not resist a favorable comparison with the provisional Constitution of Malolos."⁽⁹⁾

In a letter to General Otis, forwarding a copy of the constitution, Aguinaldo said:

My government has promulgated the political constitution of the Philippine Republic, which is today enthusiastically proclaimed by the people, because of its conviction that its duty is to interpret faithfully the aspirations of that people—a people making superhuman efforts to revindicate their sovereignty and their nationality before the civilized powers.

To this end of the government today recognized and observed among cultured nations, they have adapted the form of government most compatible with their aspirations, endeavoring to adjust their actions to the dictates of reason and of right, in order to demonstrate their aptitude for civil life.

And taking the liberty to notify Your Excellency, I constantly hope that, doing justice to the Philippine people, you will be pleased to inform the government of your nation that the desire of mine, upon being accorded official recognition is to contribute to the best of its scanty ability to the establishment of a general peace.

May God keep Your Excellency many years.

EMILIO AGUINALDO

Foreign delegates were appointed to make known to the civilized nations of the world the true character of the country's aspirations and the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government, and to ask official recognition of the independence of the Philippines. Among the leading diplomatic representatives appointed were Apacible, Del Pan, Regidor, Ponce, Luna, Lozada, and Agoncillo, who did their utmost to secure such recognition of the new republic, but their efforts were unsuccessful because of the hostilities that broke out later between the American and the Filipino armed forces. (10)

The United States claimed sovereignty over the Philippines despite the fact that Generals Merrit, Anderson and Otis had proclaimed to the Filipino people that "America did not come to conquer territories, but to free the inhabitants (of the islands) from the oppression of the Spanish rule."⁽¹¹⁾ The Filipinos refused to recognize the right of sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines, saying that "they had not taken up arms in order to make the Americans their masters instead of the Spaniards, but to make themselves free and independent, and had considered the Americans their allies in that war against Spain." Such were the causes of the war against the United States and the failure on the part of the Filipinos to enforce the Malolos Constitution.

The fierce battle of February 4 and 5, 1899, between the American and Filipino forces caused the defeat of Aguinaldo's army with a loss of several thousand men.

At Zapote Bridge (Bacoor, Cavite), the Filipino forces made a heroic defense against an attack by General Lawton's army in the month of June that same year, as a result of which many were killed on both sides.

With respect to the revolutionary government and the insurrection ag-

(10) "In the midst of the events connected with the establishment of the Philippine Republic, came the unwelcome news that Spain had ceded the Archipelago to the United States. On the fourth of January, 1899, President McKinley instructed General Otis, who was in command of the American forces in the islands, that the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines must be recognized. This meant, of course, that opposition to American rule would result in war. On the twenty-first of January, President Aguinaldo proclaimed the Constitution, and immediately began preparations for war."

The Filipinos refused to recognize the right of sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines, declaring that the Islanders had repeatedly made known their desire to be free and independent; that they were already starting a government of their own; that they had sacrificed many lives on the field of battle, against Spanish dominion, until, one by one, the provinces had fallen into their hands; that when Manila capitulated, the Filipino forces were in control of the greater part of the Archipelago; that Spain held nothing but Manila and a few isolated places. For these reasons the Revolutionary Government claimed that Spain had no moral right to cede the Philippines to the United States, since the islands had virtually passed from her control." — Fernandez, Brief History of the Philippines, pp. 264-265.

"When Commodore Dewey entered Manila Bay, he came to destroy the Spanish fleet, not to conquer the Philippines. That the United States should retain the Archipelago was never considered, either by Dewey or by the Filipinos. Indeed, in the summer of 1898 the American people and their government were not particularly interested in the Philippines; for they knew little about the country or its inhabitants. Consequently, neither the fleet nor the army interfered with the activities of President Aguinaldo and the Revolutionary Government. The Filipinos regarded this noninterference on the part of the Americans as a silent approval of their plans for independence. They called the Americans their allies and deliverers. They believed that their independence was assured. They worked hard, therefore, to perfect the organization of the Filipino government." — Id., pp. 261-262.

"After destroying the Spanish squadron, Dewey remained in the Manila Bay in pursuance of orders from Washington. By the end of July about eight thousand five hundred American soldiers had arrived in the Philippines. On the thirteenth of August, 1898, after little resistance, Manila capitulated, and the American forces entered the Walled City. The Filipinos participated in the attack, but were not allowed to enter the city. . . . The American forces in Manila gradually extended their lines in the outskirts, and the Filipino forces drew closer to the city. A conflict was expected at any moment. On the night of the fourth of February, 1899, a Filipino lieutenant attempted to cross the San Juan Bridge. The American sentry ordered him to halt, and on his refusal shot and killed him. That was the signal for the beginning of the war." — Id., pp. 217 and 265.

ANTONIO Ma. REGIDOR

against the United States, Edwin Wildman, author of the book entitled "Aguinaldo", says as follows:

"General Wesley Merritt, commander of the Department of the Pacific, had arrived on July 25. He was instructed by the President to occupy the Islands by the American land forces; the powers of the military to be supreme and immediately operate upon the political condition of the inhabitants. General Anderson was in command of the Second Division of the Eighth Army Corps, with General Greene and General MacArthur commanding brigades. General Anderson requested Aguinaldo to permit the American troops to take a position between the Insurgent lines which surrounded Manila and remove his troops to be right across the Pasig River. This enabled our forces to form part of and complete the cordon around the city.

On August 7, Admiral Dewey and General Merritt sent to the Governor-General Jaudennes a joint note notifying him to remove from the city within forty-eight hours all non-combatants, as operations against the defences of Manila might begin at any time after the expiration of that time. A reply was received the same day to the effect that the Spanish were without places of refuge for the increased numbers of wounded, sick women, and children now lodged within the walls. On the 9th day of August a formal joint demand for the surrender of the city was sent to Jaudennes. The demand called attention to the hopelessness of the struggle on the part of the Spaniards, pointing out that every consideration of humanity demanded that the city should not be subjected to bombardment under such circumstances. Jaudennes replied that the council of defence had declared that the demand could not be granted, but that he would be willing to consult his government if allowed time to do so. Admiral Dewey and General Merritt declined, believing that it would only indefinitely postpone the struggle. Our troops were suffering under the exposure to the unaccustomed heat and rains, harassed in their trenches and poorly protected and inadequately fed. Decisive action was therefore necessary to compel the enemy to give up the city and bring to an end the intolerable conditions.

General Merritt issued, August 9, a general order, copies of which were sent to Aguinaldo, as Aguinaldo had not called upon him nor offered his services in any way. The order was an appeal to the honor and pride of the Insurgent army to conduct themselves as become representatives of a higher civilization, that the inhabitants might be impressed with the lofty motives of the mission of the Americans in the Islands. It also cautioned all American soldiers against committing any act of pillage or violence, and was a tacit hint to the Insurgents to follow suit.

Aguinaldo requested of General Greene that his troop should enter Manila with the Americans. On Aug. 12 he repeated this request, through a staff officer, to General Anderson. Night after night the desultory firing continued from the Spanish trenches, and one by one our men were being needlessly sacrificed. General Merritt and Admiral Dewey therefore decided to move jointly upon Manila the morning of August 13. Admiral Dewey would have preferred the presence of the Monardnock, as the commanders of the German battleships in the bay were showing unconcealed sympathy for the Spanish. The English cruiser Immortalite, however, significantly took a position between the Concord and the German flagship Kaiser, and set at rest in the minds of the Americans the likelihood of German interference. Our squadron ranged itself along the front of the walled city and the shore, and shelled the old fort at Malate and the Spanish trenches.* The land forces immediately moved upon the Spanish, and in a quick, decisive charge routed the Spanish and pushed forward to the walls of the old city. A preconceived plan, arranged by M. Andre, the Belgian consul, was then carried out, and the white flag was raised on the walls of Manila. The battle caused considerable loss of life, but the Spaniards refused to surrender without a shot of resistance in order to save their "honor" and presumably the necks of the officials when they returned to Madrid.

Early on the morning of the 13th Aguinaldo was notified by General Anderson not to let his troops enter Manila without the permission of the American commander, and that on the south side of the Pasig, Insurgent troops would be under fire. Aguinaldo replied that it was too late; his forces had already been ordered into action. He further stated that his troops were forced by means of violence to retire from positions taken, and that he had given strict orders to his chiefs to respect the American forces and aid them in case they were attacked by a common enemy. The Insurgents mixed freely with our troops, doing fighting whenever it was possible, sometimes side by side with the Americans, sometimes at the head of a charge, and sometimes in detached companies. Several thousand succeeded in entering Manila. They plundered many houses in the suburbs and occupied several convents and churches and many private residences.

On the evening of the battle, General Anderson had notified Aguinaldo that trouble was threatened between the two forces, and requested him to try to prevent it, and that the Insurgents should not force themselves into the city until the Americans received full surrender, after which negotiations would be in order. Colonel Hale arrested and disarmed a company of Insurgents who were trying to force their way into the city. Believing them innocent of hostile intentions, he released them, but retained their rifles.

The Insurgents were greatly disappointed in not "sharing in the plunder of the city," and Aguinaldo wrote General Anderson that the Insurgents, who had so long been besieging Manila, had always been promised that they could appear in it, and that for that reason he did not deem it prudent to issue orders to the contrary, as they might be disobeyed. He requested that his troops be allowed to occupy Manila, as they had many times given proofs of their friendship, ceding the positions requested by General Anderson. Buencamino was sent to Manila to represent Aguinaldo and hold a conference with General Anderson. After a parley of several hours, Buencamino promised to have the Insurgent troops withdrawn from Manila. The promise was not kept. General Merritt, on the 14th of August, issued a proclamation addressed to the people of the Philippines, in which he stated that the United States had not come to wage war upon the Filipinos, but to protect them in their homes, in their employments, and in their personal and religious rights; that the existing laws would be administered by the officers of the United States; that the ports would be open to trade and that all people, so long as they preserved the peace and performed their duties toward the representatives of the United States, would not be disturbed in their property, except in so far as it was found necessary for the good of the service of the United States and the benefit of the people of the Philippines. In forming this proclamation, General Merritt consulted with Aguinaldo's commissioners and modified the original document to conform somewhat to their suggestions and wishes.

The Filipinos held the waterworks and pumping station, and the water was turned off, putting the hot sweltering city into terrible straits. Aguinaldo demanded that if his troops were withdrawn from Manila, he should hold Paco and Malate, two of the most important suburbs; that he should hold certain convents in the city; that we exercise sovereignty over the city only; that General Merritt should consult him about all civil appointments; that the Filipinos should have the right at all times to enter the river and harbor; that the arms taken from the Filipinos be returned to them; that Filipino officers be permitted to enter the city with or without arms; that the Filipinos be permitted to share in the bounty of the captured city, that all negotiations be put in writing and confirmed by the commander of the American forces.

General Anderson referred the demand to General Merritt, who conferred with Admiral Dewey. The situation was becoming critical, and Dewey cabled to Washington for instructions. The president replied that there must be no joint occupation of Manila; that Insurgents and all others must recognize the authority of the United States, and that any means must be used necessary to that end.

General Merritt thereupon replied, August 20, to Aguinaldo, announcing that the Filipinos must withdraw from Manila and all its suburbs; they must repair the pumping station and turn on the water, for which service they should be paid, they would be given free navigation of the Pasig; Filipino officers would be permitted entrance and departure to and from Manila with or without arms; but as the major general had taken for his own use the palace at Malacañan, it could not be turned over to the Filipinos; the convents held by the Insurgents at Malate, Ermita, and Paco must be evacuated; civil offices were to be filled by Americans, but recommendations of Filipinos for appointments to subordinate offices would be gladly received; American soldiers without arms must be permitted to pass through the Filipino lines; and the hundred and fifty arms taken from the Filipinos would be returned.

General Merritt's reply was not satisfactory. Aguinaldo adhered to his demand that Filipino ships should be permitted and protected in the river and bay and waters controlled by us. He also asked for the assurance that in case the Americans should return the city to Spain, the Insurgents should be left in the possession of the positions they then held.

General Merritt replied that the protection asked of the American squadron was entirely within the jurisdiction of Admiral Dewey; that a joint occupation of Manila was impossible, and that Aguinaldo must withdraw his troops from the remaining positions in which he had left detachments. He also told Aguinaldo that as a military representative, it was impossible for him to make any promises in the event of a conclusion of a treaty of peace between Spain and the United States, but that he could rely upon the beneficent purposes of the United States.

Aguinaldo realized that he was losing ground and that his demands had not been effective. He wrote General Merritt to that effect, and called his attention to services rendered in the siege of Manila. He admitted that a dual occupation was not desirable, and promised to withdraw the Insurgents from the city and most of the suburbs, but requested that Admiral Dewey give free navigation to his boats and that we restore the positions he had relinquished, in the event our treaty with Spain resulted in a recognition of her dominion in the Philippines.

Not a moment was lost by the Insurgents in strengthening their positions, and large supplies of arms reached them. The Junta at Hong-Kong had not been idle. Arms and war munitions were sent to Dagupan and conveyed down the railway to the Insurgent headquarters at Malolos, for the Insurgents had repaired and taken possession of the entire line from Dagupan to Caloocan, just outside of Manila. Manager Higgins was permitted to continue in the direction of the railroad, but guards of Insurgent soldiers were placed on all the trains, and the road was operated for the benefit of the Insurgent government.

Aguinaldo had kept together his army of from thirty thousand to forty thousand men, had equipped them from all possible sources; had taken up the reins of the Spanish government and controlled the Island of Luzon, outside of Manila; had complete telegraphic communication with the chieftains of the provinces; had uniformed his troops and established a revolutionary government, which was apparently acceptable to the Filipinos of the Island. It is perhaps futile to speculate upon what might have been accomplished at this period had the American government been represented by diplomats instead of soldiers in the Philippines. Aguinaldo had, however, complied with our demands; he had opened a passage for us through his troops, laid siege to Manila, and assisted materially in expediting its surrender. The services of the Insurgents were valuable; they made our victory over the weak colonial forces of the Island easy, and therefore deserved, at that time, more consideration than they received. Had Aguinaldo and his coterie of generals been bound to us by gratitude and allied to us by a recognition of "part of the rights of a friendly people," war might have been averted; the revolutionary government might have expired of ennui, and instead of an angry and suspicious population pitted against us we might have had a large number of loyal troops, local governors, and petty Tagalog officials to assist us in controlling affairs in the Philippines. The crisis was at hand and our diplomacy was not equal to the occasion. It was of an order below that exercised by the Filipinos themselves. Thrown upon their own resources, ignored by the American authorities, they became obstreperous and sullen, unreasonable and assertive. This was the situation that confronted Major General E. S. Otis, who relieved General Merritt on the 29th of August, 1898.

When General Otis took command, he told Aguinaldo that the recognition of belligerency was a government function, and not a military one; that only his government could do that, and that unless the Insurgent forces were withdrawn from Manila, its suburbs and defences, he would be obliged to resort to forcible action.

Aguinaldo sent two commissioners to treat with General Otis and request that he withdraw the letter and issue another eliminating the threat to use force, claiming that the letter as written would incite the Insurgents to open hostility. General Otis refused to withdraw the letter, but acceded to the commissioners' desires and wrote another requesting the Insurgents to withdraw their troops. Aguinaldo replied by stating that he had given orders that troops should be withdrawn from "some of the suburbs and to a point where contact would be more difficult, in order to avoid all occasion for conflict."

The fight between the conservative and radical elements of the Malolos cabinet threatened to break into an open row. Mabini, Buencamino, and Pilar were anxious to precipitate hostilities with the Americans, while Arellano, Tavera, the Rosarios, and Sandico believed the diplomacy would accomplish them what war would fail in utterly. Aguinaldo executed a coup, dismissed his cabinet, and guided by the skilled hand of Paterno, secured a new cabinet with Paterno as prime minister.

Aguinaldo's removal from Bacoar to Malolos was celebrated like a Roman triumph. The day was made a great fiesta. Filipino national airs were played, and dignified ceremonies, orations, feasting, and jollity prevailed. Thousands upon thousands of natives assembled to honor Aguinaldo. The towns en route and beyond Malolos were decorated in gala attire. Triumphal arches were erected, and singing, dancing and feasting were the order of the day. At San Fernando a sumptuous banquet was given. Numerous American officers were invited and attended. Aguinaldo presided. During the dinner he was unusually silent. Despite many efforts it seemed impossible to arouse his interest or inspire a flicker of enthusiasm on his countenance. Toasts went round. Several Americans made guarded speeches. Aguinaldo remained impassive. Finally Major Byrnes, who spoke Spanish and some Tagalog, arose and made a very warm speech praising the valor and loyalty of the Filipinos. Still Aguinaldo sat unmoved. Major Byrnes continued, and just at the close of his remarks, referred to the generous intentions and disinterested purposes of the United States in the Philippines. Suddenly Aguinaldo's face was wreathed in smiles. Without a moment's warning he jumped on his chair and gave a yell like a college boy. "Champagne, champagne, champagne!" he cried out, reaching over and shaking Major Byrnes' hand. It is about the only incident on record in which Aguinaldo exhibited a spontaneous and warm regard for American occupation, although it is possible he misconstrued Major Byrnes' remark to please himself.

The unofficial opposition that existed in the United States to the demands made by our Paris commissioners for the Philippines aroused great excitement in the Filipino camp. Every speech that bolstered up the insurgents' aspirations was transmitted to Hong Kong and sent over to Manila, receiving publication in the Republica Filipina or La Independencia.

On September 24, Aguinaldo said to the Hon. John Barrett, who was in the Philippines: "Please inform the President, Congress, and the American people, that we are true friends of the Americans. We trust them to save us from Spanish misrule. All allegations of treachery toward the Americans are unfounded and unjust. I have never given an order, nor taken a step, that could be called treacherous. The only reason we are slow to evacuate our positions around Manila is because we are fearful Spain may yet try to occupy the same. The Articles of capitulations say the Americans will retain the arms of the Spaniard when either force leaves. America interfered in Cuba for humanity's sake. For the same reason it cannot retain these Islands. It is a mistake for the Americans to think we wish to fight them. All our hopes and plans are centered in opposition to Spanish rule. Many untruthful stories have been published. Will the Americans please be charitable and hear both sides before condemning the Filipinos?"

Aguinaldo was both willing and anxious to avoid hostilities, at least until the decision of the Paris conference was known. Into all parts of Luzon and to the principal ports of the southern islands he sent small detachments of Tagalogs. His relatives were given important positions. Baldomero Aguinaldo was made commander-in-chief of the south zone. His nephew was given an important command in the Cagayan province to the north, and his cousin, General Paua, was put in command of the Camarines. Proclamations declaring the Filipinos independent were distributed throughout the Archipelago. Civil governments were established recognizing the Malolos presidency, "the military to take precedence in the case of war." The skillful aid of General Luna was brought into requisition. He organized the Insurgents upon an army basis. He gave command to Filipinos who had held petty offices under the crown forces, and soon succeeded in converting a disorganized horde of armed natives into a disciplined and carefully distributed force. Luna was a radical element from the start, and eager to test the efficiency of his organization.

GEN. JOSE IGNACIO

The Philippina, a merchant ship captured from the Spanish, which figured in the Subic Bay incident, was armed with two 3-inch guns; she visited the various ports of the Islands, and distributed companies of Tagalog soldiers to insure the allegiance of the natives, collect funds, and establish the Filipino government. The telegraph lines destroyed during the insurrection of 1897 were rebuilt, and a postal service was created. A set of stamps was printed, and a stamp tax enforced. The season was an especially prosperous one for the Filipinos. The foreign merchant ships were permitted to carry on an unrestricted trade, and free from the severe Spanish revenue taxes took active advantage of the opportunity. The Filipinos, relieved of the burdens imposed upon them by the friars and the Spaniards, realized the full benefit of their industry and the sale of their products. The Insurgent government levied a small export tax, but its principal source of revenue at that time was from contributions of the rich half-castes and the Chinese merchants. Large amounts were also taken from the friars, and sympathizers in Manila secretly contributed to the cause.

The revolutionary government was universally recognized throughout the Islands, except in Manila and seaports still held by the Spanish.

The period from our military occupation of Manila up to the outbreak was one of the most interesting and complex in the trend of events. At Malolos the keenest minds in the Filipino race were bending every effort to extend and solidify the power of Aguinaldo throughout the Archipelago. Three thousand miles of telegraph wire was in control of the Insurgent government. Swift runners brought and carried messages into the most remote part of the Islands. Captured launches and Chinese junks plied between the various ports and islands, and proclamations, orders, arms, and ammunition were distributed. The revolutionary government was recognized by the Filipinos and native races, in some instances willingly, in others by force. Police and civil guards were established in the principal towns, and the railroad was utilized at will by the Insurgent officials. The Filipino farmers were taken into the army, drilled and organized and sent back to their crops. The women worked in the fields in the enforced absence of their husbands and preparations were made, stores were husbanded, and munitions brought into the Islands preparatory to a military campaign. In Manila secret agents of the Insurgent government raised large sums, sometimes by voluntary subscription, sometimes by intimidation. The wealthy Chinese in Manila and throughout the Islands were induced to contribute largely to the revolutionary cause. Paterno, the mediator, the publicist, the rich steamship owner and planter, who had cried out with equal fervor, "Viva los Filipinos," and "Viva la España," was again the fold and installed as president of the revolutionary congress, which voted Aguinaldo a salary of $25,000 a year and $50,000 for expenses. More parades at Malolos and San Fernando were given, banquets were held, and dances followed. Enthusiasm was rampant. The Filipinos, anxious to impress the Americans, invited them freely to witness their ceremonies. They were received with great cordiality and enthusiasm, and given places of honor at dinners and social functions. The hospitality of the Filipinos was boundless and their pride limitless. * * *

Aguinaldo's presence upon any occasion was marked with the utmost ceremony and

PEDRO A. PATERNO

Aguinaldo's presence upon any occasion was marked with the utmost ceremony and parade. The people worshipped him and covered his path with flowers, the children dropped on their knees at his approach, and the natives doffed their hats in reverence. Their love of feasts, music, and dancing was given full rein, and Aguinaldo made triumphal tours in the cities along the railroad line, his appearance arousing the Filipinos to a fervor resembling religious frenzy. Triumphal floral arches were erected, mass meetings of enormous proportions were held, and the prettiest girls in the village, dressed in the colors of the Filipino flag blended with the stars and stripes, were hailed and cheered with delight, for the Filipino leaders assured the inhabitants that the Americans sanctioned their government. So generally was this accepted that in one instance a governor of a northern province, upon learning in December of the signing of the Treaty of Peace at Paris, disbanded the Insurgent militia and proclaimed a civil government.

The spirit of liberty dominated the hearts of the people, and the vanity of power took possession of Aguinaldo and the Filipino leaders. Our advice and friendship, our indulgence—even the presence of Americans at their functions—were construed as a recognition of their Independence.

The universal sentiment of the Insurgent officers, civil and military, and of leading townspeople proved to be virtually the same. They all declared they would accept nothing short of independence, but desired the protection of the United States at sea.

Aguinaldo had an organized military force in every province of the north. Insurgent soldiers were everywhere, arms were plentiful and ammunition abundant. There were rifles enough for all, principally Remingtons, but many Mausers. In every quarter there were at least as many rifles as soldiers in the garrison. Ammunition was so plentiful that the native used it freely in hunting for deer. Colonel Tirona claimed that two hundred thousand men from all the Islands could be put into the field well armed; and several other Insurgent officers, independently questioned, gave the same figure. Every officer carried a Spanish sword and revolver constantly, but regarded them with contempt, preferring the bolo at close quarters. The military spirit pervaded the north where every town and barrio had organized companies, even enlisting the children, who were drilled every day.

Arms and ammunition continued to find their way into Luzon. On the 27th of August the Abby, alias Pasig, flying the American flag, having received American register at Canton, arrived at Batangas. It was commanded by an American, and delivered to the Insurgents about 500 rifles, 500,000 rounds of ammunition, two Maxim guns, and 2000 rounds of Maxim ammunition. Accompanying the expedition was another American whose purpose was to instruct the Filipino in the use of the rapid-firing guns. Admiral Dewey, through information received from Consul General Wildman, sent the McCulloch to Batangas in September, and seized the Abby, but not until her cargo was landed. Arms even found their way into Manila Bay on merchant ships, and were landed under false labels. Funeral processions became so numerous in Manila that they aroused suspicions, and not without cause. In a number of instances caskets in hearses were found to be filled with Mausers, destined ostensibly for a suburban native cemetery.

The north of Luzon was ready for war. The revolutionary government controlled the old Spanish fortifications, and enlisted in its cause the wild tribes of the mountains.

On October 5, 1898, La Independencia, the organ of the Filipino Republic, was started in Manila. General Luna was its editor-in-chief. Associated with him were Marciano V. del Rosario, Vito Belarmino, and other members of the revolutionary congress. La Independencia began its career by hurling defiance to all who opposed the "final aspirations" of the Filipinos. "Governing all Luzon, we wish to show all nations that we are capable of governing ourselves," said La Independencia.

"We salute America, that powerful country with which we unite the bonds of sincerest friendship. Together we have fought, and in days of extreme danger we have felt our hearts beat in unison. Having declared war against Spain in the name of humanity, and being designated the champion of people oppressed by the Spanish government, she does not come here to make war against any party, nor to seize one strip of territory; her mission is greater and more generous, being inspired always by the Monroe Doctrine. Our cause should have her sympathy, that due to a young people who aspire to independence, having confidence in their own efforts, and nobleness of their cause. Our highest aim should be received with generous sympathy by the free nations. The independence of the United States met with the help and sympathy of the generous French.

"We salute the foreign nations, especially those who hold interests in the Philippines, expressing to them our strongest desire to continue in peace on the basis of our independence. We salute also our president, Citizen Aguinaldo, the life and soul of the revolution, and the government whose policy is the attraction for worth, honesty, and justice, also our valorous and suffering army whose chiefs and soldiers have fought and will fight to gain their nationality. We send our respects to the press of the Philippines and foreign parts, recommending ourself to their acquaintance."

This publication had a large circulation, and day after day was an ardent champion of Filipino independence. Its office was the gathering-place of the Filipino leaders, and its editorials and correspondence were prepared and gone over with the greatest deliberation and painstaking.

Published within the American lines and circulated freely in the city, it excited the people and aroused the Spanish residents to a point of frenzy. After several weeks General Otis suppressed the publication. Its offices and plant were thereupon removed to Malolos. La Independencia played a very important part in the revolution. * * *

The Manila sympathizers told the revolutionists that the American commander was a Catholic, and was in a daily communication with the archbishop; that the Church of Rome kept him in power, and that it was his aim to restore the old régime of Catholic orders in the Islands; that through Archbishop Nozeleda he had won over Arellano who was the attorney for the archbishop, and that the Church and State were in league as of old. Further, that the American Army chaplains were Catholics, and held services with the Spanish priests in the cathedral.

Another point of discord was the coming of Chinese coolies, who flocked to the Islands by thousands to take places as servants and day laborers, and to profit by the high prices and disturbed conditions. The industrious and cheap-living Chinaman had always been a cause of irritation to the Tagalog, and his presence in the Islands was never wholly acceptable to the Filipino. General Otis, therefore, to solve the problem and conciliate the Filipinos issued an order enforcing the Chinese Exclusion Act, excepting only previous residents of Manila who had migrated during and just preceding the American occupation of Cavite and Manila. * * *

There were numerous Spanish garrisons throughout the Islands, and the fact that we permitted them to remain unmolested annoyed the Insurgents. General Otis held that pending the signing of the Peace Treaty, all territory outside of Manila was still under Spanish jurisdiction. Six hundred Spanish soldiers were besieged at Santa Cruz, in Laguna de Bay; Albay was held by a Spanish garrison; also the principal town of Naulu and South Camarines and Nueva Caceres, the provinces of North and South Ilocos, Isabela, and Cagayan were held by the Spanish. Two hundred and fifty crown soldiers were at Morong, and as far as could be ascertained the Spanish garrisons in Cebu, Iloilo, Leyte, and Mindanao still held out. Because our forces had ceased to operate against the Spaniards, the Filipino leaders were tortured with the fear that we would return the Islands to Spain. They failed to realize that we did not cherish the bitter enmity toward Spain that possessed them, nor could they comprehend why, on the eve of an overwhelming victory, we should cease in the prosecution of a campaign that offered assured success. Aguinaldo and the Insurgent leaders were anxious for the absolute annihilation of Spanish power. They did not fear us, but entertained a terrible dread of Spanish methods. "The Filipinos desire to live in peace and harmony with the Americans," wrote Aguinaldo, October 22, 1898.

"because they will take care that the Philippines do not return under the odious Spanish dominion."

It was very clear that the Filipino leaders were determined upon independence; were opposed irrevocably to the return of Spanish rule; were willing to allow us to protect them in the accomplishment of their ambitions. They knew what they did not want, but varied in their statements of what they did want.

The outcome of the peace Conference was awaited with great impatience. Felipe Agoncillo had been sent to Paris to secure a hearing in the interests of the Filipino government. Much to his chagrin he was given no place in the commission.

The Asiatic coast adventurers, clinging to the skirts of Filipino aspirations, profiting in pocket, agitated the press of America with stories of the greatness of Aguinaldo and the fitness of the Filipinos for self-government. The superficial fanatic in the United States took up the cry and demanded for the fledgling government national recognition. "We want facts to strengthen the arguments for your wished-for independence in the coming election," wrote the president of an American league to Aguinaldo.

On a trip to Dagupan, in company with Mr. Horace Higgins, the general director of the railway, we discovered at Malolos that Aguinaldo had placed a guard of six Insurgents upon the car ahead of us, to "insure our safety," we were politely informed. Our protectors, however, spent most of their time in watching our actions. At Dagupan I saw several good-sized sailingships, war canoes rigged with canvas, and large cascoes anchored in the Dagupan River, flying the Insurgent flag. Miles of track along the railroad had been stripped of the fish-plates, which were taken by the Insurgents and made into crude bolos, or daggers, with wooden or carabao horn handles and bamboo sheaths. Large quantities of telegraph wire had been stolen and wound around bamboo for cannons or used in the extension of Insurgent telegraph lines. Mr. Higgins was powerless to prevent their depredations.

General Whittier, ex-collector of the port, visited Malolos and endeavored to find out precisely what Aguinaldo represented, that he might present his views before the Paris commission. Aguinaldo told him that his people were divided into two parties, those in favor of absolute independence and those of an American protectorate; that the parties were about equal; that he was waiting to see which would have the majority, and in that case would take a position. General Whittier pointed out to Aguinaldo the advantage of American sovereignty. Aguinaldo replied that "the civilized nations would see that our possessions were not taken from us." General Whittier asked him what he expected of America. "To furnish the navy, while the Filipinos held all the country and administered civil offices with its own people." "And what would America get from this?" General Whittier asked. "That would be a detail that would be settled hereafter," replied Aguinaldo. Buencamino, Aguinaldo's chief adviser at this time told General Whittier he was sure the President was in favor of an American protectorate. Thus the house was divided against itself.

In America a policy was rapidly crystallizing. President McKinley made a tour of the country, delivering speeches and gathering the consensus of opinion of the people everywhere. He became convinced that the sentiment of the country was in favor of the retention of the Philippines. The Americans were imbued with the spirit of the "White Man's Burden," and liked the idea of extending the sovereignty of the republic over a people suffering under the atrocities of mediaeval rule. They favored intervention in Cuba, and they were not willing that the flag should be lowered in the Philippines. The victory of Dewey was the pride of every American, and the vast majority was desirous of extending our domain in the Orient. The sentimentalist and the humanitarian realized the opportunity to free a suffering people from the tyrannies of an unjust government, and the American business man saw opportunities to broaden his commercial relations and control a new and productive field.

As soon as it became evident to the Insurgents that the Americans were opposed to the restoration of Spanish sovereignty, that question caused to be a factor in the situation. While it became apparent to the American people and the commissioners in Paris that our duty was to retain the Philippines, it became evident that the Insurgents proposed to contest our occupation and demand the recognition of the Filipino republic. The erstwhile lieutenant of the crown forces had become a brigadier general of the Filipino army; the lay-reader of the Spanish priests had clothed himself in the robes of his superior; the law student had become a judge; the tiller of soil and the bearer of burdens had become soldiers of the republic; and the rebel chieftain, who was prolific in his protestations of friendship and gratitude to the "great North American nation," aspired to be the "George Washington of his people."

Despite these declarations, our army remained idle and extended to the Filipino friendly consideration. Our soldiers were barricaded in old buildings, improvised shacks, or upon the open field; they slept on hard floors and stretched out upon the uncovered ground; they guarded over the property of the insurrectionists and the Spaniards with equal vigilance. Liberty and license as practised by the Old-World invading armies were unknown. Ill-clothed, unkempt, and dressed in rough campaign suits, the appearance of the American soldier provoked the contempt of the dapper Filipino general. The Spanish taught them a new word, "Yancos," and they applied it to the American with contempt.

On December 10 the treaty of peace with Spain was signed in Paris, and its terms were soon known to the Insurgent government. The greatest activity followed. A large residence was rented in Manila and the Filipino Club was formed. All prominent Insurgent officials became members. The club worked in close sympathy with the revolutionary government, and while ostensibly devoted to social and athletic diversions, its chief occupation was the promulgation of the doctrine of independence, and the organization of a semi-military league in the city. From time to time our police unearthed small native and Chinese shops, where, in inconspicuous and inaccessible back rooms, bolos were being made and Insurgent uniforms manufactured. At this time the Spanish generals, holding the southern islands pending the signing of the treaty of peace, released large numbers of native soldiers who had been serving in the Spanish army. These were shipped to Manila, where, finding themselves without pay or means of support, they went over to the Insurgent army, many of these being given important commissions in recognition of their military experience.

The Insurgents in Panay began to make themselves heard. The Spanish force, then, was eight hundred, but over two hundred were sick or wounded. The Insurgents harassed them incessantly, assembling in large numbers across the river opposite Iloilo at Molo, where they were strongly intrenched. The Spanish gunboats commanded the river and checked the attempt on the part of the Insurgents to cross the river and storm Iloilo. Early in December, the business men of the city sent a petition to General Otis asking for American protection, stating that the Insurgents were reported to be favorable for annexation. General Otis reported this to Washington, and was instructed to send troops, but avoid a conflict with the Insurgents. General Rios, however, did not wait for the arrival of our forces, but evacuated Iloilo on the 23rd of December and handed the town over to the Insurgents, who immediately took possession. General Miller, who had charge of the Iloilo expedition, took aboard two hundred discharged native crown soldiers, who had been dumped into Manila, and were anxious, they said, to return to their homes in Panay. The act was intended as an expression of kindness on our part to assist a penniless body of men to return to their homes. Had General Miller's parpung om; asay; 1893 unkon 1893 were pledged to Aguinaldo, and that their leader bore instructions to General Araneta, the Insurgent commander of the forces in Panay, to resist American occupation, the destination of these cunning Tagalogs would have been in Fort Santiago. But he was ignorant of the mutinous intent of his guests, and they were landed upon the coast of Panay, near Iloilo, promising to prepare the way for our coming. They disappeared, and promptly joined their brothers in arms, and subsequently caused a great deal of trouble in Panay.

In reflecting upon, how the native juggled with our credulity and ignorance, were the results not so serious it would almost encroach upon the ludicrous. Chattering and prattling in a dozen jargons, their language as incomprehensible as their character, we accepted their protestations and vows of friendship, while they plotted and planned to thwart our intentions. When time shall have healed the wound, it will be the theme for the opera bouffe.

On the 28th of December, 1898, the Arizona and Pennsylvania anchored off Point Luzaron, thirty miles from Iloilo, and the Baltimore and Newport entered the harbor. An aid from the Insurgent brigadier, General Delgado, sought an interview with General Miller, and asked him our intentions. Upon informing the Insurgent general that our troops had come to occupy the city, Delgado replied that he could yield nothing without instructions from Aguinaldo. The president of the Insurgent government, President Lopez, further notified General Miller that the people would consent to no foreign interference, without express orders from the central government at Luzon. The leading foreign business men of Manila petitioned General Miller to consider the demand of the Insurgents. Upon learning the conditions and the probable result of forcible occupation of Iloilo, General Otis instructed General Miller, in accordance with a despatch from Washington, not to be in haste, but to remain in the harbor with his force and await further orders. General Otis transmitted a modified copy of President McKinley's proclamation, December 21, for Miller's instruction. The proclamation was published by General Miller and distributed among the Insurgents and residents of Iloilo. It caused the utmost consternation, and brought forth a tirade of abuse and defiance against the American government.

The proclamation announced that by the treaty of peace between Spain and the United States, the future control, disposition, and government of the Philippine Islands were ceded to the United States; that the actual occupation and administration of the entire Archipelago became, therefore, immediately necessary, and that the military government was to be extended with all possible despatch over the entire territory. The private, personal, and religious rights and relations of the inhabitants were guaranteed. Inhabitants, either by active aid or honest submission, who cooperated with the government were promised support and protection, but all others were warned that they would be brought within the lawful rule of the United States. The civil and municipal governments were to be operated by officers, chosen as far as practicable from the inhabitants of the Islands. Arbitrary rule was to be substituted by the mild sway of justice, and the greatest good of those governed was promised. The proclamation was sneered and laughed at, and copies of it were sent to Malolos.

The Insurgents raised their flag over the old Spanish fort, dug trenches, fortified the harbor, sunk cascoes loaded with stones at the mouth of the Talana River, for they were now in absolute possession of the Island of Panay. Foreign vessels continued to trade with Iloilo, took and landed cargoes, assuming all risks, and thus large amounts of money reached the Insurgent treasury. Under the same conditions ships were going and coming from most of the ports throughout Luzon and the southern islands. The crops had been large, and the trade was most profitable to both the foreigners and the Filipinos, who levied duties upon the foreigners and a war tax upon the inhabitants.

Before issuing the President's proclamation in Manila, General Otis counselled with a number of the leading "Pacifcos" and prominent Filipinos of the city. Upon learning from an Iloilo messenger the final intentions of the United States, there arose the utmost confusion among the revolutionists, who plainly told General Otis that the document would not be received with favor. The contents of the Iloilo proclamation upset the Malolos congress, and the entire cabinet was overthrown. Mabini regained his power over the deputies, was elected president of the Congress and Minister of Foreign Affairs, and proclaimed a policy of independence or death. Teodoro Sandico appeared upon the scene again, and was drawn to the side of the "Irreconcilables" and made Minister of the Interior; Baldomero Aguinaldo was appointed Minister of War; General Trias, Minister of Finance; Gregorio Gonzaga, formerly Spanish Attorney General of the Vizcayas, was made Minister of Public Works. Aguinaldo and Paterno withdrew to Santa Ana, and the status of the dictatorial president was in durance for some days, for it was said he strenuously opposed the warlike attitude of Mabini. The "Pacificos" were utterly routed, and the military element was in the ascendant.

Mabini, the "Irreconcilable," demanded the recognition of the independence of the Philippines, and announced that he would only release the Spanish prisoners upon the receipt of propositions directly from Spain, which recognized the Filipinos as belligerents. The friars, he said, would not be released, seeing that they had acted as papal agents during the war, except upon the following conditions: firstly, the apostolic delegate must ask for their liberty in the name of the Pope; secondly, all bills and pontifical decrees granting special privileges to the religious orders must be removed; thirdly, all rites of the secular clergy must be respected; fourthly, no friar may hold any parish, cathedral, episcopate, or diocesan preferments; fifthly, all such preferments to be held by native or naturalized Filipino clergy; and sixthly, rules for the election of bishops must be fixed.

Mabini started out with a high hand. Aguinaldo was given little consideration. Even were he anxious for more moderation, as was generally believed at the time, his counsel was ignored. We began to discriminate between the real Aguinaldo and the composite that had fooled us.

In the midst of his uproar General Otis, on January 4, issued a proclamation amending the President's instructions to the Secretary of War. It varied little, however, from the original, issued at Iloilo, and already in the hands of the Malolos government, except what is stated that the controlling elements among the Filipinos would be given civil positions; that considerable of the military force of the Islands would be drawn from the inhabitants, and that the aim of the American government was to eventually give the people as free and independent a government as is enjoyed by the most favored provinces of the world.

The proclamation of General Otis was gratifying to foreign residents and American troops in the Philippines. It assured them that the government was determined to "see the thing through," but as a pacific measure it was absolutely valueless. Conservative business men, long residents of the Philippines, predicted an immediate outbreak of hostilities. The natives tore the proclamation from the walls and trampled upon it. Many of the wealthy Filipinos transferred their property to Spanish attorneys, and thousands of natives left the city to join the Insurgents. The Escalita, the main thoroughfare of Manila, was rife with rumors that attempts would be made to burn the city and that an uprising of the natives might be expected at any moment. Even the Filipino women declared, in a paper drawn up and signed by a large number, that they would resist the Americans, side by side with their husbands and sons, and would shed every drop of blood in their veins for the independence of their country.

La Independencia was violent in its abuse of the Americans, and exhorted every man, woman and child to arm themselves and die for liberty. Spanish sympathizers and half-castes told the Filipinos that Americans sought the Islands to satisfy the greed and ambition of political office-seekers, and that the American people did not favor the subjugation of the Filipinos. Mabini advocated a declaration of war. Former subterfuges that the Filipino army only aimed to defend itself against the crown forces should we turn the Islands back to Spain, were brushed aside, and independence or death was the unqualified demand set forth.

On the day following General Otis' proclamation Aguinaldo caused to be posted in the streets of Manila, and distributed generally, a virtual declaration of war. In this document he reviewed the events, from the beginning, pointed out the assistance his troops had been to our forces, called attention to the action of Admiral Dewey in seizing his launches, protested against the action of General Otis in forcing him to withdraw his forces, reiterated his assertions that consular promises had been given him, referred to our operations in Iloilo harbor, and concluded by threatening hostilities if we attempted to occupy Iloilo. An official manifesto was published simultaneously, in which Aguinaldo protested against General Otis signing himself the military governor of the Philippine Islands. He declared that he had never by word or writing recognized the sovereignty of the United States in the Philippines, but on the contrary, in all his official proclamations had proclaimed the liberty and independence of the Filipinos, and that he solemnly protested against the claims of the United States. "There must be no turning back in the path we have already entered," concluded the manifesto. Aguinaldo then addressed a letter to foreigners in Manila, offering them protection should hostilities occur between the Filipinos and Americans. General Otis ordered Aguinaldo's proclamation torn down and destroyed.

The month of January, 1889, was a reign of terror. The American volunteers, chafing under restraint and taunted by the Filipinos, were difficult to control. The insurgent newspapers were violent and uncompromising, and accused the Americans of unjust treatment and the American soldiers of indiscriminate use of force against innocent Filipino residents. They complained against the shooting of stragglers who passed in the vicinity of American fortifications. The native population was between the devil and the deep sea. Terrorized by the insurgents, and distrusted by the American soldiers, they were in a state of sullen fear. Those employed by Americans were bullied and tyrannized by the revolutionists into leaving their posts, and extortionate demands for money were enforced against every Filipino of prominence. Hundreds of natives were pressed into the insurgent army, and fearing assassination at the hand of the Katipunans, it became impossible to hire natives to perform the most trifling services. Even the Chinese shared this feeling of terror and huddled together in their quarters, afraid to stir outside of the section of the city where they outnumbered the Filipinos.

It is an open question whether or not the breach between us and the Filipinos at that time could have been healed. Our policy was formulated and announced. Theirs was apparent. We well knew what they demanded. It simply remained to be seen whether they would "see the error of their ways," or whether they would persist in an unequal struggle. President McKinley thought that they would realize our benevolent purpose and recognize that before we could give them good government our sovereignty must be conceded and unquestioned. He urged that tact and kindness was most essential at that time, as we had accepted the Philippines from a high sense of duty in the interests of their inhabitants and for humanity and civilization.

He was both right and wrong. The Filipinos refused to see conditions from our point of view, and we declined to acknowledge their claims.

A peace commission was arranged in hopes of arriving at something definite. Brigadier General R. P. Hughes, Colonel James F. Smith, and Lieutenant Colonel E. H. Crowder were named by General Otis. Aguinaldo appointed Florentino Torres, Eufrasio Flores, and Manuel Arguelles. The committees met daily for nearly three weeks. The Filipinos maintained that all territory outside of Manila belonged to the insurgents by right of occupancy and conquest; that the Filipinos were engaged in a war with Spain just as America was, and that while America had taken Cavite and Manila, the Filipinos had taken the rest of the Archipelago. Colonel Crowder questioned the force of their arguments, and asked them how they could prove that they had captured the territory they claimed.

"We can prove it by seven thousand prisoners," a Filipino commissioner replied.

The efforts of the commission were fruitless. They were unable to convince the Filipinos that freedom did not necessarily mean national freedom; that self-government did not imply national government; that the recognition of the rights of the Filipinos did not call for a recognition of the sovereignty of the Filipino republic.

The man who supported the Filipino claim with the greatest ability and the most uncompromising stubbornness was Torres. As in the case of Arellano, Torres was one of the first to withdraw from the revolutionists and accept a judgeship by appointment of General Otis. Before the fall of Manila Torres held a judicial position at Cebu, under the Spanish government.

While the commissioners were talking peace, the Malolos congress promulgated, on January 21, the "Constitution of the Republica Filipina." Aguinaldo promptly transmitted a copy to General Otis, and notified him to the effect that the recognition of the Filipinos' constitution was the proper method to insure general peace. Article 2 stated that "The Philippine republic is free and independent." The constitution, while rather hazy on the question of popular suffrage, was very clear as to the rights of the executive, whose election was to be by the majority of Congress. Separation of the Church and State was specified, and the property of the religious corporations was to be "returned to the state." Personal freedom, the inviolability of home, correspondence, effects, the telegraph and telephone, and the person of the Filipino were guaranteed, also free speech, a free press, and free education. "Arbitrary penalties," "Private laws," "Special tribunals," and "Unearned emoluments" were declared unconstitutional. In many parts the constitution was modelled upon American lines, but was non-committal and general upon points relative to the exact part the people were to take in the elections. "The assembly shall represent the entire nation and not exclusively those who elect them" (Article 34). "It is the prerogative of the President to convoke it, suspend and close its sessions, and dissolve it" (Article 36).

In the Senate of the United States and in some of the newspapers of America there appeared expressions of sympathy with Filipino aspirations. Numerous Americans were opposed to the idea of making war upon a people who made such a favorable showing. It was contrary to our traditions to oppose a country striving for independence, but it was not at variance with our Constitution to put down a rebellious faction. Expressions of opinion, opposing the course of the American government, were transmitted by Agoncillo, at that time in Washington, and by other revolutionary representatives, to the Hong-Kong Junta, who promptly forwarded them to Malolos. Consul General Wildman had repeated evidence of the operations of the Junta and their association with American and English adventures, but was powerless to take action against them, except in so far as the apprehending of the shipments of arms, in which he largely succeeded.

"We have arms enough in Luzon now," said one of the paid agents of the Junta to a newspaper correspondent. "We are not trying to send any more. Consul Wildman is having all his pains for nothing. Admiral Dewey's ships cannot patrol the whole coast of Luzon."

From a score of sources statements were transmitted to Aguinaldo and Mabini that the majority of the American people were in favor of recognizing the independence of the Filipinos; and that in order to solve the perplexing question our government would sell the Philippines to Germany or Japan or some foreign power, but that in any event the status of the friars would not be interfered with. There were the pitch balls that the revolutionary leaders threw out among the people.

Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's Minister Plenipotentiary, on January 11, 1899, published and submitted a "Memorandum relative to the right of the Philippine Republic to Recognition," addressed to the Secretary of State. Agoncillo stated that the Filipinos, having expelled the government of Spain from the Islands, were entitled to recognition as an independent republic. The plea was not officially recognized by the State Department. Three other commissioners from the revolutionary government appeared at Washington, Dr. Lozada, Juan Luna, and Captain Martin Burgos. None of these emissaries, nor their protests against the ratification of the Treaty of Paris received official recognition by the American government nor the favorable attention of Congress.

PART OF THE LAWTON'S AMMUNITION TRAIN DRAWN BY CARABAOS

In Manila at the news of the outbreak of hostilities the excitement was intense. The theaters and concert halls were in full blast and hundreds of Americans and Filipinos were enjoying the festivities. At the alarm both forces made a rush for their posts. Carriages, street-cars, and horses, irrespective of the owners, were pressed into service. Manager Higgins and his wife of the Manila and Dagupan Railway were in Manila. He succeeded in getting an engine through the lines to his home in Caloocan where he had left his children. Within a few minutes after the first shot the crack of the Springfield and the ping of the Mauser ran along the entire lines. The Nebraskans of General Hale's brigade, under Colonel John M. Stotsenberg, bore the brunt of the first fighting. Yelling and shouting, San Miguel's forces made a desperate attempt to cross the San Juan River and bridge. The Utah battery opened on the enemy's position across the stream and drove them back in confusion. All night the Nebraskans and Insurgents kept up a fearful fusillade across the San Juan creek and bridge. The Filipinos attempted to cross the stream in cascoes, but were forced to retire. They then made a stand in blockhouse No. 7, which commanded an eminence to the left of the bridge, and from there and from the old Spanish arsenal up the Santa Mesa road across the bridge they kept up a hot fire until daylight. In the afternoon of the next day, Sunday, a detachment of the Tennessees crossed the river a mile to the right of the bridge, and moved upon the left flank of San Miguel's forces, enfilading their intrenchments, driving them into the open, exposing them to the Nebraskans' fire, two companies of which forced the enemy's position at the San Juan bridge, and scattering them in all directions, taking the arsenal after a stubborn fight. The Utah battery shelled blockhouse No. 7, and the Nebraskans moved up the hill and drove the Insurgents out, chasing them across the open country, up the ravines and over the hills to the reservoir, two miles from the bridge.

The reservoir is located on the brow of a hill, and is a natural fort, high earthworks extending around its entire surface. Resting until Monday at noon, Hale's brigade advanced in a line of skirmishers up to the base of the hill upon which the reservoir is built. The Utah battery took a position commanding the enemy, and sent in a number of well-placed shells which drove terror to the hearts of the Filipinos. Simultaneously the Nebraskans charged up the steep incline under a hot fire, and with fixed bayonets drove the enemy back from the breastworks in confusion. Through the thickets, over the rocks and hedges, and pell-mell over the walls of the vaulted reservoir, the Nebraskans plunged with fearful recklessness. Contesting every inch of the ground, the Insurgents gradually retreated, leaving seventy-nine dead upon the top of the reservoir. Following up this position Colonel Stotsenberg, at nine o'clock Monday morning, with a battalion of Nebraskans and Young's battery, started for the pumping station four miles down the Santa Mesa road, along which ran the water mains. The Insurgents opened fire from protected positions, but the taste of American warfare they had the day before made them disinclined to challenge a battle in the open. Two companies of the Colorados took a parallel position in the advance which completely commanded the ridge along which the road ran. Two killed and three wounded comprised the casualties of the day. Arriving at the pumping station, it was discovered that several important parts of the machinery were missing; but so hasty had been the Insurgents' retreat that the plant was not seriously crippled, and the parts were soon found. Several of the native operators came out of hiding, and some were captured. The machinery was soon put in order, and the waterworks was started. The important movement was conducted with a spirit and fearlessness that astounded the Filipinos and scattered them in fright across the Mariquina Valley and over the hills of Antipolo.

The insurgent defenses to the south of Manila were strong enough, if protected by artillery, to withstand almost any force. Besides six substantial blockhouses closely placed, there existed a perfect network of trenches sunk six feet deep. Back of these ran a continual line of earthworks protecting a deep trench from the bay to San Pedro Macati. The Insurgents fairly furrowed the ground with pits, and threw up field works which they considered impregnable. They believed themselves prepared to resist artillery fire, but they evidently did not count upon the close proximity of Dewey's ships. On Sunday morning the Monadnock moved over alongside the Malate suburbs, and threw a rain of shell into the enemy's position that put the "fear of God into them," as one private expressed it. General Ovenshine's brigade immediately followed up the naval action and drove the enemy pell-mell out of their fortifications, through Pasay and across the fields and through the jungles and marshes to Parañaque.

Brigadier General Charles King, was stationed to the left of General Ovenshine, reaching to the Pasig River. Two hundred and thirty of the Insurgents opened fire in the vicinity of blockhouse No. II. Six companies of the Washingtons and the First Idahos, with Hawthorn's battery, consisting of the Astor guns, started across the Santa Ana bridge and the little estuary, a branch of the Pasig, that divided the two forces. The Washingtons plunged into the creek and dashed across the rice fields, but to the left the Insurgents held the old convent of Concordia and the Norwegian Consul's wall-enclosed house. General King ordered the Californians to move on the Convent and Consul's house, and with a determined rush, under heavy fire, they surrounded the Insurgents, dislodged them, and they were cut off and chased by the Idahos toward Santa Ana. Two Krupp guns were captured, King's brigade drove the Insurgents out of Santa Ana and pushed on two miles to the walls of Guadalupe and the headquarters of Pio del Pilar at San Pedro Makati. Santa Ana was burned by the retreating Filipinos. The American loss was seven. One hundred and fifty-six Filipinos were buried by our troops the next day.

Colonel Funston gave the Filipinos a sharp chase over the Caloocan to the north of Manila road on the evening of the outbreak. On Sunday morning General H. G. Otis' brigade drove the Insurgents out of the blockhouses and advanced through a hard, uneven country, up a gradual slope toward La Loma cemetery and the Chinese church. The Insurgents made a determined stand behind the walls of the old cemetery, and were sending a hot fire into the Third Artillery from the La Loma church. Grant's battery three shells over the Pennsylvanians, and Utahs and South Dakotas as they made a charge through the barb wire of fences and underbrush, and aided by the Montanas, Third Artillery, and Dakotas, who dashed up the ridge and through the cemetery, fell upon the Insurgents from three sides and drove them out of the church and mud forts, and chased them across the great rice fields toward Caloocan, and up the Novaliches road until they disappeared in the woods. Our losses in the general advance were about one hundred and sixty killed, and about as many wounded. We buried over seven hundred of the enemy's dead, found on the field.

The following Friday, February 10, General MacArthur's left advanced on Caloocan, the Monadnock shelling the Insurgents' positions for thirty minutes. In two hours Funston was in Caloocan, Major Kobbe with the Third Artillery having flanked the enemy with the Kansas and Montanas, while Major Bell made a daring movement to the right and diverted the Insurgents' fire. The line swung like a great pendulum, and the enemy fell back in confusion, burning the town as they retreated across the fields toward the Novaliches road. Eighty of our men were killed and thirty wounded. Seventy-nine dead Insurgents were found in the field. Our losses in these engagements were twelve officers, fifty-nine privates and two hundred and sixty-four wounded.

Our lines now extended from Caloocan in a semicircle around the city to Pasay, with a four-mile protruding angle reaching to the pumping station, occupying all the strong positions previously held by the Insurgents, and controlling the Pasig River with the Laguna de Bay. In the meantime, on February 9, San Roque, a little nipa-hut town across a narrow neck of land from Cavite, was attacked by Colonel Loper, with a detachment of troops. The previous day, Admiral Dewey, under a flag of truce, gave the Insurgents an opportunity to surrender; but taking advantage of the twenty-four hours allowed, they saturated the principal buildings with kerosene, and at the approach of our men, burned the town and escaped to the hills.

The Insurgent loss in the week's fighting has been estimated from one thousand to three thousand, but the first figure is probably nearer the truth. The Filipino soldiers showed a great deal of grit and, considering the great odds they fought against, made a hard fight. The American artillery demoralized them, and the flank movements and enfilading tactics of the infantry aroused the greatest consternation among the rebel forces."

HERO OF TILA PASS

GEN. GREGORIO DEL PILAR

With the scanty resources of the Filipino troops their defeat was naturally inevitable, yet they fought under the conviction that their duty and dignity as Filipinos demanded of them the sacrifice of defending to the best of their ability the liberties of their country. In November, after the battle of Zapote Bridge, the American army again defeated Gen. Aguinaldo in several battles and drove him and his forces to Tarlac, thence to Cabanatuan, until he was finally forced to find shelter in the mountains of northern Luzon. It was on his retreat from Ilocos region to Cagayan valley that the youngest general of his army, Gregorio del Pilar, commanding the rear guard, was killed by the American detachment headed by Lieut. Dennis P. Quinlan (lately Colonel of the U. S. Army in the Philippines) at the place called Tila Pass. On March 23, 1901, General Funston, with a force of eighty-eight men, captured General Aguinaldo at Palanan, Isabela, which event accelerated the close of the war. (12)

Dear General Aguinaldo,

I send herewith a copy of a letter from the French Consul at Manila regarding the taking of the steamer "Compania de Filipinas".

I replied to him that the forces under my command were in no way concerned in this affair, but that I would transmit his letter to you with a request that you would show due regard for French interests.

Yours sincerely

General,

I am encouraged by the friendly sentiments expressed by your Excellency in your welcome letter, received on the 5th instant, to endeavour to come to a definite understanding, which I hope will be advantageous to both.

Very soon we expect a large addition to our forces and it must be apparent to you as a military officer that we shall require much more in which to camp our soldiers, and also store room for supplies. For this, I should like to have your Excellency's advice and co-operation as you are best acquainted with the resources of this country.

It must be apparent to you that we do not intend to remain here inactive but to move promptly against our Common Enemy. But for a short we must organize and land supplies, also retain a place for storing them near our fleet and transports.

I am solicitous to avoid any conflict of authority which might result from having two sets of military officers exercising command in the same place.

I am also anxious to avoid sickness by taking sanitary precautions. Your sanitary medical officers have been making voluntary inspections with mine, and fear epidemic disease if the vicinity is not made clean. Would it not be well to have prisoners work to this end under the advice of the surgeon?

I again renew my assurance of distinguished considerations.

IN HIS INSTRUCTIONS OF APRIL 7, 1900, TO THE SECOND

tober 1, 1898, and proceed to the negotiation and conclusion of a treaty of peace, which treaty shall be subject to ratification according to the respective constitutional forms of the two countries.

ARTICLE VI

Upon the conclusion and signing of this protocol, hostilities between the two countries shall be suspended, and notice to that effect shall be given as soon as possible by each Government to the Commanders of its military and naval forces.

The Treaty of Paris.—As provided for in Articles IV and V of the preceding protocol, the two peace commissions assembled at Paris, France, the latter part of September, 1898.

The American Commissioners were:

HON. WILLIAM R. DAY, Secretary of State, who resigned to become President of the Commission;

HON. CUSHMAN K. DAVIS, Senator;

HON. WILLIAM P. FRYE, Senator;

HON. GEORGE GRAY, Senator;

HON. WHITELAW REID, former Minister to France, members.

The Spanish Commissioners were:

HON. EUGENIO MONTERO RIOS, President of the Senate, president of the Commission;

HON. BUENAVENTURA ABARZUA, Senator;

HON. JOSE DE GARNICA Y DIAZ, Associate Justice;

HON. WENCESLAO RAMIREZ DE VILLA-URRUTIA, Minister Plenipotentiary to the Belgian Court; and GENERAL RAFAEL CERERO Y SAENZ, members.

The Philippine question was taken up before the two peace commissions on October 31st. There had been divergence of opinion among the American Commissioners. Some favored demanding the entire Philippine Archipelago from Spain, while the others thought it advisable to only retain the Island of Luzon and certain other islands. But, after most thorough consideration of the subject, the Americans reached the conclusion that the cession must be of the whole Archipelago, to which Spain, opposed tenaciously maintaining that the peace protocol only contemplated a temporary occupation of the City of Manila and did not affect the Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines. However, the treaty of peace was concluded between the United States and Spain and signed at Paris by the plenipotentiaries on December 10, 1898. The treaty provided among other things, that Spain should cede to the United States the Philippine Islands, that the United States should pay to Spain the sum of twenty million dollars ($20,000,000.00) and that the civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories thus ceded to the United States should be determined by the Congress. The said "Treaty of Paris" was ratified by the U. S. Senate on February 6, 1899, and by the Cortes of Spain on March 19, same year. The ratifications were exchanged on April 11, 1899, and the treaty publicly proclaimed. On March 2, the Congress of the United States voted the sum of $20,000,000.00 and paid it over to Spain on May 1, 1899.

THE TREATY OF PARIS

TREATY OF PEACE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE KINGDOM OF SPAIN, SIGNED AT PARIS DECEMBER 10, 1898; RATIFICATION ADVISED BY THE SENATE FEBRUARY 6, 1899; RATIFIED BY THE PRESIDENT FEBRUARY 6, 1899; RATIFIED BY HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN REGENT OF SPAIN MARCH 19, 1899; RATIFICATIONS EXCHANGED AT WASHINGTON APRIL 11, 1899; PROCLAIMED, WASHINGTON, APRIL 11, 1899.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA— A PROCLAMATION

Whereas, a Treaty of Peace between the United States of America and Her Majesty the Queen Regent of Spain, in the name of her August Son, Don Alfonso XIII, was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Paris on the tenth day of December, 1898, the original of which Convention being in the English and Spanish languages is, word for word, as follows:

The United States of America and Her Majesty the Queen Regent of Spain, in the name of her august son Don Alfonso XIII, desiring to end the state of war now existing between the two countries, have for that purpose appointed as plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States,
William R. Day, Cushman K. Davis, William P. Frye, George Gray and Whitelaw Reid, citizens of the United States;

And Her Majesty the Queen Regent of Spain,

Don Eugenio Montero Rios, president of the Senate; Don Buenaventura de Abarzuza, senator of the Kingdom and ex-minister of the Crown; Don Jose de Garnica, deputy to the Cortes and associate justice of the supreme court; Don Wenceslao Ramirez de Villa Urrutia, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary at Brussels, and Don Rafael Cerero, General of Division;

Who, having assembled in Paris, and having exchanged their full powers which were found to be in due and proper form, have, after discussion of the matters before them, agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I

Spain relinquishes all claim of sovereignty over and title to Cuba.

And as the island is, upon its evacuation by Spain, to be occupied by the United States, the United States will, so long as such occupation shall last, assume and discharge the obligations that may under international law result from the fact of its occupation for the protection of life and property.

ARTICLE II

Spain cedes to the United States the Island of Porto Rico and other islands now under Spanish sovereignty in the West Indies, and the Island of Guam in the Marianas or Ladrones.

ARTICLE III

Spain cedes to the United States the archipelago known as the Philippine Islands, and comprehending the islands lying within the following lines:

A line running from west to east along or near the twentieth parallel of north latitude and through the middle of the navigable channel of Bachi, from the one hundred and eighteenth to the one hundred and twenty-seventh degree meridian of longitude east of Greenwich, thence along the one hundred and twenty-seventh degree meridian of longitude east of Greenwich to the parallel of four degrees and forty-five minutes north latitude, thence along the parallel of four degrees and forty-five minutes north latitude to its intersection with the meridian of longitude one hundred and nineteen degrees and thirty-five minutes east of Greenwich, thence along the meridian of longitude one hundred and nineteen degrees and thirty-five minutes east of Greenwich to the parallel of latitude seven degrees and forty minutes north, thence along the parallel of latitude seven degrees and forty minutes north to its intersection with the one hundred and sixteenth degree meridian of longitude east of Greenwich, thence by a direct line to the intersection of the tenth degree parallel of north latitude with the one hundred and eighteenth degree meridian of longitude east of Greenwich, and thence along the one hundred and eighteenth degree meridian of longitude east of Greenwich to the point of beginning.

The United States will pay to Spain the sum of twenty-million dollars, within three months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty.

ARTICLE IV

The United States will, for the term of ten years from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, admit Spanish ships and merchandise to the ports of the Philippine Islands on the same terms as ships and merchandise of the United States.

ARTICLE V

The United States will, upon the signature of the present treaty, send back to Spain, at its own cost, the Spanish soldiers taken as prisoners of war on the capture of Manila by the American forces. The arms of the soldiers in question shall be restored to them.

Spain will, upon the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, proceed to evacuate the Philippines, as well as the Island of Guam, on terms similar to those agreed upon by the Commissioners appointed to arrange for the evacuation of Porto Rico and other islands in the West Indies, under the protocol of August twelfth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, which is to continue in force till its provisions are completely executed.

The time within which the evacuation of the Philippine Islands and Guam shall be completed shall be fixed by the two Governments. Stands of colors, uncaptured war vessels, small arms, guns of all calibers, with their carriages and accessories, powder, ammunition, live stock, and materials and supplies of all kinds, belonging to the land and naval forces of Spain in the Philippines and Guam, remain the property of Spain. Pieces of heavy ordnance, exclusive of field artillery, in the fortifications and coast defenses, shall remain in their emplacements for the term of six months, to be reckoned from the exchange of ratifications of the treaty; and the United States may, in the meantime, purchase such material from Spain, if a satisfactory agreement between the two Governments on the subject shall be reached.

ARTICLE VI

Spain will, upon the signature of the present treaty, release all prisoners of war, and all persons detained or imprisoned for political offenses, in connection with the insurrections in Cuba and the Philippines and the war with the United States.

Reciprocally, the United States will release all persons made prisoners of war by the American forces, and will undertake to obtain the release of all Spanish prisoners in the hands of the insurgents in Cuba and the Philippines.

The Government of the United States will, at its own cost, return to Spain and the Government of Spain will, at its own cost, return to the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines according to the situation of their respective homes, prisoners released or caused to be released by them, respectively, under this article.

ARTICLE VII

The United States and Spain mutually relinquish all claims for indemnity, national and individual, of every kind, of either Government, or of its citizens or subjects, against the other Government that may have arisen since the beginning of the late insurrection in Cuba and prior to the exchange of ratif-fications of the present treaty, including all claims for indemnity for the cost of the war.

The United States will adjudicate and settle the claims of its citizens against Spain relinquished in this article.

ARTICLE VIII

In conformity with the provisions of Articles One, Two, and Three of this treaty, Spain relinquishes in Cuba, and cedes in Porto Rico and other Islands in the West Indies, in the Island of Guam, and in the Philippine Archipelago, all the buildings, wharves, barracks, forts, structures, public highways, and other immovable property which, in conformity with law, belong to the public domain, and as such belong to the Crown of Spain.

And it is hereby declared that the relinquishment or cession, as the case may be, to which the preceding paragraph refers, can not in any respect impair the property or rights which by law belong to the peaceful possession of property of all kinds, of provinces, municipalities, public or private establishments, ecclesiastical or civic bodies, or any other associations having legal capacity to acquire and possess property in the aforesaid territories renounced or ceded, or of private individuals, of whatsoever nationality such individuals may be.

The aforesaid relinquishment or cession, as the case may be, includes all documents exclusively referring to the sovereignty relinquished or ceded that may exist in the archives of the Peninsula. Where any document in such archives only in part relates to said sovereignty, a copy of such part will be furnished whenever it shall be requested. Like rules shall be reciprocally observed in favor of Spain in respect of documents in the archives of the islands above referred to.

In the aforesaid relinquishment or cession, as the case may be, are also included such rights as the Crown of Spain and its authorities possess in respect of the official archives and records, executive, as well as judicial, in the islands above referred to, which relate to said islands or the rights and property of their inhabitants. Such archives and records shall be carefully preserved, and private persons shall without distinctions have the right to require, in accordance with law, authenticated copies of the contracts, wills, and other instruments forming part of notarial protocols or files, or which may be contained in executive or judicial archives, be the latter in Spain or in the islands aforesaid.

ARTICLE IX

Spanish subjects, natives of the Peninsula, residing in the territory over which Spain by the present treaty relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty, may remain in such territory or may remove therefrom, retaining in either event all their rights of property, including the right to sell or dispose of such property or of its proceeds; and they shall also have the right to carry on their industry, commerce, and professions, being subject in respect thereof to such laws as are applicable to other foreigners. In case they remain in the territory they may preserve their allegiance to the Crown of Spain by making, before a court of record, within a year from the date of the exchange of ratification of this treaty, a declaration of their decision to preserve such allegiance; in default of which declaration they shall be held to have renounced it and to have adopted the nationality of the territory in which they may reside.*

The civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories hereby ceded to the United States shall be determined by the Congress.

ARTICLE X

The inhabitants of the territories over which Spain relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty shall be secured in the free exercise of their religion.

ARTICLE XI

The Spaniards residing in the territories over which Spain by this treaty cedes or relinquishes her sovereignty shall be subject in matters civil as well as criminal to the jurisdiction of the courts of the country wherein they reside, pursuant to the ordinary laws governing the same; and they shall have the right to appear before such courts, and to pursue the same course as citizens of the country to which the courts belong.

* An agreement of March 29, 1900, extended the time for making declaration for six months after April 11, 1900.

ARTICLE XII

Judicial proceedings pending at the time of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty in the territories over which Spain relinquishes or cedes her sovereignty shall be determined according to the following rules:

1. Judgments rendered either in civil suits between private individuals, or in criminal matters, before the date mentioned and with respect to which there is no recourse or right of review under the Spanish law, shall be deemed to be final, and shall be executed in due form by competent authority in the territory within which such judgments should be carried out.

2. Civil suits between private individuals which may on the date mentioned be undetermined shall be prosecuted to judgment before the court in which they may then be pending or in the court that may be substituted therefor.

3. Criminal actions pending on the date mentioned before the Supreme Court of Spain against citizens of the territory which, by this treaty, ceases to be Spanish shall continue under its jurisdiction until final judgment; but, such judgment having been rendered, the execution thereof shall be committed to the competent authority of the place in which the case arose.

ARTICLE XIII

The rights of property secured by copyrights and patents acquired by Spaniards in the Island of Cuba, and in Porto Rico, the Philippines, and other ceded territories, at the time of the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, shall continue to be respected. Spanish scientific, literary, and artistic works, not subversive of public order in the territories in question, shall continue to be admitted free of duty into such territories, for the period of ten years, to be reckoned from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty.

ARTICLE XIV

Spain shall have the power to establish consular offices in the ports and places of the territories, the sovereignty over which has been either relinquished or ceded by the present treaty.

ARTICLE XV

The Government of each country will, for the term of ten years, accord to the merchant vessels of the other country the same treatment in respect of all port charges, including entrance and clearance dues, light dues, and tonnage duties, as it accords to its own merchant vessels, not engaged in the coastwise trade.

This article may at any time be terminated on six months' notice given by either government to the other.

ARTICLE XVI

It is understood that any obligations assumed in this treaty by the United States with respect to Cuba are limited to the time of its occupancy thereof; but it will upon the termination of such occupancy, advise any government established in the island to assume the same obligations.

ARTICLE XVII

The present treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by Her Majesty the Queen Regent of Spain; and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington within six months from the date hereof, or earlier if possible.

In faith whereof, we the respective plenipotentiaries, have signed this treaty and have hereunto affixed our seals.

Done in duplicate at Paris, the tenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

And whereas the said Convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the ratifications of the two Governments were exchanged in the City of Washington on the eleventh day of April, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, William McKinley, President of the United States of America, have caused the said convention to be made public, to the end that the same and every article and clause thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

WILLIAM McKINLEY

By the President:

JOHN HAY,

Secretary of State.

Military Government.—On August 13, 1898, General Merritt assumed the duties of Military Governor of the islands. His proclamation "To the people of the Philippines," similar in phraseology to the instructions of President McKinley, consisted mainly of an enumeration of the fundamental rules of international law concerning the rights and duties of a military occupant. The military power, when exercised in a territory under military occupation includes, as a general rule, the legislative, executive and judicial authority; so, the Military Commander or Military Governor in the Philippines, in exercising all the three powers, organized provost marshal and other courts; promulgated important laws by means of general orders; and appointed American army officers to fill offices in the civil branch of government as the necessities of the situation demanded. The promulgation of a tariff; the organization of the schools, of the judiciary, and of local governments; the negotiation of the Bates Treaty; and the sanction of the Negros Constitution were some of the military accomplishments of a civil nature worthy of special mention.

1898, to August 28, 1898

MAJOR-GENERAL ELWELL S. OTIS
*Military Governor from August 29, 1898,

With the establishment of the Philippine Commission on September 1, 1900, the Military Commander or Military Governor in the islands lost his legislative power; and, with the inauguration of a Civil Governor on July 4, 1901, he gave up a portion of his executive authority. In a year later he relinquished all civil power, except as to the Moro Province which he continually exercised until September, 1914.

The First Philippine Commission.—For the purpose of finding out the truth about the Philippines and to recommend a form of government, President McKinley sent a body of men to these islands in the early part of 1899. Said commission was composed of Mr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the President of Cornell University; Major-General Elwell S. Otis, Military Governor of the Philippines; Rear-Admiral George Dewey, Commander of the Asiatic Squadron; Charles Denby, former Minister to China; and the Hon. Dean C. Worcester, a Professor of the University of Michigan, later a member of the Philippine Commission and Secretary of the Interior. These gentlemen reached Manila on March 4, 1899.

The Commission issued a proclamation to the people of the Philippine Islands, on April 4 of same year, in order to enlighten them and to win their confidence, exhibiting the liberal, friendly, and beneficent attitude of the United States to the Filipino people. The Commission was recalled in September, 1899.

The said Commission recommended a territorial form of government, with an elected lower chamber and an upper chamber, half elected and half nominated; and it reported, among other things, that the Filipinos were wholly unprepared for independence.

"It does not seem desirable that I should recommend at this time a specific and final form of government for these islands. When peace shall be restored it will be the duty of Congress to construct a plan of government which shall establish and maintain freedom and order and peace in the Philippines. The insurrection is still existing, and when it terminates further information will be required as to the actual condition of affairs before inaugurating a permanent scheme of civil government. The full report of the Commission, now in preparation, will contain information and suggestions which will be of value to Congress, and which I will transmit as soon as it is completed. As long as the insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. But there is no reason why steps should not be taken from time to time to inaugurate governments essentially popular in their forms as fast as territory is held and controlled by our troops. To this end I am considering the advisability of the return of the Commission, or such of the members thereof as can be secured, to aid the existing authorities and facilitate this work throughout the islands. I have believed that reconstruction should not begin by the establishment of one central civil government, for all the islands, with its seat at Manila, but rather that the work should be commenced by building up from the bottom, first establishing municipal governments and then provincial governments, a central government at last to follow.

"Until Congress shall have made known the formal expression of its will I shall use the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes to uphold the sovereignty of the United States in those distant islands as in all other places where our flag rightfully floats. I shall put at the disposal of the Army and Navy all the means which the liberality of Congress and the people have provided to cause this unprovoked and wasteful insurrection to cease. If any orders of mine were required to insure the merciful conduct of military and naval operations, they would not be lacking; but every step of the progress of our troops has been marked by a humanity which has surpassed even the the misguided insurgents. The truest kindness to them will be a swift and effective defeat of their present leader. The hour of victory will be the hour of clemency and reconstruction.

"No effort will be spared to build up the waste places desolated by war and by long years of misgovernment. We shall not wait for the end of the strife to begin the beneficent work. We shall continue, as we have begun, to open the schools and the churches, to set the courts in operation, to foster industry and trade and agriculture, and in every way in our power to make these people whom Providence has brought within our jurisdiction feel that it is their liberty and not our power, their welfare and not our gain, we are seeking to enhance. Our flag has never waved over any community but in blessing. I believe the Filipinos will soon recognize the fact that it has not lost its gift of benediction in its world-wide journey to their shores. * * *

The Second Philippine Commission.—On March 16, 1900, President McKinley appointed a new Commission, with Mr. Taft as president, to establish the form of civil government recommended by the first Philippine Commission. The second Commission was composed of Messrs. William H. Taft, Dean C. Worcester (reappointed), Luke E. Wright, Henry C. Ide, and Bernard Moses. (See Photograph on page 84).

The McKinley Instructions.—The President's letter to Secretary of War Root, of April 7, 1900, giving instructions for the guidance of the Philippine Commission—the principles of Government to be observed in the Philippine Islands, in general, and the platform of the present administration, in particular,—is reproduced herein below as transmitted by the War Department to the president of said commission:

THE PRESIDENT'S INSTRUCTIONS TO THE COMMISSION

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington, April 7, 1900

Sir: I transmit to you herewith the instructions of the President for the guidance of yourself and your associates as Commissioners to the Philippine Islands.

Very respectfully,

ELIHU ROOT,

Secretary of War.

Hon. WILLIAM H. TAFT,

President, Board of Commissioners to the Philippine Islands.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, April 7, 1900

SIR: In the message transmitted to the Congress on the 5th of December, 1899, I said, speaking of the Philippine Islands: "As long as the insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. But there is no reason why steps should not be taken from time to time to inaugurate governments essentially popular in their form as fast as territory is held and controlled by our troops. To this end I am considering the advisability of the return of the Commission, or such of the members thereof as can be secured, to aid the existing authorities and facilitate this work throughout the Islands."

To give effect to the intention thus expressed, I have appointed Hon. William H. Taft, of Ohio; Prof. Dean C. Worcester, of Michigan; Hon. Luke E. Wright, of Tennessee; Hon. Henry C. Ide, of Vermont; and Prof. Bernard Moses, of California, Commissioners to the Philippine Islands, to continue and perfect the work of organizing and establishing civil government already commenced by the military authorities, subject in all respects to any laws which Congress may hereafter enact.

The Commissioners named will meet and act as a board, and the Hon. William H. Taft is designated as president of the Board. It is probable that the transfer of authority from military commanders to civil officers will be gradual and will occupy a considerable period. Its successful accomplishment and the maintenance of peace and order in the meantime will require the most perfect co-operation between the civil and military authorities in the Islands, and both should be directed during the transition period by the same executive department. The Commission will therefore report to the Secretary of War, and all their actions will be subject to your approval and control.

You will instruct the Commission to proceed to the city of Manila, where they will make their principal office, and to communicate with the military governor of the Philippine Islands, whom you will at the same time direct to render to them every assistance within his power in the performance of their duties. Without hampering them by too specific instructions, they should in general be enjoined, after making themselves familiar with the conditions and needs of the country, to devote their attention in the first instance to the establishment of municipal governments, in which the natives of the islands, both in the cities and in the rural communities, shall be afforded the opportunity to manage their own local affairs to the fullest extent of which they are capable, and subject to the least degree of supervision and control which a careful study of their capacities and observations of the workings of native control show to be consistent with the maintenance of law, order, and loyalty.

The next subject in order of importance should be the organization of government in the larger administrative divisions corresponding to counties, departments, or provinces, in which the common interests of many or several municipalities falling within the same tribal lines, or the same natural geographical limits, may best be subserved by a common administration. Whenever the commission is of the opinion that the condition of affairs in the islands is such that the central administration may safely be transferred from military to civil control, they will report that conclusion to you, with their recommendations as to the form of central government to be established for the purpose of taking over the control.

Beginning with the 1st day of September, 1900, the authority to exercise, subject to my approval, through the Secretary of War, that part of the power of government in the Philippine Islands which is of a legislative nature is to be transferred from the military governor of the islands to this commission, to be thereafter exercised by them in the place and stead of the military governor, under such rules and regulations as you shall prescribe, until the establishment of the civil central government for the islands contemplated in the last foregoing paragraph, or until Congress shall otherwise provide. Exercise of this legislative authority will include the making of rules and orders, having the effect of law, for the raising of revenue by taxes, customs duties, and imposts; the appropriation and expenditure of public funds of the islands; the establishment of an educational system throughout the islands; the establishment of a system to secure an efficient civil service; the organization and establishment of courts; the organization and establishment of municipal and departmental governments, and all other matters of a civil nature for which the military governor is now competent to provide by rules or orders of a legislative character.

The commission will also have power during the same period to appoint to office such officers under the judicial, educational, and civil service systems and in the municipal and departmental governments as shall be provided for. Until the complete transfer of control the military governor will remain the chief executive head of the government of the islands, and will exercise the executive authority now possessed by him and not herein expressly assigned to the commission, subject, however, to the rules and orders enacted by the commission in the exercise of the legislative powers conferred upon them. In the meantime the municipal and departmental governments will continue to report to the military governor and be subject to his administrative supervision and control, under your direction, but that supervision and control will be confined within the narrowest limits consistent with the requirement that the powers of government in the municipalities and departments shall be honestly and effectively exercised and that law and order and individual freedom shall be maintained.

All legislative rules and orders, establishments of government, and appointments to office by the commission will take effect immediately, or at such times as they shall designate, subject to your approval and action upon the coming in of the commission's reports which are to be made from time to time as their action is taken. Wherever civil governments are constituted under the direction of the commission, such military posts, garrisons, and forces will be continued for the suppression of insurrection and brigandage, and the maintenance of law and order as the military commander shall deem requisite, and the military forces shall be at all times subject under his orders to the call of the civil authorities for the maintenance of law and order and the enforcement of their authority.

In the establishment of municipal governments the commission will take as the basis of their work the governments established by the military governor under his order of August 8, 1899, and under the report of the board constituted by the military governor by his order of January 29, 1900, to formulate and report a plan of municipal government, of which his honor Cayetano Arellano, president of the audiencia, was chairman, and they will give to the conclusions of that board the weight and consideration which the high character and distinguished abilities of its members justify.

In the constitution of department or provincial governments, they will give especial attention to the existing government of the Island of Negros, constituted, with the approval of the people of that Island, under the order of the military governor of July 22, 1899, and after verifying, so far as may be practicable, the reports of the successful working of that government, they will be guided by the experience thus acquired, so far as it may be applicable to the conditions existing in other portions of the Philippines. They will avail themselves to the fullest degree practicable of the conclusions reached by the previous commission to the Philippines.

In the distribution of powers among the governments organized by the commission, the presumption is always to be in favor of the smaller subdivision, so that all the powers which can properly be exercised by the municipal government shall be vested in that government, and all the powers of a more general character which can be exercised by the departmental government shall be vested in that government, and so that in the governmental system, which is the result of the process, the central government of the islands, following the example of the distribution of the powers between the States and the National Government of the United States, shall have no direct administration except of matters of purely general concern, and shall have only such supervision and control over local governments as may be necessary to secure and enforce faithful and efficient administration by local officers.

The many different degrees of civilization and varieties of custom and capacity among the people of the different islands preclude very definite instruction as to the part which the people shall take in the selection of their own officers; but these general rules are to be observed: That in all cases the municipal officers, who administer the local affairs of the people, are to be selected by the people, and that wherever officers of more extended jurisdiction are to be selected in any way, natives of the islands are to be preferred, and if they can be found competent and willing to perform the duties, they are to receive the offices in preference to any others.

It will be necessary to fill some offices for the present with Americans, which, after a time, may well be filled by natives of the islands. As soon as practicable a system for ascertaining the merit and fitness of candidates for civil offices should be put in force. An indispensable qualification for all offices and positions of trust and authority in the islands must be absolute and unconditional loyalty to the United States, and absolute and unhampered authority and power to remove and punish any officer deviating from that standard must at all times be retained in the hands of the central authority of the islands.

In all the forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe, the commission should bear in mind that the government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction, or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands, and the measures adopted should be made to conform to their customs, their habits, and even their prejudices, to the fullest extent consistent with the accomplishment of the indispensable requisites of just and effective government.

At the same time the commission should bear in mind, and the people of the islands should be made plainly to understand, that there are certain great principles of government which have been made the basis of our governmental system which we deem essential to the rule of law and the maintenance of individual freedom, and of which they have, unfortunately, been denied the experience possessed by us; that there are also certain practical rules of government which we have found to be essential to the preservation of these great principles of liberty and law, and that these principles and these rules of government must be established and maintained in their islands for the sake of their liberty and happiness, however much they may conflict with the customs or laws of procedure with which they are familiar.

It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine Islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably within a short time command universal assent. Upon every division and branch of the government of the Philippines, therefore, must be imposed these inviolable rules:

That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense, that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainder, or ex-post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or of the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the Government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed.

It will be the duty of the commission to make a thorough investigation into the titles of the large tracts of land held or claimed by individuals or by religious orders; into the justice of the claims and complaints made against such landholders by the people of the islands or any part of the people, and to seek by wise and peaceable measures a just settlement of the controversies and redress of wrongs which have caused strife and bloodshed in the past. In the performance of this duty the commission is enjoined to see that no injustice is done; to have regard for substantial right and equity, disregarding technicalities so far as substantial right permits, and to observe the following rules:

That the provision of the treaty of Paris, pledging the United States to the protection of all rights of property in the islands, and as well the principle of our own Government which prohibits the taking of private property without due process of law, shall not be violated; that the welfare of the people of the islands, which should be a paramount consideration, shall be attained consistently with this rule of property right; that if it becomes necessary for the public interest of the people of the islands to dispose of claims to property which the commission finds to be not lawfully acquired and held disposition shall be made thereof by due legal procedure, in which there shall be full opportunity for fair and impartial hearing and judgment; that if the same public interests require the extinguishment of property rights lawfully acquired and held due compensation shall be made out of the public treasury therefor; that no form of religion and no minister of religion shall be forced upon any community or upon any citizen of the islands; that upon the other hand no minister of religion shall be interfered with or molested in following his calling, and that the separation between state and church shall be real, entire, and absolute.

It will be the duty of the Commission to promote and extend, and, as they find occasion, to improve, the system of education already inaugurated by the military authorities. In doing this they should regard as of first importance the extension of a system of primary education which shall be free to all, and which shall tend to fit the people for the duties of citizenship and for the ordinary avocations of a civilized community. This instruction should be given in the first instance in every part of the islands in the language of the people. In view of the great number of languages spoken by the different tribes, it is especially important to the prosperity of the islands that a common medium of communication may be established, and it is obviously desirable that this medium should be the English language. Especial attention should be at once given to affording full opportunity to all the people of the islands to acquire the use of the English language.

It may well be that the main changes which should be made in the system of taxation and in the body of the laws under which the people are governed, except such changes as have already been made by the military government, should be relegated to the civil government which is to be established under the auspices of the Commission. It will, however, be the duty of the Commission to inquire diligently as to whether there are any further changes which ought not to be delayed; and if so, they are authorized to make such changes, subject to your approval. In doing so they are to bear in mind that taxes which tend to penalize or repress industry and enterprise are to be avoided; that provisions for taxation should be simple, so that they may be understood by the people; that they should affect the fewest practicable subjects of taxation which will serve for the general distribution of the burden.

The main body of the laws which regulate the rights and obligations of the people should be maintained with as little interference as possible. Changes made should be mainly in procedure, and in the criminal laws to secure speedy and impartial trials, and at the same time effective administration and respect for individual rights.

In dealing with the uncivilized tribes of the islands the Commission should adopt the same course followed by Congress in permitting the tribes of our North American Indians to maintain their tribal organization and government, and under which many of those tribes are now living in peace and contentment, surrounded by a civilization to which they are unable or unwilling to conform. Such tribal governments should, however, be subjected to wise and firm regulations; and, without undue or petty interference, constant and active effort should be exercised to prevent barbarous practices and introduce civilized customs.

Upon all officers and employees of the United States, both civil and military, should be impressed a sense of the duty to observe not merely the material but the personal and social rights of the people of the islands, and to treat them with the same courtesy and respect for their personal dignity which the people of the United States are accustomed to require from each other.

The articles of capitulation of the city of Manila on the 13th of August, 1898, concluded with these words:

"This city, its inhabitants, its churches and religious worship, its educational establishments, and its private property of all descriptions, are placed under the special safeguard of the faith and honor of the American Army."

I believe that this pledge has been faithfully kept. As high and sacred an obligation rests upon the Government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom, and wise, firm, and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the people of the Philippine Islands. I charge this Commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and the protection of the people of the United States.

WILLIAM McKINLEY

The Secretary of War
Washington, D. C.

The War against the United States.

—As we have already stated in the previous chapter, the good and honest intentions of the American government were misunderstood by the Filipinos, who fought for the independence of their country. Having established a republican form of government which the Americans refused to recognize, the Filipinos in upholding the dignity of their own government found it necessary to maintain their own freedom. Hence, the armed conflict between the American and Filipino forces when the latter found out that a treaty of peace ceding the Philippines to the United States was concluded at Paris on the tenth day of December, 1898. Consequently the period of American administration in the Islands started with bloody resistance from the natives. It was a war between a de facto government and a sovereign nation, which from the international point of view was but an insurrection. With regard to this point, we wish to quote herein some interesting facts from the book entitled "The Picturesque Philippines" written by Adjutant E. Hannaford, as follows:

"Between July, 1898, and February, 1899, the barefoot, half-naked Filipinos in the trenches at Manila changed from allies of the Americans to rivals, and from rivals to sworn enemies fighting to the death. The clash of arms began at 8:45 o'clock on Saturday evening, February 4, 1899. Early next morning, Sunday, February 5th, the American volunteers were advancing, while the cruiser Charleston and gunboats Concord and Callao, in Manila bay, had opened fire on the insurgent line to the north of the city, and the monitor Monadnock on the line to the south. During the day the Americans carried several miles of intrenchments, and occupied a number of native villages immediately south and east of the city, being aided materially by the gunboat Laguna de Bay. A vitally important movement was effected on the sixth, when the troops under Brigadier-General Hale captured the outlying waterwork at Santolan, with a loss of three each killed and wounded.

With Major-General MacArthur in command, the American column started north on February 7th. Colonel Funston's Kansas regiment charged a considerable body of the enemy, drove them into their intrenchments, and punished them severely. February 10th Caloocan was shelled for several hours, from Manila bay, by the Monadnock and Charleston, as well as by the artillery on land, and late in the afternoon it was occupied at the point of the bayonet, the rebels firing the town. Malabon, near Caloocan, was shelled on the eleventh by the two vessels last named, and on the twelfth the enemy evacuated it.

In Manila a threatening conspiracy was nipped in the bud by the arrest, on February 15th, of one hundred and fifty ringleaders, in spite of which came the incendiary night fires of February 22nd that year. Dr. J. G.

Schurman, Professor Dean C. Worcester and Hon. Charles Denby, constituting the civil members of the Philippine Commission sent out by President McKinley (the other members being Major-General Otis and Admiral Dewey), arrived in Manila March 4th, and a month later the Commission issued its friendly proclamation to the natives, but without effecting any change in the situation. Meantime, on February 11th, Iloilo, the second port in the Philippines, had been occupied, the insurgents firing the town and retreating to some native towns near by. On February 24th a commission of four from Negros reached Manila, and pledged the island's allegiance to the United States, and a battalion was sent there on March 4th.

On the twenty-fifth the gunboat Petrel took the town of Cebu, on Cebu island, without forcible resistance, occupation by troops following later.

Campaigning against the insurgents was extremely arduous work, and not until the twenty-sixth of March were they driven out of Polo, twelve miles north of Manila. On the twenty-seventh Marilao, four miles north of Polo, was occupied after a further struggle, and Marilao was captured on the thirty-first.

While Mac-Arthur's men were resting at and up toward Malolos, Major-General Lawton conducted an expedition to the southern and eastern shores of Laguna de Bay. He took Santa Cruz April 10th, and next day captured a lot of barges and one Spanish gunboat on the lake. This was the second raid in the direction of the fertile, and populous lake country, the first having taken place on March 13th to 15th, under command of Brigadier-General Wheaton, who, advancing along the Pasig, preceded by the gunboat Laguna de Bay, firing right and left, took Guadalupe, Pasig, Pateros, which was burned, Ta-guig and other towns upon or near the Pasig delta. General Lawton, abandoning the towns he had captured, returned to Manila April 17th, and five days later started, by way of Novaliches, for Norzagaray, some thirty miles northeast of Manila. The forces disputing his advance were easily brushed aside, and moving westward from Norzagaray, on May 1st he took the town of Baliuag. In the meanwhile two or three days had been lost by MacArthur in a movement toward the northeast, with view to a junction with Lawton, and on April 23rd, in the vicinity of Quingua, four miles from Malolos, Colonel John M. Stotsenburg was killed.

Hale's brigade reached the vicinity of Calumpit April 25th, capturing the outer trenches. During the night the partially destroyed bridge over the Quingua river was repaired, enabling Wheaton's brigade to cross, and after a most determined resistance the Filipinos, on the twenty-sixth, were driven from Calumpit. Advancing along the railroad to the south bank of the Rio Grande de Pampanga, General Wheaton found the enemy so strongly intrenched on the north side that rifle-fire and artillery failed to dislodge them. The bridge over the river was badly damaged, and to cross it in face of the enemy's fire was impossible. At 10 o'clock the next forenoon Colonel Funston called for volunteers to cross the river. From the number who offered he selected two, who swam across and fastened one end of a rope to a tree on the opposite bank. By means of the rope attached to an improvised raft several companies of the Kansas regiment crossed the river, and gained a position enabling them to enfilade the insurgents. The remainder of the brigade, after a precarious crossing on the bridge, encountered reinforcements coming to Calumpit from Macabebe, a few miles westward. These they forced back, then advanced to Apalit, north of Calumpit, expelling the enemy from three successive lines of trenches. On May 4th General MacArthur's column dislodged the insurgents under General Luna from their strong intrenchment two miles south of Santo Tomas, northwest of Apalit, and after repairing the bridge entered Santo Tomas at noon, to find the town on fire. In the afternoon the column advanced to San Fernando, two miles further, where similar scenes were enacted. Here MacArthur's headquarters remained for eleven weeks.

At Manila, the Spanish had transferred the Supreme Court to the American authorities (who promptly appointed six new judges, three Americans and three natives) on April 16th. Four days preceding that date Lieutenant James C. Gilmore, of the gunboat Yorktown, and a party of thirteen had landed in Baler bay, midway the easter coast of Luzon, and been captured. They were rescued by a troop of scouts commanded by Colonel Luther R. Hare, in the latter part of December, reaching Manila on January 7th of the following year. On April 28th envoys from the insurgent General Luna requested an armistice for three weeks, to enable the Revolutionary Congress to determine whether or not to continue the war, and similar requests were made on May 2nd, 13th and 19th.

BRIG.-GEN. FREDERICK FUNSTON

On the twenty-fourth of May the last Spanish garrison remaining in the archipelago was withdrawn, by arrangements with besieging insurgents. This was at Zamboanga, in Mindanao. During May a marked divergence had developed between the views of the civil members of the Philippine Commission and those of the Military Governor, Major-General Otis, Admiral Dewey, the remaining member of the Commission, having started home on the Olympia on May 20th. His successor in command of the Asiatic squadron, Rear-Admiral John C. Watson, reached Manila on the twentieth of the following month.

FORT SAN ANTONIO ABAD, IN MALATE, SHOWING THE EFFECT OF THE AMERICAN BOMBARDMENT

Taking up the main story of the campaign, Lawton's division returned on the twenty-fourth of May from an expeditionary movement eastward from San Fernando, again joining MacArthur there. June 3rd to 6th Lawton made a laborious expedition eastward from Manila along the northern shore of Laguna de Bay, in the fruitless endeavor to drive the Filipino General Pio del Pilar down into the Morong peninsula, and bag his forces there. Cainta, Taytay, Antipolo, Teresa and Morong were occupied in succession, but only Morong was garrisoned. On June 10th the irrepressible Lawton undertook a movement to crush the insurgents threatening Manila from the south. A feint movement toward the lake, followed by most rapid counter-marching, failed to cut off the insurgents, owing chiefly to the awful heat.

On June 13th the hardest battle yet fought occurred at a strategic position above Bacoor, once celebrated for the annihilation there of a Spanish battalion in 1896. It was the crossing of the Zapote river. After fifteen hours' fighting, part of it decidedly fierce, the insurgents were forced from their position and driven southward. Following up this success, General Wheaton's brigade, on the fifteenth, occupied Imus, fifteen miles from Manila. On the nineteenth, in repelling an attack directed toward Imus, Wheaton lost twenty-eight men.

The second week of July brought rains so extraordinary for even the rainy season as to veto aggressive campaigning for months. When the campaign thus closed, the situation was such as to prove conclusively the need of a largely increased force. On the ninth of August MacArthur moved from San Fernando, and after a running fight of three days he captured Angeles, nine miles further north on the railroad. Here he established headquarters for the rest of the rainy season, subject constantly to great annoyance in protecting his communications. Once the insurgents descended on the railroad twelve miles in his rear, and tore up three miles of it, and on September 22nd, not far from Angeles, they blew up a train bringing American supplies, and killed six soldiers and six native mechanics. MacArthur drove the rebels out of their position at Porac, a few miles northwestward on September 28th, and three weeks later with General Lawton made a further advance up the railroad.

With the approach of the dry season active operations were resumed. During the first ten days of October General Schwan, operating in south Luzon, captured Rosario and Malabon. November 7th an expedition on transports, dispatched to the north under General Wheaton, captured Dagupan. On the fourteenth Major Bell entered Tarlac. That same day, in a brisk fight near San Jacinto Major John A. Logan was killed. On the twenty-fourth General Otis reported the capture of the President of the Filipino Congress, the Secretary of State and the Treasurer; also that the whole of Central Luzon was in the hands of the American authorities. In May of the next year General Funston captured the archives of the Filipino government. On the eleventh of December General Otis, by direction of President McKinley, opened the Philippine ports to commerce. The same day General Tirona, commanding the rebels in Ca-gayan, surrendered the entire province to Captain McCalla, of the cruiser Newark. On the nineteenth, when about to order an attack on the rebels at San Mateo, General Lawton was shot, dying immediately.

The fighting had resolved into skirmishing, the work of the soldiers now being to garrison towns and run down guerrillas and bandits. However, General Otis recommended that for a time a large repressive force be retained, and on April 1, 1900, there were nearly 65,000 soldiers in the islands.

On April 7th General Otis, at his own request, was relieved of command in the Philippines, the order going into effect May 1st, when he was succeeded by General MacArthur. On June 1st General MacArthur issued a proclamation of the amnesty with unconditional pardon to all Filipinos who would renounce the insurrection within ninety days, and it was accepted by many of the leaders. Among the latter was General Pio del Pilar, captured June 8th at San Pedro Makati, who used his influence to induce other insurgents to accept it. General Pantaleon Garcia meantime had been captured in Jaen, central Luzon, on June 5th.

On February 6th the President appointed Judge William H. Taft,* of Ohio, at the head of a new Philippine Commission, to inaugurate a civil government to supersede the military, the other members of the Commission being Professor Bernard Moses, of the University of California; Professor Dean C. Worcester, of Michigan; Hon. Luke E. Wright, of Tennessee; and Judge Henry C. Ide, of Vermont. This Commission sailed from San Francisco April 17th, arriving at Manila early in the month of June, though not officially assuming their administrative duties until the first of September. The intervening time was spent in becoming familiar with details of the great task confronting them.

Meantime General Otis had approved of a plan of municipal government giving the Filipinos the right of suffrage, and schools were being established as rapidly as possible. This, of course, under direction of military authority, which seemed the greatest obstacle in the way of pacification, owing to a lack of confidence in the soldiers on the part of the inhabitants. The country is now reported to be quieting down and reverting to normal conditions, and optimists predict that with proper administrative methods the near future holds in store for the archipelago not only peace, but unexampled prosperity."

The Civil Government.—The new Commission arrived in Manila June 3, 1900. On September 1, it began its legislative and executive duties. From September 1, 1900, to July 3, 1901, the Commanding General of the American Army continued to exercise civil executive powers. On July 4, 1901, Mr. William H. Taft became the first Civil Governor of the Philippines in the period of American administration.

APPOINTMENT OF THE CIVIL GOVERNOR

WAR DEPARTMENT

Washington, June 21, 1901.

On and after the 4th of July, 1901, until it shall be otherwise ordered, the President of the Philippine Commission will exercise the executive authority in all civil affairs in the government of the Philippine Islands heretofore exercised in such affairs by the Military Governor of the Philippines, and to that end the Hon. William H. Taft, President of the said Commission, is hereby appointed Civil Governor of the Philippine Islands. Such executive authority will be exercised under, and in conformity to, the instructions to the Philippine Commissioners, dated April 7, 1900, and subject to the approval and control of the Secretary of War of the United States. The municipal and provincial civil governments, which have been, or shall hereafter be, established in said Islands, and all persons performing duties appertaining to the offices of civil government in said Islands, will, in respect of such duties, report to the said Civil Governor.

The power to appoint civil officers, heretofore vested in the Philippine Commission, or in the Military Governor, will be exercised by the Civil Governor with the advice and consent of the Commission.

The Military Governor of the Philippines is hereby relieved from the performance, on and after the said 4th day of July, of the civil duties heretofore described, but his authority will continue to be exercised as heretofore, in those districts in which insurrection against the authority of the United States continues to exist, or in which public order is not sufficiently restored to enable provincial civil governments to be established under the instructions to the Commission dated April 7, 1900.

By the President:

ELIHU ROOT, Secretary of War.

Hon. LUKE E. WRIGHT

By an order of the President effective September 1, 1901, the Insular organization was completed, making the four members of the Commission secretaries or heads of four Executive Departments—Public Instruction, Finance and Justice, Commerce and Police, and Interior. On October 29, 1901, a Vice-Governor was appointed.

APPOINTMENT OF THE VICE-GOVERNOR

WHITE HOUSE.

Washington, October 29, 1901.

By virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, the Honorable Luke E. Wright is appointed Vice-Governor with authority to act as Civil Governor of the Philippine Islands whenever the Civil Governor is incapacitated by illness or certifies that his temporary absence from the seat of government will make it necessary for the Vice-Governor to exercise such powers and duties.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

A View of the City of Manila in 1898

The Philippine Bill.—To provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippines, the Congress of the United States of America has enacted a law known as The Philippine Bill, which was the first organic act in force in these islands from 1902 to 1916. On August 5, 1909, the Congress of the United States passed the Philippine Tariff Act, which was subsequently amended by said Congress in 1913, 1922, 1930, and 1935. The full text of said Tariff Act, as amended, is published herein from page 207 to page 255, inclusive.

The full text of the Philippine Bill or Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, sponsored by Congressman Henry A. Cooper, reads as follows:

THE PHILIPPINE BILL

Act of Congress of July 1, 1902

AN ACT TEMPORARILY TO PROVIDE FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AFFAIRS OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the action of the President of the United States in creating the Philippine Commission and authorizing said Commission to exercise the powers of government to the extent and in the manner and form and subject to the regulation and control set forth in the instructions of the President to the Philippine Commission, dated April seventh, nineteen hundred, and in creating the offices of Civil Governor and Vice-Governor of the Philippine Islands, and authorizing said Civil Governor and Vice-Governor to exercise the powers of government to the extent and in the manner and form set forth in the Executive order dated June twenty-first, nineteen hundred and one, and in establishing four Executive Departments of government in said Islands as set forth in the Act of the Philippine Commission, entitled "An Act providing an organization for the Departments of the Interior, of Commerce and Police, of Finance and Justice, and of Public Instruction," enacted September sixth, nineteen hundred and one, is hereby approved, ratified, and confirmed, and until otherwise provided by law the said Islands shall continue to be governed as thereby and herein provided, and all laws passed hereafter by the Philippine Commission shall have an enacting clause as follows: "By authority of the United States, be it enacted by the Philippine Commission." The provisions of section eighteen hundred and ninety-one of the Revised Statutes of eighteen hundred and seventy-eight shall not apply to the Philippine Islands.

Future appointments of Civil Governor, Vice-Governor, members of said Commission and heads of Executive Departments shall be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

SEC. 2. That the action of the President of the United States heretofore taken by virtue of the authority vested in him as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, as set forth in his order of July twelfth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, whereby a tariff of duties and taxes as set forth by said order was to be levied and collected at all ports and places in the Philippine Islands upon passing into the occupation and possession of the forces of the United States, together with the subsequent amendments of said order, are hereby approved, ratified, and confirmed, and the actions of the authorities of the Government of the Philippine Islands, taken in accordance with the provisions of said order and subsequent amendments, are hereby approved: Provided, that nothing contained in this section shall be held to amend or repeal an Act entitled "An Act temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved March eight, nineteen hundred and two.

SEC. 3. That the President of the United States, during such time as and whenever the sovereignty and authority of the United States encounter armed resistance in the Philippine Islands, until otherwise provided by Congress, shall continue to regulate and control commercial intercourse with and within said Islands by such general rules and regulations as he, in his discretion, may deem most conducive to the public interests and the general welfare.

SEC. 4. That all inhabitants of the Philippine Islands continuing to reside therein who were Spanish subjects on the eleventh day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, and then resided in said Islands, and their children born subsequent thereto, shall be deemed and held to be citizens of the Philippine Islands and as such entitled to the protection of the United States, except such as shall have elected to preserve their allegiance to the Crown of Spain in accordance with the provisions of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain signed at Paris December tenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight.

SEC. 5. That no law shall be enacted in said Islands which shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or deny to any person therein the equal protection of the laws.

That in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf.

That no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law; and no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

That all persons shall before conviction be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses.

That no law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted.

That no person shall be imprisoned for debt.

That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion the public safety may require it, in either of which events the same may be suspended by the President, or by the Governor, with the approval of the Philippine Commission, wherever during such period the necessity for such suspension shall exist.

That no ex-post facto law or bill of attainder shall be enacted.

That no law granting a title of nobility shall be enacted, and no person holding any office of profit or trust in said Islands, shall, without the consent of the Congress of the United States, accept any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, queen, prince, or foreign State.

That excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

That the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.

That neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist in said Islands.

That no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the Government for redress of grievances.

That no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed.

That no money shall be paid out of the Treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation by law.

That the rule of taxation in said Islands shall be uniform.

That no private or local bill which may be enacted into law shall embrace more than one subject, and that subject shall be expressed in the title of the bill.

That no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

That all money collected on any tax levied or assessed for a special purpose shall be treated as a special fund in the Treasury and paid out for such purpose only.

SEC. 6. That whenever the existing insurrection in the Philippine Islands shall have ceased and a condition of general and complete peace shall have been established therein and the fact shall be certified to the President by the Philippine Commission, the President, upon being satisfied thereof, shall order a census of the Philippine Islands to be taken by said Philippine Commission; such census and its inquiries relating to the population shall take and make so far as practicable full report for all the inhabitants, of name, age, sex, race, or tribe, whether native or foreign born, literacy in Spanish, native dialect, or language, or in English, school attendance, ownership of homes, industrial and social statistics, and such other information separately for each island, each province, and municipality, or other civil division, as the President and said Commission may deem necessary: Provided, That the President may, upon the request of said Commission, in his discretion, employ the service of the Census Bureau in compiling and promulgating the statistical information above provided for, and may commit to such Bureau any part or portion of such labor as to him may seem wise.

SEC. 7. That two years after the completion and publication of the census, in case such condition of general and complete peace with recognition of the authority of the United States shall have continued in the territory of said Islands not inhabited by Moros or other non-Christian tribes and such facts shall have been certified to the President by the Philippine Commission, the President upon being satisfied thereof shall direct said Commission to call, and the Commission shall call, a general election for the choice of delegates to a popular assembly of the people of said territory in the Philippine Islands, which shall be known as the Philippine Assembly. After said Assembly shall have convened and organized, all the legislative power heretofore conferred on the Philippine Commission in all that part of said Islands not inhabited by Moros or other non-Christian tribes shall be vested in a Legislature consisting of two Houses—the Philippine Commission and the Philippine Assembly. Said Assembly shall consist of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred members to be apportioned by said Commission among the provinces as nearly as practicable according to population: Provided, That no province shall have less than one member: and provided further, That provinces entitled by population to more than one member may be divided into such convenient districts as the said Commission may deem best.

Public notice of such division shall be given at least ninety days prior to such election, and the election shall be held under rules and regulations to be prescribed by law. The qualification of electors in such election shall be the same as is now provided by law in case of electors in municipal elections. The members of Assembly shall hold office for two years from the first day of January next following their election, and their successors shall be chosen by the people every second year thereafter. No person shall be eligible to such election who is not a qualified elector of the election district in which he may be chosen, owing allegiance to the United States, and twenty-five years of age.

The Legislature shall hold annual sessions, commencing on the first Monday of February in each year and continuing not exceeding ninety days thereafter (Sundays and holidays not included): Provided, That the first meeting of the Legislature shall be held upon the call of the Governor within ninety days after the first election: and provided further, That if at the termination of any session the appropriations necessary for the support of Government shall not have been made, an amount equal to the sums appropriated in the last appropriation bills for such purposes shall be deemed to be appropriated; and until the Legislature shall act in such behalf the Treasurer may, with the advice of the Governor, make the payments necessary for the purposes aforesaid.

The Legislature may be called in special session at any time by the Civil Governor for general legislation, or for action on such specific subjects as he may designate. No special session shall continue longer than thirty days, exclusive of Sundays.

The Assembly shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members. A majority shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members. It shall choose its speaker and other officers, and the salaries of its members and officers shall be fixed by law. It may determine the rule of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two-thirds expel a member. It shall keep a journal of its proceedings, which shall be published, and the yeas and nays of the members on any question shall, on the demand of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

SEC. 8. That at the same time with the first meeting of the Philippine Legislature, and biennially thereafter, there shall be chosen by said Legislature, each House voting separately, two resident Commissioners to the United States, who shall be entitled to an official recognition as such by all departments upon presentation to the President of a certificate of election by the Civil Governor of said Islands, and each of whom shall be entitled to a salary payable monthly by the United States at the rate of five thousand dollars per annum, and two thousand dollars additional to cover all expenses: Pro- vided. That no person shall be eligible to such election who is not a qualified elector of said Islands, owing allegiance to the United States, and who is not thirty years of age.

SEC. 9. That the Supreme Court and the Courts of First Instance of the Philippine Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided and such additional jurisdiction as shall hereafter be prescribed by the Government of said Islands, subject to the power of said Government to change the practice and method of procedure. The municipal courts of said Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided by the Philippine Commission, subject in all matters to such alteration and amendment as may be hereafter enacted by law; and the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive the compensation heretofore prescribed by the Commission until otherwise provided by Congress. The judges of the Court of First Instance shall be appointed by the Civil Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Philippine Commission; Provided, That the admiralty jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and Courts of First Instance shall not be changed except by Act of Congress.

SEC. 10. That the Supreme Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm the final judgments and decrees of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands in all actions, cases, causes, and proceedings now pending therein or hereafter determined thereby in which the Constitution or any statute, treaty, title, right, or privilege of the United States is involved, or in causes in which the value in controversy exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, or in which the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, is involved or brought in question; and such final judgments or decrees may and can be reviewed, revised, reversed, modified, or affirmed by said Supreme Court of the United States on appeal or writ of error by the party aggrieved, in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure, as far as applicable, as the final judgments and decrees of the Circuit Courts of the United States.

SEC. 11. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized to provide for the needs of commerce by improving the harbors and navigable waters of said Islands and to construct and maintain in said navigable waters and upon the shore adjacent thereto bonded warehouses, wharves, piers, light-houses, signal and life-saving stations, buoys, and like instruments of commerce, and to adopt and enforce regulations in regard thereto, including bonded warehouses wherein articles not intended to be imported into said Islands nor mingled with the property therein, but brought into a port of said Islands for reshipment to another country may be deposited in bond and reshipped to another country without the payment of customs duties or charges.

SEC. 12. That all the property and rights which may have been acquired in the Philippine Islands by the United States under the treaty of peace with Spain, signed December tenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, except such land or other property as shall be designated by the President of the United States for military and other reservations of the Government of the United States, are hereby placed under the control of the Government of said Islands, to be administered for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof, except as provided in this Act.

SEC. 13. That the Government of the Philippine Islands, subject to the provisions of this Act and except as herein provided, shall classify according to its agricultural character and productiveness, and shall immediately make rules and regulations for the lease, sale, or other disposition of the public lands other than timber or mineral lands, but such rules and regulations shall not go into effect or have the force of law until they have received the approval of the President, and when approved by the President they shall be submitted by him to Congress at the beginning of the next ensuing session thereof and unless disapproved or amended by Congress at said session they shall at the close of such period have the force and effect of law in the Philippine Islands: Provided, That a single homestead entry shall not exceed sixteen hectares in extent.

SEC. 14. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized and empowered to enact rules and regulations and to prescribe terms and conditions to enable persons to perfect their title to public lands in said Islands, who, prior to the transfer of sovereignty from Spain to the United States, had fulfilled all or some of the conditions required by the Spanish laws and royal decrees of the Kingdom of Spain for the acquisition of legal title thereto, yet failed to secure conveyance of title; and the Philippine Commission is authorized to issue patents, without compensation, to any native of said Islands, conveying title to any tract of land not more than sixteen hectares in extent, which were public lands and had been actually occupied by such native or his ancestors prior to and on the thirteenth of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight.

SEC. 15. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized and empowered, on such terms as it may prescribe, by general legislation, to provide for the granting or sale and conveyance to actual occupants and settlers and other citizens of said Islands such parts and portions of the public domain, other than timber and mineral lands, of the United States in said Islands as it may deem wise, not exceeding sixteen hectares to any one person and for the sale and conveyance of not more than one thousand and twenty-four hectares to any corporation or association of persons: Provided, That the grant or sale of such lands, whether the purchase price be paid at once or in partial payments, shall be conditioned upon actual and continued occupancy, improvement, and cultivation of the premises sold for a period of not less than five years, during which time the purchaser or grantee can not alienate or encumber said land or the title thereto; but such restriction shall not apply to transfers of rights and title of inheritance under the laws for the distribution of the estates of decedents.

SEC. 16. That in granting or selling any part of the public domain under the provisions of the last preceding section, preference in all cases shall be given to actual occupants and settlers; and such public lands of the United States in the actual possession or occupancy of any native of the Philippine Islands shall not be sold by said Government to any other person without the consent thereto of said prior occupant or settler first had and obtained: Provided, That the prior right hereby secured to an occupant of land, who can show no other proof of title than possession, shall not apply to more than sixteen hectares in any one tract.

SEC. 17. That timber, trees, forests, and forest products on lands leased or demised by the Government of the Philippine Islands under the provisions of this Act shall not be cut, destroyed, removed, or appropriated except by special permission of said Government and under such regulations as it may prescribe.

All moneys obtained from lease or sale of any portion of the public domain or from licenses to cut timber by the Government of the Philippine Islands shall be covered into the Insular Treasury and be subject only to appropriation for insular purposes according to law.

SEC. 18. That the forest laws and regulations now in force in the Philippine Islands, with such modifications and amendments as may be made by the Government of said Islands, are hereby continued in force, and no timber lands forming part of the public domain shall be sold, leased, or entered until the Government of said Islands, upon the certification of the Forestry Bureau that said lands are more valuable for agriculture than for forest uses, shall declare such lands so certified to be agricultural in character: Provided, That the said Government shall have the right and is hereby empowered to issue licenses to cut, harvest, or collect timber or other forest products on reserved or unreserved public lands in said Islands in accordance with the forest laws and regulations hereinbefore mentioned and under the provisions of this Act, and the said Government may lease land to any person or persons holding such licenses, sufficient for a mill site, not to exceed four hectares in extent, and may grant rights of way to enable such person or persons to get access to the lands to which such licenses apply.

SEC. 19. That the beneficial use shall be the basis, the measure, and the limit of all rights to water in said Islands, and the Government of said Islands is hereby authorized to make such rules and regulations for the use of water, and to make such reservations of public lands for the protection of the water supply, and for other public purposes not in conflict with the provisions of this Act, as it may deem best for the public good.

MINERAL LANDS.

SEC. 20. That in all cases public lands in the Philippine Islands valuable for minerals shall be reserved from sale, except as otherwise expressly directed by law.

SEC. 21. That all valuable mineral deposits in public lands in the Philippine Islands, both surveyed and unsurveyed, are hereby declared to be free and open to exploration, occupation, and purchase, and the land in which they are found to occupation and purchase, by citizens of the United States, or of said Islands: Provided, That when on any lands in said Islands entered and occupied as agricultural lands under the provisions of this Act, but not patented, mineral deposits have been found, the working of such mineral deposits is hereby forbidden until the person, association, or corporation who or which has entered and is occupying such lands shall have paid to the Government of said Islands such additional sum or sums as will make the total amount paid for the mineral claim or claims in which said deposits are located equal to the amount charged by the Government for the same as mineral claims.

SEC. 22. That mining claims upon land containing veins or lodes of quartz or other rock in place bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, lead, tin, copper, or other valuable deposits, located after the passage of this Act, whether located by one or more persons qualified to locate the same under the preceding section, shall be located in the following manner and under the following conditions: Any person so qualified desiring to locate a mineral claim shall, subject to the provisions of this Act with respect to land which may be used for mining, enter upon the same and locate a plot of ground measuring, where possible, but not exceeding, one thousand feet in length by one thousand feet in breadth, in as nearly as possible a rectangular form; that is to say: All angles shall be right angles, except in cases where a boundary line of a previously surveyed claim is adopted as common to both claims, but the lines need not necessarily be meridional. In defining the size of a mineral claim, it shall be measured horizontally, irrespective of inequalities of the surface of the ground.

SEC. 23. That a mineral claim shall be marked by two posts placed as nearly as possible on the line of the ledge or vein, and the posts shall be numbered one and two, and the distance between posts numbered one and two shall not exceed one thousand feet, the line between posts numbered one and two to be known as the location line; and upon posts numbered one and two shall be written the name given to the mineral claim, the name of the locator, and the date of the location. Upon post numbered one there shall be written, in addition to the foregoing, "Initial post," the approximate compass bearing of post numbered two, and a statement of the number of feet lying to the right and to the left of the line from post numbered one to post numbered two, thus: "Initial post. Direction of post numbered two..... feet of this claim lie on the right and..... feet on the left of the line from number one to number two post." All the particulars required to be put on number one and number two posts shall be furnished by the locator to the provincial secretary, or such other officer as by the Philippine Government may be described as mining recorder, in writing, at the time the claim is recorded, and shall form a part of the record of such claim.

SEC. 24. That when a claim has been located the holder shall immediately mark the line between posts numbered one and two so that it can be distinctly seen. The locator shall also place a post at the point where he has found minerals in place, on which shall be written "Discovery post". Provided, That when the claim is surveyed the surveyor shall be guided by the records of the claim, the sketch plan on the back of the declaration made by the owner when the claim was recorded, posts numbered one and two, and the notice on number one, initial post.

EXAMPLES OF VARIOUS MODES OF LAYING OUT CLAIMS

SEC. 25. That it shall not be lawful to move number one post, but number two post may be moved by the deputy mineral surveyor when the distance between posts numbered one and two exceeds one thousand feet, in order to place number two post one thousand feet from number one post on the line of location. When the distance between posts numbered one and two is less than one thousand feet the deputy mineral surveyor shall have no authority to extend the claim beyond number two.

SEC. 26. That the "location line" shall govern the direction of one side of the claim, upon which the survey shall be extended according to this Act.

SEC. 27. That the holder of a mineral claim shall be entitled to all minerals which may lie within his claim, but he shall not be entitled to mine outside the boundary lines of his claim continued vertically downward: Provided, That this Act shall not prejudice the rights of claim owners nor claim holders whose claims have been located under existing laws prior to this Act.

SEC. 28. That no mineral claim of the full size shall be recorded without the application being accompanied by an affidavit made by the applicant or some person on his behalf cognizant of the facts—that the legal notices and posts have been put up; that mineral has been found in place on the claim proposed to be recorded; that the ground applied for is unoccupied by any other person. In the said declaration shall be set out the name of the applicant and the date of the location of the claim. The words written on the number one and number two posts shall be set out in full, and as accurate a description as possible of the position of the claim given with reference to some natural object or permanent monuments.

SEC. 29. That no mineral claim which at the date of its record is known by the locator to be less than a full-sized mineral claim shall be recorded without the word "fraction" being added to the name of the claim, and the application being accompanied by an affidavit or solemn declaration made by the applicant or some person on his behalf cognizant of the facts: That the legal posts and notices have been put up; that mineral has been found in place on the fractional claim proposed to be recorded; that the ground applied for is unoccupied by any other person. In the said declaration shall be set out the name of the applicant and the date of the location of the claim. The words written on the posts numbered one and two shall be set out in full, and as accurate a description as possible of the position of the claim given. A sketch plan shall be drawn by the applicant on the back of the declaration, showing as near as may be the position of the adjoining mineral claims and the shape and size, expressed in feet, of the claim or fraction desired to be recorded: Provided, That the failure on the part of the locator of a mineral claim to comply with any of the foregoing provisions of this section shall not be deemed to invalidate such location, if upon the facts it shall appear that such locator has actually discovered mineral in place on said location, and that there has been on his part a bona fide attempt to comply with the provisions of this Act, and that the non-observance of the formalities hereinbefore referred to is not of a character calculated to mislead other persons desiring to locate claims in the vicinity.

SEC. 30. That in cases where, from the nature or shape of the ground, it is impossible to mark the location line of the claim as provided by this Act, then the claim may be marked by placing posts as nearly as possible to the location line, and noting the distance and direction such posts may be from such location line, which distance and direction shall be set out in the record of the claim.

SEC. 31. That every person locating a mineral claim shall record the same with the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of the Philippine Islands may be described as mining recorder of the district within which the same is situated, within thirty days after the location thereof. Such record shall be made in a book to be kept for the purpose in the office of the said provincial secretary or such other officer as by said Government described as mining recorder, in which shall be inserted the name of the claim, the name of each locator, the locality of the mine, the direction of the location line, the length in feet, the date of location, and the date of the record. A claim which shall not have been recorded within the prescribed period shall be deemed to have been abandoned.

SEC. 32. That in case of any dispute as to the location of a mineral claim the title to the claim shall be recognized according to the priority of such location subject to any question as to the validity of the record itself and subject to the holder having complied with all the terms and conditions of this Act.

SEC. 33. That no holder shall be entitled to hold in his, its, or their own name or in the name of any other person, corporation, or association more than one mineral claim on the same vein or lode.

SEC. 34. That a holder may at any time abandon any mineral claim by giving notice, in writing, of such intention to abandon, to the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of the Philippine Islands may be described as mining recorder and from the date of the record of such notice all his interest in such claim shall cease.

SEC. 35. That proof of citizenship under the clauses of this Act relating to mineral lands may consist in the case of an individual, of his own affidavit thereof; in the case of an association of persons unincorporated, of the affidavit of their authorized agent made on his own knowledge or upon information and belief; and in case of a corporation organized under the laws of the United States, or of any State or Territory thereof, or of the Philippine Islands, by the filing of a certified copy of their charter or certificate of incorporation.

SEC. 36. That the United States Philippine Commission or its successors may make regulations, not in conflict with the provisions of this Act, governing the location, manner of recording, and amount of work necessary to hold possession of a mining claim, subject to the following requirements:

On each claim located after the passage of this Act, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year: Provided, That upon a failure to comply with these conditions the claim or mine upon which such failure occurred shall be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made, provided that the original locators, their heirs, assigns, or legal representatives have not resumed work upon the claim after failure and before such location. Upon the failure of any one of several coowners to contribute his proportion of the expenditures required thereby, the coowners who have performed the labor or made the improvements may, at the expiration of the year, give such delinquent coowner personal notice in writing, or notice by publication in the newspaper published nearest the claim, and in two newspapers published at Manila, one in the English language and the other in the Spanish language, to be designated by the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands, for at least once a week for ninety days, and if at the expiration of ninety days after such notice in writing or by publication such delinquent shall fail or refuse to contribute his proportion of the expenditure required by this section his interest in the claim shall become the property of his coowners who have made required expenditures. The period within which the work required to be done annually on all unpatented mineral claims shall commence on the first day of January succeeding the date of location of such claims.

SEC. 37. That a patent for any land claimed and located for valuable mineral deposits may be obtained in the following manner: Any person, association, or corporation authorized to locate a claim under this Act, having claimed and located a piece of land for such purposes, who has or have complied with the terms of this Act, may file in the office of the provincial secretary, or such other officer as by the Government of said Islands may be described as mining recorder of the province wherein the land claimed is located, an application for a patent, under oath, showing such compliance, together with a plat and field notes of the claim or claims in common, made by or under the direction of the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands, showing accurately the boundaries of the claim, which shall be distinctly marked by monuments on the ground, and shall post a copy of such plat, together with a notice of such application for a patent, in a conspicuous place on the land embraced in such plat previous to the filing of the application for a patent, and shall file an affidavit of at least two persons that such notice has been duly posted, and shall file a copy of the notice in such office, and shall thereupon be entitled to a patent for the land, in the manner following: The provincial secretary, or such other officer as by the Philippine Government may be described as mining recorder, upon the filing of such application, plat, field notes, notices, and affidavits, shall publish a notice that such an application has been made, once a week for the period of sixty days, in a newspaper to be by him designated as nearest to such claim and in two newspapers published at Manila, one in the English language and one in the Spanish language, to be designated by the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands; and he shall also post such notice in his office for the same period. The claimant at the time of filing this application, or at any time thereafter within the sixty days of publication, shall file with the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Philippine Government may be described as mining recorder a certificate of the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands that five hundred dollars' worth of labor has been expended or improvements made upon the claim by himself or grantors; that the plat is correct, with such further description by such reference to natural objects or permanent monuments as shall identify the claim, and furnish an accurate description to be incorporated in the patent. At the expiration of the sixty days of publication the claimant shall file his affidavit, showing that the plat and notice have been posted in a conspicuous place on the claim during such period of publication. If no adverse claim shall have been filed with the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of said Islands may be described as mining recorder at the expiration of the sixty days of publication, it shall be assumed that the applicant is entitled to a patent upon the payment to the provincial treasurer or the collector of internal revenue of five dollars per acre and that no adverse claim exists, and thereafter no objection from third parties to the issuance of a patent shall be heard, except it be shown that the applicant has failed to comply with the terms of this Act: Provided, That where the claimant for a patent is not a resident of or within the province wherein the land containing the vein, ledge, or deposit sought to be patented is located, the application for patent and the affidavits required to be made in this section by the claimant for such patent may be made by him, her, or its authorized agent where said agent is conversant with the facts sought to be established by said affidavits.

SEC. 38. That applicants for mineral patents, if residing beyond the limits of the province or military department wherein the claim is situated, may make the oath or affidavit required for proof of citizenship before the clerk of any court of record, or before any notary public of any province of the Philippine Islands, or any other official in said Islands authorized by law to administer oaths.

SEC. 39. That where an adverse claim is filed during the period of publication it shall be upon oath of the person or persons making the same, and shall show the nature, boundaries, and extent of such adverse claim, and all proceedings, except the publication of notice and making and filing of the affidavits thereof, shall be stayed until the controversy shall have been settled or decided by a court of competent jurisdiction or the adverse claim waived. It shall be the duty of the adverse claimant, within thirty days after filing his claim, to commence proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to determine the question of the right of possession, and prosecute the same with reasonable diligence to final judgment, and a failure so to do shall be a waiver of his adverse claim. After such judgment shall have been rendered the party entitled to the possession of the claim, or any portion thereof, may, without giving further notice, file a certified copy of the judgment roll with the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of the Philippine Islands may be described as mining recorder, together with the certificate of the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands that the requisite amount of labor has been expended or improvements made thereon, and the description required in other cases, and shall pay to the provincial treasurer or the collector of internal revenue of the province in which the claim is situated, as the case may be, five dollars per acre for his claim, together with the proper fees, whereupon the whole proceedings and the judgment roll shall be certified by the provincial secretary or such other officer as by said Government may be described as mining recorder to the Secretary of the Interior of the Philippine Islands, and a patent shall issue thereon for the claim, or such portion thereof as the applicant shall appear, from the decision of the court, rightly to possess. The adverse claim may be verified by the oath of any duly authorized agent or attorney in fact of the adverse claimant cognizant of the facts stated; and the adverse claimant, if residing or at the time being beyond the limits of the province wherein the claim is situated, may make oath to the adverse claim before the clerk of any court of record, or any notary public of any province or military department of the Philippine Islands, or any other officer authorized to administer oaths where the adverse claimant may then be. If it appears from the decision of the court that several parties are entitled to separate and different portions of the claim, each party may pay for his portion of the claim, with the proper fees, and file the certificate and description by the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands, whereupon the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of said Islands may be described as mining recorder shall certify the proceedings and judgment roll to the Secretary of the Interior for the Philippine Islands, as in the preceding case, and patents shall issue to the several parties according to their respective rights. If in any action brought pursuant to this section, title to the ground in controversy shall not be established by either party, the court shall so find, and judgment shall be entered accordingly. In such case costs shall not be allowed to either party, and the claimant shall not proceed in the office of the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of said Islands may be described as mining recorder or be entitled to a patent for the ground in controversy until he shall have perfected his title. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the alienation of a title conveyed by a patent for a mining claim to any person whatever.

SEC. 40. That the description of mineral claims upon surveyed lands shall designate the location of the claim with reference to the lines of the public surveys, but need not conform therewith; but where a patent shall be issued for claims upon unsurveyed lands, the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands in extending the surveys shall adjust the same to the boundaries of such patented claim according to the plat or description thereof, but so as in no case to interfere with or change the location of any such patented claim.

SEC. 41. That any person authorized to enter lands under this Act may enter and obtain patent to lands that are chiefly valuable for building stone under the provisions of this Act relative to placer mineral claims.

SEC. 42. That any person authorized to enter lands under this Act may enter and obtain patent to lands containing petroleum or other mineral oils and chiefly valuable therefor under the provisions of this Act relative to placer mineral claims.

SEC. 43. That no location of a placer claim shall exceed sixty-four hectares for any association of persons, irrespective of the number of persons composing such association, and no such location shall include more than eight hectares for an individual claimant. Such locations shall conform to the laws of the United States Philippine Commission, or its successors, with reference to public surveys, and nothing in this section contained shall defeat or impair any bona fide ownership of land for agricultural purposes or authorize the sale of the improvements of any bona fide settler to any purchaser.

SEC. 44. That where placer claims are located upon surveyed lands and conform to legal subdivisions, no further survey or plat shall be required, and all placer mining claims located after the date of passage of this Act shall conform as nearly as practicable to the Philippine system of public high land surveys and the regular subdivisions of such surveys; but where placer claims can not be conformed to legal subdivisions, survey and plat shall be made as on unsurveyed lands; and where by the segregation of mineral lands in any legal subdivision a quantity of agricultural land less than sixteen hectares shall remain, such fractional portion of agricultural land may be entered by any party qualified by law for homestead purposes.

SEC. 45. That where such person or association, they and their grantors have held and worked their claims for a period equal to the time prescribed by the statute of limitations of the Philippine Islands, evidence of such possession and working of the claims for such period shall be sufficient to establish a right to a patent thereto under this Act, in the absence of any adverse claim; but nothing in this Act shall be deemed to impair any lien which may have attached in any way whatever prior to the issuance of a patent.

SEC. 46. That the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands may appoint competent deputy mineral surveyors to survey mining claims. The expenses of the survey of vein or lode claims and of the survey of placer claims, together with the cost of publication of notices, shall be paid by the applicants, and they shall be at liberty to obtain the same at the most reasonable rates, and they shall also be at liberty to employ any such deputy mineral surveyor to make the survey. The Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands shall also have power to establish the maximum charges for surveys and publication of notices under this Act; and in case of excessive charges for publication he may designate any newspaper published in a province where mines are situated, or in Manila, for the publication of mining notices and fix the rates to be charged by such paper; and to the end that the Chief of the Bureau of Public Lands may be fully informed on the subject such applicant shall file with the provincial secretary, or such other officer as by the Government of the Philippine Islands may be described as mining recorder, a sworn statement of all charges and fees paid by such applicant for publication and surveys, and of all fees and money paid the provincial treasurer or the collector of internal revenue, as the case may be, which statement shall be transmitted, with the other papers in the case, to the Secretary of the Interior for the Philippine Islands.

SEC. 47. That all affidavits required to be made under this Act may be verified before any officer authorized to administer oaths within the province or military department where the claims may be situated, and all testimony and proofs may be taken before any such officer, and, when duly certified by the officer taking the same, shall have the same force and effect as if taken before the proper provincial secretary or such other officer as by the Government of the Philippine Islands may be described as mining recorder. In cases of contest as to the mineral or agricultural character of land the testimony and proofs may be taken as herein provided on personal notice of at least ten days to the opposing party; or if such party can not be found, then by publication at least once a week for thirty days in a newspaper to be designated by the provincial secretary or such other officer as by said Government may be described as mining recorder published nearest to the location of such land and in two newspapers published in Manila, one in the English language and one in the Spanish language, to be designated by the Chief of the Philippine Insular Bureau of Public Lands; and the provincial secretary or such other officer as by said Government may be described as mining recorder shall require proofs that such notice has been given.

SEC. 48. That where nonmineral land not contiguous to the vein or lode is used or occupied by the proprietor of such vein or lode for mining or milling purposes, such nonadjacent surface ground may be embraced and included in an application for a patent for such vein or lode, and the same may be patented therewith, subject to the same preliminary requirements as to survey and notice as are applicable to veins or lodes; but no location of such nonadjacent land shall exceed two hectares, and payment for the same must be made at the same rate as fixed by this Act for the superficies of the lode. The owner of a quartz mill or reduction works not owning a mine in connection therewith may also receive a patent for his mill site as provided in this section.

SEC. 49. That as a condition of sale the Government of the Philippine Islands may provide rules for working, policing, and sanitation of mines, and rules concerning easements, drainage, water rights, right of way, right of Government survey and inspection, and other necessary means to their complete development not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, and those conditions shall be fully expressed in the patent. The Philippine Commission or its successors are hereby further empowered to fix the bonds of deputy mineral surveyors.

SEC. 50. That whenever by priority of possession rights to the use of water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or other purposes have vested and accrued and the same are recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws, and the decisions of courts, the possessors and owners of such vested rights shall be maintained and protected in the same, and the right of way for the construction of ditches and canals for the purposes herein specified is acknowledged and confirmed, but whenever any person, in the construction of any ditch or canal, injures or damages the possession of any settler on the public domain, the party committing such injury or damage shall be liable to the party injured for such injury or damage.

SEC. 51. That all patents granted shall be subject to any vested and accrued water rights, or rights to ditches and reservoirs used in connection with such water rights as may have been acquired under or recognized by the preceding section.

SEC. 52. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is authorized to establish land districts and provide for the appointment of the necessary officers wherever they may deem the same necessary for the public convenience, and to further provide that in districts where land offices are established proceedings required by this Act to be had before provincial officers shall be had before the proper officers of such land offices.

SEC. 53. That every person above the age of twenty-one years, who is a citizen of the United States, or of the Philippine Islands, or who has acquired the rights of a native of said Islands under and by virtue of the treaty of Paris, or any association of persons severally qualified as above, shall, upon application to the proper provincial treasurer, have the right to enter any quality of vacant coal lands of said Islands not otherwise appropriated or reserved by competent authority, not exceeding sixty-four hectares to such individual person, or one hundred and twenty-eight hectares to such association, upon payment to the provincial treasurer or the collector of Internal Revenue, as the case may be of not less than twenty-five dollars per hectare for such lands, where the same shall be situated more than fifteen miles from any completed railroad or available harbor or navigable stream, and not less than fifty dollars per hectare for such lands as shall be within fifteen miles of such road, harbor, or stream: Provided, That such entries shall be taken in squares of sixteen or sixty-four hectares, in conformity with the rules and regulations governing the public-land surveys of the said Islands in plotting legal subdivisions.

SEC. 54. That any person or association of persons, severally qualified as above provided, who have opened and improved, or shall hereafter open and improve, any coal mine or mines upon the public lands, and shall be in actual possession of the same, shall be entitled to a preference right of entry under the preceding section of the mines so opened and improved.

SEC. 55. That all claims under the preceding section must be presented to the proper provincial secretary within sixty days after the date of actual possession and the commencement of improvements on the land by the filing of a declaratory statement therefor; and where the improvements shall have been made prior to the expiration of three months from the date of the passage of this Act, sixty days from the expiration of such three months shall be allowed for the filing of a declaratory statement; and no sale under the provisions of this Act shall be allowed until the expiration of six months from the date of the passage of this Act.

SEC. 56. That the three preceding sections shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons; and no association of persons, any member of which shall have taken the benefit of such sections, either as an individual or as a member of any other association, shall enter or hold any other lands under the provisions thereof; and no member of any association which shall have taken the benefit of such section shall enter or hold any other lands under their provisions; and all persons claiming under section fifty-eight shall be required to prove their respective rights and pay for the lands filed upon within one year from the time prescribed for filing their respective claims; and upon failure to file the proper notice or to pay for the land within the required period, the same shall be subject to entry by any other qualified applicant.

SEC. 57. That in case of conflicting claims upon coal lands where the improvements shall be commenced after the date of the passage of this Act, priority of possession and improvement, followed by proper filing and continued good faith, shall determine the preference right to purchase. And also where improvements have already been made prior to the passage of this Act, division of the land claimed may be made by legal subdivisions, which shall conform as nearly as practicable with the subdivisions of land provided for in this Act, to include as near as may be the valuable improvements of the respective parties. The Government of the Philippine Islands is authorized to issue all needful rules and regulations for carrying into effect the provisions of this and preceding sections relating to mineral lands.

SEC. 58. That whenever it shall be made to appear to the secretary of any province or the commander of any military department in the Philippine Islands that any lands within the province are saline in character, it shall be the duty of said provincial secretary or commander, under the regulations of the Government of the Philippine Islands, to take testimony in reference to such lands, to ascertain their true character, and to report the same to the Secretary of the Interior for the Philippine Islands; and if, upon such testimony, the Secretary of the Interior shall find that such lands are saline and incapable of being purchased under any of the laws relative to the public domain, then and in such case said lands shall be offered for sale at the office of the provincial secretary or such other officer as by the said Government may be described as mining recorder of the province or department in which the same shall be situated, as the case may be, under such regulations as may be prescribed by said Government and sold to the highest bidder, for cash, at a price of not less than three dollars per hectare; and in case such lands fail to sell when so offered, then the same shall be subject to private sale at such office, for cash, at a price not less than three dollars per hectare, in the same manner as other lands in the said Islands are sold. All executive proclamations relating to the sales of public saline lands shall be published in only two newspapers, one printed in the English language and one in the Spanish language, at Manila, which shall be designated by said Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 59. That no Act granting lands to provinces, districts, or municipalities to aid in the construction of roads, or for other public purposes, shall be so construed as to embrace mineral lands, which, in all cases, are reserved exclusively, unless otherwise specially provided in the Act or Acts making the grant.

SEC. 60. That nothing in this Act shall be construed to affect the rights of any person, partnership, or corporation having a valid, perfected mining concession granted prior to April eleventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, but all such concessions shall be conducted under the provisions of the law in force at the time they were granted, subject at all times to cancellation by reason of illegality in the procedure by which they were obtained, or for failure to comply with the conditions prescribed as requisite to their retention in the laws under which they were granted: Provided, That the owner or owners of every such concession shall cause the corners made by its boundaries to be distinctly marked with permanent monuments within six months after this Act has been promulgated in the Philippine Islands, and that any concessions the boundaries of which are not so marked within this period shall be free and open to explorations and purchase under the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 61. That mining rights on public lands in the Philippine Islands shall, after the passage of this Act, be acquired only in accordance with its provisions.

SEC. 62. That all proceedings for the cancellation of perfected Spanish concessions shall be conducted in the courts of the Philippine Islands having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, unless the United States Philippine Commission, or its successors, shall create special tribunals for the determination of such controversies.

AUTHORITY FOR THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS GOVERNMENT TO PURCHASE LANDS OF RELIGIOUS ORDERS AND OTHERS AND ISSUE BONDS FOR PURCHASE PRICE.

SEC. 63. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized, subject to the limitations and conditions prescribed in this Act, to acquire, receive, hold, maintain, and convey title to real and personal property, and may acquire real estate for public uses by the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

SEC. 64. That the powers hereinbefore conferred in section sixty-three may also be exercised in respect of any lands, easements, appurtenances, and hereditaments which, on the thirteenth of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, were owned or held by associations, corporations, communities, religious orders, or private individuals in such large tracts or parcels and in such manner as in the opinion of the Commission injuriously to affect the peace and welfare of the people of the Philippine Islands. And for the purpose of providing funds to acquire the lands mentioned in this section said Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby empowered to incur indebtedness, to borrow money, and to issue, and to sell at not less than par value, in gold coin of the United States of the present standard value or the equivalent in value in money of said Islands, upon such terms and conditions as it may deem best, registered or coupon bonds of said Government for such amount as may be necessary, said bonds to be in denominations of fifty dollars or any multiple thereof, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding four and a half per centum per annum, payable quarterly, and to be payable at the pleasure of said Government after dates named in said bonds not less than five nor more than thirty years from the date of their issue, together with interest thereon, in gold coin of the United States of the present standard value or the equivalent in value in money of said Islands; and said bonds shall be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of said Government, or any local authority therein, or of the Government of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority in the United States or the Philippine Islands. The moneys which may be realized or received from the issue and sale of said bonds shall be applied by the Government of the Philippine Islands to the acquisition of the property authorized by this section, and to no other purposes.

SEC. 65. That all lands acquired by virtue of the preceding section shall constitute a part and portion of the public property of the Government of the Philippine Islands, and may be held, sold, and conveyed, or leased temporarily for a period not exceeding three years after their acquisition by said Government on such terms and conditions as it may prescribe, subject to the limitations and conditions provided for in this Act: Provided, That all deferred payments and the interest thereon shall be payable in the money prescribed for the payment of principal and interest of the bonds authorized to be issued in payment of said lands by the preceding section and said deferred payments shall bear interest at the rate borne by the bonds. All moneys realized or received from sales or other disposition of said lands or by reason thereof shall constitute a trust fund for the payment of principal and interest of said bonds, and also constitute a sinking fund for the payment of said bonds at their maturity. Actual settlers and occupants at the time said lands are acquired by the Government shall have the preference over all others to lease, purchase, or acquire their holdings within such reasonable time as may be determined by said Government.

MUNICIPAL BONDS FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

SEC. 66. That for the purpose of providing funds to construct sewers, to furnish adequate sewer and drainage facilities, to secure a sufficient supply of water, and to provide all kinds of municipal betterments and improvements in municipalities, the Government of the Philippine Islands, under such limitations, terms, and conditions as it may prescribe, with the consent and approval of the President and the Congress of the United States, may permit any municipality of said Islands to incur indebtedness, borrow money, and to issue and sell (at not less than par value in gold coin of the United States) registered or coupon bonds in such amount and payable at such time as may be determined by the Government of said Islands, with interest thereon not to exceed five per centum per annum: Provided, That the entire indebtedness of any municipality under this section shall not exceed five per centum of the assessed valuation of the property in said municipality, and any obligation in excess of such limit shall be null and void.

SEC. 67. That all municipal bonds shall be in denominations of fifty dollars, or any multiple thereof, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, payable quarterly, such bonds to be payable at the pleasure of the Government of the Philippine Islands, after dates named in said bonds not less than five nor more than thirty years from the date of their issue, together with the interest thereon, in gold coin of the United States of the present standard of value, or its equivalent in value in money of the said Islands; and said bonds shall be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the Government of the Philippine Islands, or any local authority therein, or the Government of the United States.

SEC. 68. That all moneys which may be realized or received from the issue and sale of said bonds shall be utilized under authorization of the Government of the Philippine Islands in providing the municipal improvements and betterment which induced the issue and sale of said bonds, and for no other purpose.

SEC. 69. That the Government of the Philippine Islands shall, by the levy and collection of taxes on the municipality, its inhabitants and their property, or by other means, make adequate provision to meet the obligation of the bonds of such municipality, and shall create a sinking fund sufficient to retire them and pay the interest thereon in accordance with the terms of issue: Provided, That if said bonds or any portion thereof shall be paid out of the funds of the Government of said Islands, such municipality shall reimburse said Government for the sum thus paid, and said Government is hereby empowered to collect said sum by the levy and collection of taxes on such municipality.

SEC. 70. That for the purpose of providing funds to construct sewers in the city of Manila and to furnish it with an adequate sewer and drainage system and supply of water the Government of the Philippine Islands, with the approval of the President of the United States first had, is hereby authorized to permit the city of Manila to incur indebtedness, to borrow money, and to issue and sell (at not less than par value in gold coin of the United States), upon such terms and conditions as it may deem best, registered or coupon bonds of the city of Manila to an amount not exceeding four million dollars, lawful money of the United States, payable at such time or times as may be determined by said Government, with interest thereon not to exceed five per centum per annum.

SEC. 71. That said coupon or registered bonds shall be in denominations of fifty dollars or any multiple thereof, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, payable quarterly, such bonds to be payable at the pleasure of the Government of the Philippine Islands, after dates named in said bonds not less than five nor more than thirty years from the date of their issue, together with the interest thereon in gold coin of the United States of the present standard value, or the equivalent in value in money of the said Islands; and said bonds shall be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the Government of the said Islands, or of any local authority therein, or of the Government of the United States.

SEC. 72. That all moneys which may be realized or received from the issue and sale of said bonds shall be utilized under authorization of said Government of the Philippine Islands in providing a suitable sewer and drainage system and adequate supply of water for the city of Manila and for no other purpose.

SEC. 73. That the Government of the Philippine Islands shall, by the levy and collection of taxes on the city of Manila, its inhabitants and their property, or by other means, make adequate provision to meet the obligations of said bonds and shall create a sinking fund sufficient to retire them and pay the interest thereon in accordance with the terms of issue: Provided, That if said bonds or any portion thereof shall be paid out of the funds of the Government of said Islands, said city shall reimburse said Government for the sum thus paid, and said Government is hereby empowered to collect said sum by the levy and collection of taxes on said city.

FRANCHISES.

SEC. 74. That the Government of the Philippine Islands may grant franchises, privileges, and concessions, including the authority to exercise the right of eminent domain for the construction and operation of works of public utility and service, and may authorize said works to be constructed and maintained over and across the public property of the United States, including streets, highways, squares, and reservations, and over similar property of the Government of said Islands, and may adopt rules and regulations under which the provincial and municipal governments of the Islands may grant the right to use and occupy such public property belonging to said provinces or municipalities: Provided, That no private property shall be taken for any purpose under this section without just compensation paid or tendered therefor, and that such authority to take and occupy land shall not authorize the taking, use or occupation of any land except such as is required for the actual necessary purposes for which the franchise is granted and that no franchise, privilege, or concession shall be granted to any corporation except under the conditions that it shall be subject to amendment, alteration, or repeal by the Congress of the United States, and that lands or rights of use and occupation of lands thus granted shall revert to the Governments by which they were respectively granted upon the termination of the franchises and concessions under which they were granted or upon their revocation or repeal. That all franchises, privileges, or concessions granted under this Act shall forbid the issue of stock or bonds except in exchange for actual cash, or for property at a fair valuation, equal to the par value of the stock or bonds so issued, shall forbid the declaring of stock or bond dividends, and in the case of public-service corporations, shall provide for the effective regulation of the charges thereof, for the official inspection and regulation of the books and accounts of such corporations, and for the payment of a reasonable percentage of gross earnings into the Treasury of the Philippine Islands or of the province or municipality within which such franchises are granted and exercised. Provided further, That it shall be unlawful for any corporation organized under this Act, or for any person, company, or corporation receiving any grant, franchise, or concession from the Government of said Islands, to use, employ, or contract for the labor of persons claimed or alleged to be held in involuntary servitude; and any person, company, or corporation so violating the provisions of this Act shall forfeit all charters, grants, franchises, and concessions for doing business in said Islands, and in addition shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten thousand dollars.

SEC. 75. That no corporation shall be authorized to conduct the business of buying and selling real estate or be permitted to hold or own real estate except such as may be reasonably necessary to enable it to carry out the purposes for which it is created, and every corporation authorized to engage in agriculture shall by its charter be restricted to the ownership and control of not to exceed one thousand and twenty-four hectares of land; and it shall be unlawful for any member of a corporation engaged in agriculture or mining and for any corporation organized for any purpose except irrigation to be in any wise interested in any other corporation engaged in agriculture or in mining. Corporations, however, may loan funds upon real-estate security and purchase real estate when necessary for the collection of loans, but they shall dispose of real estate so obtained within five years after receiving the title. Corporations not organized in the Philippine Islands, and doing business therein shall be bound by the provisions of this section so far as they are applicable.

COINAGE

SEC. 76. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized to establish a mint at the city of Manila, in said Islands, for coinage purposes, and the coins hereinafter authorized may be coined at said mint. And the said Government is hereby authorized to enact laws necessary for such establishment: Provided, That the laws of the United States relating to mints and coinage, so far as applicable, are hereby extended to the coinage of said Islands.

SEC. 77. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is authorized to coin, for use in said Islands, a coin of the denomination of fifty centavos and of the weight of one hundred and ninety-two and nine-tenths grains, a coin of the denomination of twenty centavos and of the weight of seventy-seven and sixteen one-hundredths grains, and a coin of the denomination of ten centavos and of the weight of thirty-eight and fifty-eight one-hundredths grains, and the standard of said silver coins shall be such that of one thousand parts by weight nine hundred shall be of pure metal and one hundred of alloy, and the alloy shall be of copper.

SEC. 78. That the subsidiary silver coins authorized by the preceding section shall be coined under the authority of the Government of the Philippine Islands in such amounts as it may determine, with the approval of the Secretary of War of the United States, from silver bullion purchased by said Government, with the approval of the Secretary of War of the United States: Provided, That said Government may in addition and in its discretion recoin the Spanish-Filipino dollars and subsidiary silver coins issued under the authority of the Spanish Government for use in said Islands into the subsidiary coins provided for in the preceding section at such rate and under such regulations as it may prescribe, and the subsidiary silver coins authorized by this section shall be legal tender in said Islands to the amount of ten dollars.

SEC. 79. That the Government of the Philippine Islands is also authorized to issue minor coins of the denominations of one-half centavo, one centavo, and five centavos, and such minor coins shall be legal tender in said Islands for amounts not exceeding one dollar. The alloy of the five-centavo piece shall be of copper and nickel, to be composed of three-fourths copper and one-fourth nickel. The alloy of the one-centavo and one-half-centavo pieces shall be ninety-five per centum of copper and five per centum of tin and zinc, in such proportions as shall be determined by said Government. The weight of the five-centavo piece shall be seventy-seven and sixteen-hundredths grains troy, and of the one-centavo piece eighty grains troy, and of the one-half-centavo piece forty grains troy.

SEC. 80. That for the purchase of metal for the subsidiary and minor coinage, authorized by the preceding sections, an appropriation may be made by the Government of the Philippine Islands from its current funds, which shall be reimbursed from the coinage under said sections; and the gain or seigniorage arising therefrom shall be paid into the Treasury of said Islands.

SEC. 81. That the subsidiary and minor coinage hereinbefore authorized may be coined at the mint of the Government of the Philippine Islands at Manila, or arrangements may be made by the said Government with the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States for their coinage at any of the mints of the United States, at a charge covering the reasonable cost of the work.

SEC. 82. That the subsidiary and minor coinage hereinbefore authorized shall bear devices and inscriptions to be prescribed by the Government of the Philippine Islands, and such devices and inscriptions shall express the sovereignty of the United States, that it is a coin of the Philippine Islands, the denomination of the coin, and the year of the coinage.

SEC. 83. That the Government of the Philippine Islands shall have the power to make all necessary appropriations and all proper regulations for the redemption and reissue of worn or defective coins and for carrying out all other provisions of this Act relating to coinage.

SEC. 84. That the laws relating to entry, clearance, and manifests of steamships and other vessels arriving from or going to foreign ports shall apply to voyages each way between the Philippine Islands and the United States and the possessions thereof, and all laws relating to the collection and protection of customs duties not inconsistent with the Act of Congress of March eighth, nineteen hundred and two, "temporarily to provide revenue for the Philippine Islands," shall apply in the case of vessels and goods arriving from said Islands in the United States and its aforesaid possessions.

The laws relating to seamen on foreign voyages shall apply to seamen on vessels going from the United States and its possessions aforesaid to said Islands, the customs officers there being for this purpose substituted for consular officers in foreign ports.

The provisions of chapters six and seven, title forty-eight, Revised Statutes, so far as now in force, and any amendments thereof, shall apply to vessels making voyages either way between ports of the United States or its aforesaid possessions and ports in said Islands; and the provisions of law relating to the public health and quarantine shall apply in the case of all vessels entering a port of the United States or its aforesaid possessions from said Islands, where the customs officers at the port of departure shall perform the duties required by such law of consular officers in foreign ports.

Section three thousand and five, Revised Statutes, as amended, and other existing laws concerning the transit of merchandise through the United States, shall apply to merchandise arriving at any port of the United States destined for any of its insular and continental possessions or destined from any of them to foreign countries.

Nothing in this Act shall be held to repeal or alter any part of the Act of March eighth, nineteen hundred and two, aforesaid, or to apply to Guam, Tutuila, or Manua, except that section eight of an Act entitled "An Act to revise and amend the tariff laws of the Philippine Archipelago," enacted by the Philippine Commission on the seventeenth of September, nineteen hundred and one, and approved by an Act entitled "An Act temporarily to provide revenues for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved March eighth, nineteen hundred and two, is hereby amended so as to authorize the Civil Governor thereof in his discretion to establish the equivalent rates of the money in circulation in said Islands with the money of the United States as often as once in ten days.

SEC. 85. That the Treasury of the Philippine Islands and such banking associations in said Islands with a paid-up capital of not less than two million dollars and chartered by the United States or any State thereof as may be designated by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall be depositories of public money of the United States, subject to the provisions of existing law governing such depositories in the United States: Provided, That the Treasury of the Government of said Islands shall not be required to deposit bonds in the Treasury of the United States, or to give other specific securities for the safekeeping of public money except as prescribed, in his discretion, by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 86. That all laws passed by the Government of the Philippine Islands shall be reported to Congress, which hereby reserves the power and authority to annul the same, and the Philippine Commission is hereby directed to make annual report of all its receipts and expenditures to the Secretary of War.

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS.

SEC. 87. That the Division of Insular Affairs of the War Department, organized by the Secretary of War, is hereby continued until otherwise provided, and shall hereafter be known as the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department. The business assigned to said Bureau shall embrace all matters pertaining to civil government in the island possessions of the United States subject to the jurisdiction of the War Department; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to detail an officer of the Army whom he may consider especially well qualified, to act under the authority of the Secretary of War as the chief of said Bureau, and said officer while acting under said detail shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel.

SEC. 88. That all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 1, 1902.

The Philippine Assembly.—The Philippine Assembly was authorized by an act of Congress of the United States passed in 1902, empowering the President to establish a popular assembly in the Philippines two years after the publication of a census. The census was taken in 1903, soon after the official declaration of the end of war, with General J. P. Sanger of the United States army as director of the census, assisted by Henry Gannett, of the

SPEAKER SERGIO OSMENA

United States Geological Survey, and by Victor Olmsted, of the Bureau of Statistics. The report was published in 1905, in four volumes, both in English and Spanish, putting the population of the Philippines at 7,635,426 including the non-Christian tribes.

On the 13th of July, 1907, the general election was held for members of the Philippine Assembly consisting of eighty districts, excluding the non-Christian provinces. Of the eighty members elected, the majority were in favor of ultimate independence. At first the members of the Assembly held office for two years, but their tenure of office was later extended to a period of four years. Since the passage of the Jones Law, however, the term of office of the members of the House of Representatives, which succeeded the Philippine Assembly in 1916, was reduced to three years.

The inauguration of the first Philippine Assembly took place in the Grand Opera House, on Rizal Avenue, Manila, on the sixteenth of October, 1907, with Secretary of War Taft, former Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, representing the President of the United States, as the Guest of Honor. Former Provincial Governor of Cebu, the Hon. Sergio Osmeña, then only 29 years of age, was elected Speaker of said assembly. Speaker Osmeña has had the distinction of being the first presiding officer of the first convention of provincial governors held in Manila for the first time in the history of the Philippines on the first of October, 1906, and for fifteen years (1907-1922) he ably managed the affairs of the Philippine Assembly and the House of Representatives.

Prior to the inauguration of the Philippine Assembly on October 16, 1907, the Commission was the only law-making body composed of four American and three Filipino members. Later Filipino membership was increased from three to five. The Philippine Commission in 1914, prior to the enactment of the Jones Law, was composed of the following:

- Governor-General Francis Burton Harrison, President of the Commission;
- Vice-Governor Henderson S. Martin, Secretary of Public Instruction;
- Hon. Clinton L. Riggs, Secretary of Commerce and Police;

AUTHOR OF THE JONES LAW

Hon. WILLIAM A. JONES

Hon. Winfred T. Denison, Secretary of the Interior;

Hon. Victorino Mapa, Secretary of Justice;

Hon. Rafael Palma, member without portfolio;

Hon. Vicente Singson Encarnacion, member without portfolio;

Hon. Jaime C. de Veyra, member without portfolio; and

Hon. Vicente Ilastre, member without portfolio.

The Jones Law.—Self-governing powers were given the Filipinos as soon as the American Congress was convinced of their experience and ability to handle their own national affairs. The Jones Act, or the Act of Congress of August 29, 1916, reorganizes the Government of the Philippine Islands, giving ample powers to the Filipinos with a view to preparing them for self-government. Said Act reads as follows:

ORGANIC ACT FOR THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Commonly known as the "Jones Law"

[Public No. 240—64th Congress]

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

AN ACT TO DECLARE THE PURPOSE OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES AS TO THE FUTURE POLITICAL STATUS OF THE PEOPLE OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, AND TO PROVIDE A MORE AUTONOMOUS GOVERNMENT FOR THOSE ISLANDS,

Whereas it was never the intention of the people of the United States in the incipency of the war with Spain to make it a war of conquest or for territorial aggrandizement; and

Whereas it is, as it has always been, the purpose of the people of the United States to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established therein; and

Whereas for the speedy accomplishment of such purpose it is desirable to place in the hands of the people of the Philippines as large a control of their domestic affairs as can be given them without, in the meantime, impairing the exercise of the rights of sovereignty by the people of the United States, in order that, by the use and exercise of popular franchise and governmental powers, they may be the better prepared to fully assume the responsibilities and enjoy all the privileges of complete independence: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled: That the provisions of this act and the name "The Philippines" as used in this act shall apply to and include the Philippine Islands ceded to the United States government by the treaty of peace concluded between the United States and Spain on the eleventh day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, the boundaries of which are set forth in article III of said treaty, together with those islands embraced in the treaty between Spain and the United States concluded at Washington on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred.

SEC. 2. That all inhabitants of the Philippine Islands who were Spanish subjects on the eleventh day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, and then resided in said islands, and their children born subsequent thereto, shall be deemed and held to be citizens of the Philippine Islands, except such as shall have elected to preserve their allegiance to the Crown of Spain in accordance with the provisions of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, signed at Paris December tenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and except such others as have since become citizens of some other country; Provided, That the Philippine legislature, herein provided for, is hereby authorized to provide by law for the acquisition of Philippine citizenship by those natives of the Philippine Islands who do not come within the foregoing provisions, the natives of the insular possessions of the United States, and such other persons residing in the Philippine Islands who are citizens of the United States, or who could become citizens of the United States under the laws of the United States if residing therein.

SEC. 3. That no law shall be enacted in said islands which shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or deny to any person therein the equal protection of the laws. Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation.

That in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf.

That no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law; and no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

That all persons shall before conviction be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses.

That no law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted.

That no person shall be imprisoned for debt.

That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion, insurrection or invasion the public safety may require it, in either of which events the same may be suspended by the president, or by the governor-general, wherever during such period the necessity for such suspension shall exist.

That no ex-post facto law or bill of attainder shall be enacted nor shall the law of primogeniture ever be in force in the Philippines.

That no law granting a title of nobility shall be enacted, and no person holding any office of profit or trust in said islands shall, without the consent of the Congress of the United States, accept any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, queen, prince or foreign State.

That excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

That the right to be secured against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.

That slavery shall not exist in said islands; nor shall involuntary servitude exist therein except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.

That no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the government for redress of grievances.

That no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed; and no religious test shall be required for the exercise of civil or political rights. No public money or property shall ever be appropriated, applied, donated, or used, directly or indirectly, for the use, benefit, or support of any sect, church, denomination, sectarian institution, or system of religion, or for the use, benefit, or support of any priest, preacher, minister, or other religious teacher or dignitary as such. Contracting of polygamous or plural marriages hereafter is prohibited. That no law shall be construed to permit polygamous or plural marriages.

That no money shall be paid out of the treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation by law.

That the rule of taxation in said islands shall be uniform.

That no bill which may be enacted into law shall embrace more than one subject and that subject shall be expressed in the title of the bill.

That no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

That all money collected on any tax levied or assessed for a special purpose shall be treated as a special fund in the treasury and paid out for such purpose only.

SEC. 4. That all expenses that may be incurred on account of the government of the Philippines for salaries of officials and the conduct of their offices and departments, and all expenses and obligations contracted for the internal improvement or development of the islands not, however, including defenses, barracks, and other works undertaken by the United States, shall, except as otherwise specifically provided by the congress, be paid by the government of the Philippines.

SEC. 5. That the statutory laws of the United States hereafter enacted shall not apply to the Philippine Islands except when they specifically so provided or it is so provided in this act.

SEC. 6. That the laws now in force in the Philippines shall continue in force and effect, except as altered, amended, or modified herein, until altered, amended, or repealed by the legislative authority herein provided or by act of Congress of the United States.

SEC. 7. That the legislative authority herein provided shall have power, when not inconsistent with this act, by due enactment to amend, alter, modify, or repeal any law, civil or criminal, continued in force by this act as it may from time to time see fit.

This power shall specifically extend with the limitation herein provided as to the tariff to all laws relating to revenue and taxation in effect in the Philippines.

SEC. 8. That general legislative power, except as otherwise herein provided, is hereby granted to the Philippine legislature, authorized by this Act.

SEC. 9. That all the property and rights which may have been acquired in the Philippine Islands by the United States under the treaty of peace with Spain, signed December tenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, except such land or other property as has been or shall be designated by the president of the United States, for military and other reservations of the Government of the United States, and all lands which may have been subsequently acquired by the Government of the Philippine Islands by purchase under the provisions of sections sixty-three and sixty-four of the Act of Congress approved July first nineteen hundred and two, except such as may have heretofore been sold and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of said

Act of Congress, are hereby placed under the control of the government of said islands to be administered or disposed of for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof, and the Philippine legislature shall have power to legislate with respect to all such matters as it may deem advisable; but acts of the Philippine Legislature with reference to land of the public domain, timber and mining hereafter enacted, shall not have the force of law until approved by the President of the United States: Provided, That upon the approval of such an act by the Governor General, it shall be by him forthwith transmitted to the President of the United States, and he shall approve or disapprove the same within six months from and after its enactment and submission for his approval, and if not disapproved within such time it shall become a law the same as if it had been specifically approved: Provided, further, That where lands in the Philippine Islands have been or may be reserved for any public purpose of the United States, and, being no longer required for the purpose for which reserved, have been or may be, by order of the President placed under the control of the government of said islands to be administered for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof, the order of the President shall be regarded as effectual to give the government of said islands full control and power to administer and dispose of such lands for the benefit of the inhabitants of said islands.

SEC. 10. That, while this Act provides that Philippine Government shall have the authority to enact a tariff law, the trade relations between the islands and the United States shall continue to be governed exclusively by laws of the Congress of the United States: Provided, That tariff act or acts amendatory to the tariff of the Philippine Islands shall not become law until they receive the approval of the President of the United States, nor shall any act of the Philippine legislature affecting immigration or the currency or coinage laws of the Philippines become a law until it has been approved by the President of the United States: Provided further, That the President shall approve or disapprove any act mentioned in the foregoing proviso within six months from and after its enactment and submission for his approval, and if not disapproved within such time, it shall become a law the same as if it had been specifically approved.

SEC. 11. That no export duties shall be levied or collected on exports from the Philippine Islands, but taxes and assessments on property and license fees for franchises, and privileges, and internal taxes, direct or indirect, may be imposed for the purposes of the Philippine Government and the provincial and municipal governments thereof, respectively, as may be provided and defined by acts of the Philippine Legislature and, where necessary to anticipate taxes and revenues, bonds and other obligations may be issued by the Philippine Government or any provincial or municipal government therein, as may be provided by law and to protect the public credit: Provided, however, That the entire indebtedness of the Philippine Government created by the authority conferred therein shall not exceed at any one time the sum of $15,000,000, exclusive of those obligations known as friar land bonds, nor that of any province or municipality a sum in excess of seven per centum of the aggregate tax valuation of its property at any one time.

SEC. 12. That general legislative powers in the Philippines except as herein otherwise provided, shall be vested in a legislature which shall consist of two houses, one the senate and the other the house of representatives, and the two houses shall be designated "The Philippine Legislature": Provided, That, until the Philippine Legislature as herein provided shall have been organized, the existing Philippine Legislature shall have all legislative authority herein granted to the Government of the Philippine Islands, except such as may now be within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Philippine Commission, which is so continued until the organization of the legislature herein provided for the Philippines.

When the Philippine Legislature shall have been organized, the exclusive legislative jurisdiction and authority exercised by the Philippine Commission shall thereafter be exercised by the Philippine Legislature.

SEC. 13. That the members of the senate of the Philippines, except as herein provided, shall be elected for terms of six and three years, as hereinafter provided, by the qualified electors of the Philippines. Each of the senatorial districts defined as hereinafter provided shall have the right to elect two senators. No person shall be an elective member of the senate of the Philippines who is not a qualified elector and over thirty years of age, and who is not able to read and write either the Spanish or English language, and who has not been a resident of the Philippines for at least two consecutive years and an actual resident of the senatorial district from which chosen for a period of at least one year immediately prior to his election.

SEC. 14. That the members of the house of representatives shall, except as herein provided, be elected triennially by the qualified electors of the Philippines. Each of the representative districts hereinafter provided for shall have the right to elect one representative. No person shall be an elective member of the house of representatives who is not a qualified elector and over twenty-five years of age, and who is not able to read and write either the Spanish or English language, and who has not been an actual resident of the district from which elected for at least one year immediately prior to his election: Provided, That the members of the present assembly elected on the first Tuesday in June, 1916, shall be the members of the house of representatives from their respective districts for the term expiring in 1919.

SEC. 15. That at the first election held pursuant to this act, the qualified electors shall be those having the qualifications of voters under the present law; thereafter and until otherwise provided by the Philippine Legislature herein provided for the qualifications of voters for senators and representatives in the Philippines and all officers elected by the people shall be as follows:

Every male person who is not a citizen or subject of a foreign power, twenty-one years of age or over (except insane and feeble-minded persons and those convicted in a court of competent jurisdiction of an infamous offense since the thirteenth day of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight), who shall have been a resident of the Philippines for one year and of the municipality in which he shall offer to vote for six months next preceding the day of voting, and who is comprised within one of the following classes:

(a) Those who under existing law are legal voters and have exercised the right of suffrage.

(b) Those who own real property to the value of 500 pesos, or who annually pay 30 pesos or more of the established taxes.

(c) Those who are able to read and write either Spanish, English, or a native language.

SEC. 16. That the Philippine Islands shall be divided into twelve senate districts, as follows:

First district: Batanes, Cagayan, Isabela, Ilocos Norte, and Ilocos Sur.

Second district: La Union, Pangasinan, and Zambales.

Third district: Tarlac, Nueva Ecija, Pampanga, and Bulacan.

Fourth district: Bataan, Rizal, Manila and Laguna.

Fifth district: Batangas, Mindoro, Tayabas, and Cavite.

Sixth district: Sorsogon, Albay, and Ambos Camarines.

Seventh district: Iloilo and Capiz.

Eighth district: Negros Occidental, Negros Oriental, Antique, and Palawan.

Ninth district: Leyte and Samar.

Tenth district: Cebu.

Eleventh district: Surigao, Misamis and Bohol.

Twelfth district: The Mountain Province, Baguio, Nueva Vizcaya, and the Department of Mindanao and Sulu.

The representative districts shall be eighty-one now provided by law, and three in the Mountain Province, one in Nueva Vizcaya and five in the Department of Mindanao and Sulu.

The first election under the provisions of this Act shall be held on the first Tuesday of October, nineteen hundred and sixteen, unless the Governor-General in his discretion shall fix another date not earlier than thirty nor later than sixty days after the passage of this Act: Provided, That the Governor-General's proclamation shall be published at least thirty days prior to the date fixed for the election and there shall be chosen at such election one senator from each senate district for a term of three years and one for six years. Thereafter one senator from each district shall be elected from each senate district for a term of six years: Provided, That the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands shall appoint, without the consent of the senate and without restriction as to residence, senators and representatives who will, in his opinion, best represent the senate district and those representative districts which may be included in the territory not now represented in the Philippine Assembly: Provided further, That thereafter elections shall be held only on such days and under such regulations as to ballots, voting, and qualifications of electors as may be prescribed by the Philippine Legislature, to which is hereby given authority to redistrict the Philippine Islands, and modify, amend, or repeal any provision of this section, except such as refer to appointive senators and representatives.

SEC. 17. That the terms of office of elective senators and representatives shall be six and three years, respectively, and shall begin on the date of their election. In case of vacancy among the elective members of the senate or in the house of representatives, special elections may be held in the districts wherein such vacancy occurred under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, but senators or representatives elected in such cases shall hold office only for the unexpired portion of the term wherein the vacancy occurred. Senators and representatives appointed by the Governor-General shall hold office until removed by the Governor-General.

SEC. 18. That the senate and house of representatives, respectively, shall be the sole judges of the elections, returns, and qualifications of their elective members, and each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel an elective member. Both houses shall convene at the capital on the sixteenth day of October, next following the election and organize by the election of a speaker or a presiding officer, a clerk, and a sergeant-at-arms for each house, and such other officers and assistants as may be required. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may meet, adjourn from day to day, and compel the attendance of absent members. The legislature shall hold annual sessions, commencing on the sixteenth day of October, or, if the sixteenth day of October be a legal holiday, then on the first day following which is not a legal holiday, in each year. The legislature may be called in special session at any time by the Governor-

General for general legislation, or for action on such specific subjects as he may designate. No special session shall continue longer than thirty days, and no regular session shall continue longer than one hundred days, exclusive of Sundays. The legislature is hereby given the power and authority to change the date of the commencement of its annual sessions.

The senators and representatives shall receive an annual compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the Philippine Islands. The senators and representatives shall in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses and in going to and returning from same; and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he may have been elected, be eligible to any office the election to which is vested in the legislature, nor shall be appointed to any office of trust or profit which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such term.

SEC. 19. That each house of the legislature shall keep a journal of its proceedings and, from time to time, publish the same and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall upon demand of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal and every bill and joint resolution, which shall have passed both houses, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor-General. If he approves the same, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it with his objections to that house in which it shall have originated, which shall enter the objections at large on its journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of the members elected to that house shall agree to pass the same, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of all the members elected to that house it shall be sent to the Governor-General, who, in case he shall then not approve, shall transmit the same to the President of the United States.

The vote of each house shall be by the yeas and nays, and the names of the members voting for and against shall be entered on the journal. If the President of the United States approve the same, he shall sign it and it shall become a law. If he shall not approve same, he shall return it to the Governor-General, so stating, and it shall not become a law: Provided, That if any bill or joint resolution shall not be returned by the Governor-General as herein provided within twenty days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the legislature by adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall become a law unless vetoed by the Governor-General within thirty days after adjournment: Provided further, That the President of the United States shall approve or disapprove an act submitted to him under the provisions of this section within six months from and after its enactment and submission for his approval; and if not approved within such time, it shall become a law the same as if it had been specifically approved. The Governor-General shall have the power to veto any particular item or items of an appropriation bill, but the veto shall not affect the item or items to which he does not object. The item or items objected to shall not take effect except in the manner heretofore provided in this section as to bills and joint resolutions returned to the legislature without his approval.

All laws enacted by the Philippine Legislature shall be reported to the Congress of the United States, which hereby reserves the power and authority to annul the same. If at the termination of any fiscal year the appropriations necessary for the support of government for the ensuing fiscal year shall not have been made, the several sums appropriated in the last appropriation bills for the objects and purposes therein specified so far as the same may be done, shall be deemed to be reappropriated for the several objects and purposes specified in said last appropriation bill; and until the legislature shall act in such behalf the treasurer shall, when so directed by the Governor-General, make the payments, necessary for the purposes aforesaid.

HON. MANUEL L. QUEZON

Resident Commissioner to the United States, who brought the Jones Law on his return to the Philippines

SEC. 20. That at the first meeting of the Philippine Legislature created by this Act and triennially thereafter, there shall be chosen by the legislature two Resident Commissioners to the United States who shall hold their office for a term of three years beginning with the fourth day of March following their election and who shall be entitled to an official recognition as such by all departments upon presentation to the President of a certificate of election by the Governor-General of said islands. Each of said Resident Commissioners shall, in addition to the salary and the sum in lieu of mileage now allowed by law, be allowed the same sum for stationery and for the pay of necessary clerk hire as is now allowed to the members of the House of Representatives of the United States, to be paid out of the treasury of the United States, and the franking privilege allowed by law to Members of Congress. No person shall be eligible to election as Resident Commissioner who is not a bona fide elector of said Islands and who does not owe allegiance to the United States and who is not more than thirty years of age and who does not read and write the English language. The present two Resident Commissioners shall hold office until the fourth of March, nineteen hundred and seventeen. In case of vacancy in the position of Resident Commissioner caused by resignation or otherwise, the Governor-General may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Philippine Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancy; but the Resident Commissioner thus elected shall hold office only for the unexpired portion of the term wherein the vacancy occurred.

SEC. 21. That the supreme executive power shall be vested in an executive officer, whose official title shall be "The Governor General of the Philippine Islands". He shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and hold his office at the pleasure of the President and until his successor is chosen and qualified. The Governor-General shall reside in the Philippine Islands during his official incumbency, and maintain his office at the seat of the government. He shall, unless otherwise herein provided, appoint by and with the consent of the Philippine Senate, such officers as may now be appointed by the Governor-General, or such as he is authorized by this act to appoint, or whom he may hereafter be authorized by law to appoint; but appointments made while the senate is not in session shall be effective either until disapproval or until the next adjournment of the senate. He shall have general supervision and control of all of the departments and bureaus of the government in the Philippine Islands as far as is not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, and shall be commander-in-chief of all locally created armed forces and militia. He is hereby vested with the exclusive power to grant pardons and reprieves and remit fines and forfeitures, and may veto any legislation enacted as herein provided. He shall submit within ten days of the opening of each regular sessions of the Philippine Legislature a budget of receipts and expenditures, which shall be the basis of the annual appropriation bill. He shall commission all officers that he may be authorized to appoint. He shall be responsible for the faithful execution of the laws of the Philippine Islands and of the United States operative within the Philippine Islands, and whenever it becomes necessary he may call upon the commanders of the military and naval forces of the United States in the islands, or summon the posse comitatus, or call out the militia or other locally created armed forces, to prevent or suppress lawless violence, invasion, insurrection, or rebellion; and he may, in case of rebellion or invasion or imminent danger thereof, when the public safety requires it, suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, or place the islands, or any part thereof, under martial law: Provided, that whenever the Governor-General shall exercise this authority, he shall at once notify the President of the United States thereof, together with the attending facts and circumstances, and the President shall have power to modify or annul the action of the Governor-General. He shall annually and at such other times as he may be required make such official report of the transactions of the Government of the Philippine Islands, to an executive department of the United States to be designated by the President, and his said annual report shall be transmitted to the Congress of the United States; and he shall perform such additional duties and functions as may in pursuance of law be delegated or assigned to him by the President.

SEC. 22. That, except as provided otherwise in this Act, the executive departments of the Philippine Government shall continue as now authorized by law until otherwise provided by the Philippine Legislature. When the Philippine Legislature herein provided shall convene and organize, the Philippine Commission, as such, shall cease and the members thereof shall vacate their offices as members of said commission: Provided, That the heads of executive departments shall continue to exercise their executive functions until the heads of departments provided by the Philippine Legislature pursuant to the provisions of this Act are appointed and qualified. The Philippine Legislature may, thereafter by appropriate legislation, increase the number or abolish any of the executive departments, or make such changes in the names and duties thereof as it may see fit, and shall provide for the appointment and removal of the heads of the executive departments by the Governor-General: Provided, That all executive functions of the Government must be directly under the Governor-General or within one of the executive departments under the supervision and control of the Governor-General. There is hereby established a bureau, to be known as the Bureau of Non-Christian Tribes, which said bureau shall be embraced in one of the executive departments to be designated by the Governor-General, and shall have general supervision over the public affairs of the inhabitants of the territory represented in the legislature by appointive senators and representatives.

SEC. 23. That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, a vice-governor of the Philippine Islands, who shall have all of the powers of the Governor-General, in the case of a vacancy or temporary removal, resignation, or disability of the Governor-General, or in case of his temporary absence; and the said vice-governor shall be the head of the executive department, known as the department of public instruction, which shall include the bureau of education and the bureau of health, and he may be assigned such other executive duties as the Governor-General may designate.

Other bureaus now included in the department of public instruction shall, until otherwise provided by the Philippine Legislature, be included in the department of the interior.

The President may designate the head of an executive department of the Philippine government to act as Governor-General in the case of a vacancy, the temporary removal, resignation or disability of the Governor-General and the vice-governor or their temporary absence, and the head of the department thus designated shall exercise all the powers and perform all the duties of the Governor-General during such vacancy, disability or absence.

SEC. 24. That there shall be appointed by the President an auditor, who shall examine audit, and settle all accounts pertaining to the revenues and receipts from whatever source of the Philippine Government and of the provincial and municipal governments of the Philippines, including trust funds, and funds derived from bond issues; and audit, in accordance with law and administrative regulations, all expenditures of funds or property pertaining to or held in trust by the government of the provinces or municipalities thereof. He shall perform a like duty with respect to all government branches.

He shall keep the general accounts of the government and preserve the vouchers pertaining thereto.

It shall be the duty of the auditor to bring to the attention of the proper administrative office expenditures of funds or property which, in his opinion, are irregular, unnecessary, excessive, or extravagant.

There shall be a deputy auditor appointed in the same manner as the auditor. The deputy auditor shall sign such official papers as the auditor may designate and perform such other duties as the auditor may prescribe, and in case of the death, resignation, sickness, or other absence of the auditor from his office, from any cause, the deputy auditor shall have charge of such office. In case of the absence from duty, from any cause, of both the auditor and the deputy auditor, the Governor-General may designate an assistant, who shall have charge of the office.

The administrative jurisdiction of the auditor over accounts, whether of funds or property, and all vouchers and records pertaining thereto, shall be exclusive. With the approval of the Governor-General he shall from time to time make and promulgate general or special rules and regulations not inconsistent with law covering the method of accounting for public funds and property, and funds and property held in trust by the government or any of its branches: Provided, That any officer accountable for public funds or property may require such additional reports or returns from his subordinates or others as he may deem necessary for his own information and protection.

The decisions of the auditor shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branches of the government, except that appeal therefrom may be taken by the party aggrieved or the head of the department concerned within one year, in the manner hereinafter prescribed.

The auditor shall, except as hereinafter provided, have like authority as that conferred by law upon the several auditors of the United States and the Comptroller of the United States Treasury and is authorized to communicate directly with any person having claims before him for settlement, or with any department, officer, or person having official relations with his office.

As soon after the close of each fiscal year as the accounts of said year may be examined and adjusted the auditor shall submit to the Governor-General and the Secretary of War an annual report of the fiscal concerns of the government showing the receipts and disbursements of the various departments and bureaus of the government and of the various provinces and municipalities and make such other reports as may be required of him by the Governor-General or the Secretary of War.

In the execution of their duties the auditor and the deputy auditor are authorized to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and to take evidence, and, in the pursuance of these provisions, may issue subpoenas and enforce the attendance of witnesses, as now provided by law.

The office of the auditor shall be under the general supervision of the Governor-General and shall consist of the auditor and deputy auditor and such necessary assistants as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 25. That any person aggrieved by the action or decision of the auditor in the settlement of his account or claim may, within one year, take an appeal in writing to the Governor-General, which appeal shall specifically set forth the particular action of the auditor to which exception is taken, with the reason and authorities relied on for reversing such decision.

If the Governor-General shall confirm the action of the auditor, he shall so indorse the appeal and transmit it to the auditor, and the action shall thereupon be final and conclusive. Should the Governor-General fail to sustain the action of the auditor, he shall forthwith transmit his grounds of disapproval to the Secretary of War, together with the appeal and the papers necessary to a proper understanding of the matter. The decision of the Secretary of War in such case shall be final and conclusive.

SEC. 26. That the supreme court and the courts of first instance of the Philippine Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided and such additional jurisdiction as shall hereafter be prescribed by law. The municipal courts of said islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as now provided by law, subject in all matters to such alteration and amendment as may be hereafter enacted by law; and the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States. The judges of the courts of first instance shall be appointed by the Governor-General, by and with the advice and consent of the Philippine Senate: Provided, That the admiralty jurisdiction of the supreme court and courts of first instance shall not be changed except by Act of Congress. That in all cases pending under the operation of existing laws, both criminal and civil, the jurisdiction shall continue until final judgment and determination.

SEC. 27. That the Supreme Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm the final judgments and decrees of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands in all actions, cases, causes, and proceedings now pending therein or hereafter determined thereby in which the Constitution or any statute, treaty, title, right, or privilege of the United States is involved, or in causes in which the value in controversy exceeds $25,000, or in which the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of $25,000 to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, is involved or brought in question; and such final judgments or decrees may and can be reviewed, revised, reversed, modified, or affirmed by said Supreme Court of the United States on appeal or writ of error by the party aggrieved within the same time, in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure as far applicable as the final judgments and decrees of the district courts of the United States.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

Sec. 28. That the government of the Philippine Islands may grant franchises and rights, including the authority to exercise the right of eminent domain for the construction and operation of works of public utility and service, and may authorize said works to be constructed and maintained over and across the public property of the United States, including streets, highways, squares, and reservations, and over private property of the government of said islands, and may adopt rules and regulations under which the provincial and municipal governments of the islands may grant the right to use and occupy said public property belonging to said provinces or municipalities. It shall be lawful for any property shall be damaged or taken for any purpose under this section without any compensation, and that such authority to take and occupy land shall not authorize the taking, use, or occupation of any land except such as is required for the actual necessary purpose for which the franchise is granted, and no franchise or right shall be granted to any individual, firm, or corporation except under the conditions that it shall be subject to government alterations or repeal by such express of the United States, and that said right of use and occupation of lands thus granted shall revert to the governments in which they were respectively granted upon the termination of the franchise and right under which they were granted or upon the revocation or repeal. That all franchises or rights granted under this Act shall forfeit the value of stock or bonds except in exchange for actual cash or for property at a fair market value to be determined by the courts in the case of any such company and shall not be deemed a debt or liability of the United States, and shall not be subject to the provisions for the effective regulation of the status thereof for the efficient operation and regulation of the books and accounts of such corporations, and for the payment of a reasonable percentage of gross earnings into the treasury of the Philippine Islands or of the province or municipality within which such franchises are granted and exercised. Provided, That no such franchise shall be granted or exercised under this Act, or for any person, company, corporation, partnership, and grant franchise, or concession from the government of said islands, to any person or company for the use of persons held in involuntary servitude, and any person, company, or corporation violating the provisions of this Act shall forfeit all franchises, grants, or concessions for doing business in said islands, in which case it shall be lawful for that purpose to any court of competent jurisdiction to any officer of the Philippine government, or to the complaint of any citizen of the Philippines, upon such evidence and rules as the Philippine Legislature shall prescribe, and such franchise shall be null and void, and shall be subject to a fine of not more than $10,000.

Sec. 29. That except as in this Act otherwise provided, the salaries of all the officials of the Philippines not appointed by the President, including justices, judges, and other employees, shall be such and be so paid out of the treasury of the Philippines as shall from time to time be determined by the Philippine Legislature, and if the Legislature shall fail to make an appropriation for such salaries the salaries shall be paid without the payment of such appropriations, therefore. The salaries of all officers and all expenses of the offices of the various officials of the Philippines appointed and commissioned by the President shall also be paid out of the treasury of the Philippines. The salaries of the following named officials appointed by the President and to be paid shall be: The Governor-General $15,000; in addition thereto he shall be entitled to the occupancy of the buildings heretofore used by the chief executive of the Philippines, with the furniture and effects therein, free of rent. A Vice-Governor $7,000; chief justice of the Supreme Court $8,000; associate justices of the Supreme Court $7,000 each; auditor $6,000; deputy auditor $4,000.

Sec. 30. That the provisions of the foregoing section shall not apply to provincial and municipal officials, their salaries and the salaries of their clerks, assistants, and employees, as well as all other expenses incurred by the provinces and municipalities, but the salaries of the provincial and municipal officials shall be determined by the Phil-

Philippine Legislature shall provide.

SEC. 31. That all laws or parts of laws applicable to the Philippines not in conflict with any of the provisions of this Act are hereby continued in force and effect.

Approved, August 29, 1916.

The Progress of the Philippines.—

Since the American occupation of the Philippines in 1898 many great things have been accomplished throughout the archipelago. Among those that merit special mention are the establishment of public schools and a state university, the building of several bridges and thousands of miles of good roads throughout the provinces, the construction of harbor works and Pier 7, the extension of railways through rich agricultural lands, the introduction of irrigation system, the adoption of modern machineries for sugar refining, hemp stripping, etc., the construction of many government buildings such as the Legislative Building, Post-Office Building, provincial capitols and concrete school houses, the establishment of a postal savings bank and of the Philippine National Bank, and many other good things such as those enumerated by the governors-general in their inaugural addresses.

The Governors-General and their Inaugural Addresses.—From William H. Taft to Frank Murphy there had been eleven American governors-general who served in the Philippines from 1901 to 1935. Their names, photographs, terms of office, and inaugural addresses are given in their chronological order, as follows:

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

First American Civil Governor of the Philippines

Inaugurated July 4, 1901

MY FELLOW COUNTRY-
MEN:

This ceremony marks a new step toward civil government in the Philippine Islands. The ultimate and most important step, of course, will be taken by the Congress of the United States, but with the consent of the Congress the President is seeking to make the Islands ready for its action. However provisional the change made today, the President by fixing the natal day of the Republic as its date has manifested his view of its importance and his hope that the day so dear to Americans may perhaps be also associated in the minds of the Filipino people with good fortune. The transfer to the Commission of the legislative power and certain executive functions in civil affairs under the military government on September first of last year, and now the transfer of civil executive power in the pacified provinces to a civil governor, are successive stages in a clearly formulated plan for making the territory of these Islands ripe for permanent civil government on a more or less popular basis. As a further step in the same direction, on September first next, at the beginning of the Commission's second legislative year, there will be added as members to that body by appointment of the President, Dr. Trinidad H. Pardo de Tavera, Señor Don Benito Legarda and Señor Don Jose Luzuriaga. The introduction into the legislature of representative Filipinos, educated and able, will materially assist the Commission in its work by their intimate knowledge of the people and of local prejudices and conditions. On September first, also, the executive branch of the insular government will be rendered more efficient by the establishment of four executive departments. There will be a department of the interior, of which Commissioner Dean C. Worcester will be head; a department of commerce and police, of which Commissioner Luke E. Wright will be the head; a department of justice and finance, of which Commissioner Henry C. Ide will be the head, and a department of public instruction, of which Commissioner Bernard Moses will be the head. The foregoing announcements are made by direction of the Secretary of War.

Since the above was written, in confirmation of the statement of the President's purposes with respect to the people of these Islands, I have this morning received the following telegram from the President of the United States:

"Washington July, 3—3:45 p. m.

TAFT, Manila.

Upon the assumption of your new duties as civil governor of the Philippine Islands I have great pleasure in sending congratulations to you and your associate commissioners and my thanks for the good work already accomplished. I extend to you my full confidence and best wishes for still greater success in the larger responsibilities now devolved upon you and the assurance not only for myself but for my countrymen of good will for the people of the Islands, and the hope that their participation in the government which it is our purpose to develop among them, may lead to their highest advancement, happiness, and prosperity.

WILLIAM McKINLEY."

The extent of the work which the Commission has done in organizing civil governments in towns and provinces is considerable, but its scope and effect may easily be exaggerated by those not fully acquainted with the situation. Twenty-seven provinces have been organized under the general provincial act; but it has not been possible to fill the important office of supervisor in eight or nine of them because a supervisor must be a civil engineer. We have sent to America for competent persons, whose arrival we look for this month. As the supervisor is one of the three members of the governing provincial board, his absence necessarily cripples the administration. Of the 27 provinces organized, four, possibly five and small parts of two others in which armed insurrection continues, will remain under the executive jurisdiction of the military governor and commanding general. There are 16 provinces or districts in which there is entire freedom from insurrection which the Commission has not had time to organize. Of the unorganized provinces and districts including Mindoro and Paragua, the latter just occupied by the army, there are four that are not ready for civil government. In the organized provinces nearly all the towns have been organized under the municipal code; and some towns have been similarly organized in unorganized provinces. It was not supposed that either the municipal code or the provincial government act would form perfect governments, though it was possible to make the former much more complete than the latter, for here had been two experiments in municipal governments under the administration of General Otis and General Mac-Arthur before the act was tentative. The result of the southern trip of the Commission was a substantial amendment and there will doubtless be others. Government is a practical, not a theoretical, problem; and the successful application of a new system to a people like this must be brought about by observing closely the operation of simple laws and making changes or additions as experience shows their necessity. The enactment of the law in its first form and appointments under it are but one of several steps in a successful organization.

The conditions under which the municipal and provincial governments of the Islands are to have their first real test are trying. The four years' war has pauperized many, and its indirect effect in destroying the habits of industry of those who have been prevented from working in the fields, or who have been leading the irresponsible life of guerrillas is even more disastrous. Not only war, but also the death from disease of a large percentage of the carabaos which are indispensable to the cultivation of rice and are greatly needed in all agriculture has largely reduced the acreage of rice and other staple products. Then the pest of locusts has been very severe. In one province, and perhaps more, gaunt famine may have to be reckoned with. Poverty and suffering in a country where ladronism has always existed are sure to make ladrones.

With the change made to-day, the civil governments must prepare to stand alone and not depend on the army to police the provinces and towns. The concentration of the army in larger garrisons where, in cases of emergency only, they can be called on to assist the local police may be expected, but the people must be enabled by organization of native police under proper and reliable commanders to defend themselves against the turbulent and vicious of their own communities.

The withdrawal of the army, the discharge of quasi civil duties of police will be accompanied also by the ceasing of the jurisdiction of military commissions to try ordinary criminal cases. They have been most useful in punishing and repressing crime. We have enacted a judiciary law and appointed judges under it who will succeed to this work. But the adoption of a new civil code of procedure, a new criminal code and code of procedure, all of which are ready, may be delayed somewhat by the needed public discussion of them. Until they are all adopted, we shall not feel that the chief step has been taken toward securing the blessings of civil liberty to the people of the pacified provinces, the protection of life, liberty and property.

The difficulties of official communication between provinces on the sea and between towns of the same province similarly situated must be met by a properly organized fleet of small steamers or launches which shall, at the same time, assist in the revenue or postal service. Provincial governments, in many cases without such means of communicating with their numerous towns, are greatly impeded in their functions.

Congress, in its wisdom, has delayed until its next session provision for the sale of public lands, of mining rights and the granting of franchises. All are necessary to give the country the benefit of American and foreign enterprise and the opportunity of lucrative labor to the people. Commercial railroads, street railroads, mortgage-loan companies or loan banks and steamship companies only await Government sanction to spring into being. These may remedy the poverty and suffering that a patient people have now to bear.

The school system is hardly begun as an organized machine. One thousand American teachers will arrive in the next three months. They must not only teach English in the schools, but they must teach the Filipino teachers. Schoolhouses are yet to be built; schoolrooms are yet to be equipped. Our most satisfactory ground for hope of success in our whole work is in the eagerness with which the Philippine people even the humblest, seek for education.

Then there is another kind of education of adults to which we look with confidence. It is that which comes from observation of the methods by which Americans in office discharge their duties. Upon Americans who accept office under the civil government is imposed the responsibility of reaching the highest American standard of official duty. Whenever an American fails; whenever he allows himself to use his official position for private ends, even though it does not involve actual defalcation or the stealing of public property or money, he is recreant to his trust in a far higher degree than he would be were he to commit the same offense in a similar office at home. Here he is the representative of the great Republic among a people untutored in the methods of free and honest government, and in so far as he fails in his duty, he vindicates the objection of those who have forcibly resisted our taking control of these Islands and weakens the claim we make that we are here to secure good government for the Philippines.

The operation of the civil-service Act and the rules adopted for its enforcement have been the subject of some criticism; but I think that when they are fully understood, and when the Filipino, in seeking a position in executive offices where English is the only language spoken, fits himself, as he will with his aptness for learning languages, in English, he will have nothing to complain of either in the justice of the examination and its marking or in the equality of salaries between him and Americans doing the same work. The civil-service Act is the bulwark of honesty and efficiency in the government. It avoids the most marked evil of American politics, the spoils system. Without it success in solving our problems would be entirely impossible. Complaints of its severity and its unfortunate operation in individual instances may give plausibility to attack upon it, but those who are responsible for appointments can not be blinded to the fact that its preservation is absolutely essential to the welfare of these Islands.

If I have understood the decision of the Supreme Court in the recent so-called Porto Rico cases, the question of what duties shall be levied on imports into these Islands from the United States is committed to the discretion of Congress. Without assuming to express an opinion on the much mooted issue of constitutional law involved, I ventured to say that the result is most beneficial to the people of these Islands. It seems to me that a decision that the same tariff was in force in these Islands as in the United States and must always be so, would have been detrimental to the interests of the islands. They are 7,000 miles from the coast of the United States. The conditions prevailing in them are as different as possible from those in the United States. The application to them of a high protective tariff carefully prepared to meet trade and the manufacturing conditions in the United States would have been a great hardship. It is true that to sugar and tobacco planters would have been opened a fine market, but it would have greatly reduced all trade between the Philippines and China and other oriental countries and all European countries, and it would have necessitated a heavy internal tax to pay the expenses of the central government. Now the people may reasonably entertain the hope that Congress will give them a tariff here suited to the best development of business in the Islands, and may infer from the liberal treatment accorded in its legislation to Porto Rican products imported into the United States that Philippine products will have equally favorable consideration.

The finances of the insular government are at present in a satisfactory condition, though changes in laws made or about to be made may affect them considerably. There is now in the insular treasury a sum of money exceeding $3,700,000 in gold unappropriated. The engineers in the Manila harbor work have been authorized to make contracts involving a liability of $2,000,000 beyond the $1,000,000 already appropriated but this is the only liability of the government and it will not accrue for two years at least. The insular income, which is now about $10,000,000 gold, a year, is likely to be reduced more than $1,000,000 by the provision of the provincial act which applies the proceeds of the internal-revenue taxes to the support of the provincial governments. Moreover, a new customs tariff is soon to be put in force, the immediate result of which may be to reduce the total amount of duties collected. It reduces the import tax on necessities and increases it on luxuries and roughly approximates, as nearly as a tariff of specific duties can to a purely revenue tariff of 25 per cent ad valorem. In addition to this, the cost of the insular government is bound to increase as the establishment of peace and civil government is extended through the Archipelago and the skeleton bureaus and departments now recognized in the law are enlarged and given a normal usefulness. Still the increase of business due to returning peace and prosperity will doubtless keep pace with the needs of the government.

The conduct of the civil and military branches of a military government under independent hands is necessarily a delicate matter. It depends, as the President in his instructions says, upon the fullest cooperation between the military and the civil arms, and

I am glad to be able to say that I believe that there will be the same cooperation in the future as there has been in the past; that the possible friction which may arise between the subordinates of the respective arms will have no encouragements from those in whom is the ultimate responsibility. There is work enough and to spare for all who are concerned in the regeneration of these Islands.

The burden of the responsibility which, by taking the oath this day administered to me, I assume, I shall not dwell upon, except to say that no one, I think, realizes it more keenly than I do. While I am profoundly grateful to the President of the United States for the personal trust he has expressed in appointing me to this high office, it is with no exultant spirit of confidence that I take up the new duties and new tasks assigned to me. I must rely, as I do, upon the cooperation, energy, ability now to be presented, upon the sympathetic and patriotic patience of those educated Filipino people who have already rendered us such tremendous aid, and upon the consciousness that earnest effort and honest purpose, with a saving of common sense, have in the past solved problems as new, as threatening and as difficult as the one before us.

The high and sacred obligation to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom, and wise and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the people of the Philippine Islands is charged upon us, his representatives, by the President of the United States. May we not be recreant to this charge which, he truly says, concerns the honor and conscience of our country. He expresses the firm hope that through our "labors all the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and protection of the people of the United States." God grant that in spite of all the trials and perplexities, the disappointments and difficulties, with which we are sure to be confronted, we may live to see this fervent hope made a living fact in the hearts of a patriotic people linked within the indissoluble ties of affection to our common and beloved country.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF LUKE E. WRIGHT

Second Governor-General of the Philippine Islands Inaugurated February 1, 1904

MY FELLOW COUNTRY
MEN:

In formally assuming the office of Civil Governor of the Philippine Islands, following the custom which obtains in the United States, I deem it proper briefly to refer to existing conditions and to outline in a general way the governmental policies which, in my judgment, should control in the future. It is peculiarly appropriate on this occasion because, under the Spanish regime, as I am informed, a change of governors-general, as a rule, indicated a reversal of policies theretofore obtaining and a large change in the administrative personnel all along the line. This being the usual course in the past, it is natural that the Filipino people should attach more than ordinary importance to a change of administration. It seems to me desirable, therefore, at the earliest opportunity to emphasize the fact that the wise, humane, and patriotic principles which controlled the administration of Governor Taft will not, at least consciously, be departed from by me.

The Civil Commission; Policy of Attraction; Results

The Commission came to these Islands, bearing a message of peace and good will from the American people to the Filipino people. The instructions which President McKinley gave us were definite and explicit and were made known to us before we left the United States. We assumed the responsible duties with which he had honored us, fully understanding their tenor and assenting to their wisdom and justice. Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the soundness of the policy enunciated in these instructions, there can be none among conscientious and honorable men that we were and are fully committed to their execution. We understood fully that while opposition to American authority, when it took the form of an armed insurrection, must be met and put down by the military forces of the United States; at the same time we realized with equal clearness that a true peace could only be established by obtaining the confidence and cooperation of the educated and patriotic Filipinos. We further believed that it was true American doctrine that the people affected by Government should have as large a participation in that government as they were capable of safely exercising in their own interests; and that the fullest opportunity should be given them to test their abilities by actual participation in the administration of their own affairs. It was not believed to be either just or politic to impose upon them a government modeled strictly upon American lines and administered wholly by Americans.

Acting upon these general principles, Governor Taft and his colleagues, from the beginning, have endeavored to pursue a policy of attraction; and at every step have invited and welcomed the advice and assistance of those Filipinos whom they believed competent to be of service in establishing good government here.

It is not my purpose to glorify the work which has been already accomplished by Governor Taft and the Commission. The future must largely determine whether we have wrought well or badly. We perhaps stand too near to the stirring events which have thronged the years of American occupation of these Islands to judge dispassionately the value of what has been accomplished. The substitution of American theories of government and methods of administration for those which had obtained for hundreds of years under the Spaniards has been carried on with the characteristic energy which is the distinguishing features of the American. And naturally there have arisen differences of opinion as to the wisdom of our course not only among observing foreigners and Americans but among Filipinos as well. There are not wanting critics in the former class who think the Commission has gone too fast and too far; and, on the other hand, there are not wanting impatient Filipinos who, forgetful of what has already been done, complain that we are moving too slowly. This is not the occasion nor am I the proper person to discuss, upon their merits, these differences of opinion. That we have made mistakes I shall not controvert. The man or men, however, who do not make mistakes are only those who accomplish no serious or permanent work. I think, however, we may justly claim at least the benefits of good intentions and honest efforts. It seems to me, furthermore, that when a comparison is made between the situation as it existed three years and a half ago and as it exists now, even the least observant or the most censorious must be struck with the marvelous change for the better. Then there was a blaze of insurrection extending from one end of the Archipelago to the other; to-day general peace prevails. Then life and property were only secured in those towns garrisoned by American troops who occupied several hundred stations; today the number of our troops has been reduced by more than three-fourths, occupy only a few strategic points, and yet with the exception of the occasional depredations committed here and there by insignificant and fugitive bands of ladrones life and property are as secure in these Islands as in other well-ordered communities. I do not for a moment pretend that this gratifying change has resulted wholly from the labors of the Commission. Unquestionably in the mere suppression of insurrection the chief credit is due to the efforts of our gallant Army and Navy. But I think I may say, without the imputation of egotism or the desire to unduly exalt the Commission, that but for its efforts to establish in the minds of the intelligent and thoughtful Filipinos a conviction as to the rectitude and benevolence of the intentions of the American people with reference to them, and thereby securing, in a multitude of instance, their cordial and zealous cooperation in the establishment of peace and order, these gratifying conditions would not now exist. We have reposed trust and confidence in many Filipinos and it is but simple justice to say that rarely has that trust and confidence been abused. Today, pursuant to legislation enacted by the Commission, the Filipinos have in all their local affairs self-government as Americans understand that term. They are largely represented upon the Commission, in the judiciary, and in all other branches of the government. They constitute the body of the Constabulary who have been for the past two years charged with the duty of maintaining order and have done and are doing most faithful and efficient service. They have the benefits of a comprehensive civil-service law which applies equally to them as to Americans. A public-school system has been created and is being steadily extended with satisfactory results. When it is considered that so much has been accomplished among a people alien to us in traditions, customs, and language, I think I may fairly say in the first place, that we have not wrought wholly in vain; and in the next and most important place, that it furnished striking evidence of the adaptability and capacity of the Filipinos and warrants us in entertaining high hopes for their future.

Future Work; Railroad Building; Agriculture

But it is not my purpose to deal further upon this subject nor to produce the impression, by what has already been said, that the conditions which obtain in these Islands to-day are ideal in character. Real work, both for the American and the Filipino, lies in the future. Up to this time we have been going through what may be aptly termed a period of political reconstruction. While there has not even as yet been a perfect adjustment on the part of the people to the new order of things, as I have already shown, we have made substantial progress in the right direction. From this time forward our labors must mainly be toward the consolidation, elaboration, and making permanent that which we have established and the building up and developing the natural resources of the Islands. Our first and most obvious need is an improved method of intercommunication among the people. We especially must labor to begin an era of railroad building for Luzon, Mindanao, and several of the large islands of the Archipelago. I do not underestimate the value of schools and other agencies of modern civilization which lead the masses of the people to higher levels of living and thinking, but to my mind, so far as concerns these people, nothing is of so much moment to them as railroads. While without them, much may be done, yet any progress must be slow, halting, and unequal. With them we may not only hope for but confidently expect rapid and tremendous improvement. As matters stand, except along that part of the coast line of the Islands accessible to vessels, there is practically no incentive offered to labor or production. Having no markets the inhabitants only seek to produce enough to meet their simplest wants. Agriculture under such circumstances is primitive in character and exceedingly limited in extent. The mineral resources of the Islands remain undeveloped and vast forest of valuable timber almost unexplored and wholly untouched exist. It is only within a comparatively recent period that we have been in a position to grant franchises for the construction of railroads and other works of internal improvement. We have always recognized, however, the vital importance of the matter and have, from time to time, in our reports brought the subject to the attention of the authorities at Washington. When in that city last winter I had occasion to discuss this matter with the President and then the Secretary of War, Mr. Root. Both of them I found to be fully alive to our needs in this regard. The latter arranged several interviews with prominent capitalists and railroad builders in the United States looking to the inauguration of a large railroad system in these Islands, and I am informed that, notwithstanding the enormous pressure of other business incident to his position, he has continued to urge upon capitalists at home the advantage of investment in railroads in these Islands. While it is somewhat premature to speak definitely, I feel much encouraged in the belief that in the not remote future we may hope for substantial benefits as the result of his efforts. And now that Governor Taft has succeeded him we have a right to feel doubly sanguine in this regard, for his colleagues know, as perhaps few can know, how near to his heart lies the prosperity and happiness of these people.

The importance of developing agriculture can not be overestimated. The people have been sorely afflicted in the last two years by the destruction of their crops by locusts, and to a large extent the loss of their horses and cattle by rinderpest. Through the liberality of the American Congress, a large sum was placed at the disposal of the Insular Government to replace the cattle thus lost and to aid and prevent, as far as possible, suffering among the people. This fund has to a considerable extent been expended in the building of important public works, thus furnishing a means of livelihood to the people, especially in those sections most seriously affected by the loss of crops and cattle, and also in the purchase of carabaos. It has not in the past been nor will it in the future be the policy of the government to extend aid to the point of pauperizing the people, but only to relieve their actual necessities by enabling them to earn money by their labor. In a number of the provinces in which rice has heretofore been the principal crop, the people have been recently blessed with a bountiful yield of that cereal. Owing to a lack of cattle there still remains fallow, however, a considerable area of land formerly cultivated. As a result the importation of rice will still be necessary, though not to such an extent as last year. It should be our endeavor to increase the production of this necessity of life by every means in our power, at least to the point of making the Islands self-supporting in this regard. The introduction of American agricultural machinery and methods of cultivation is very desirable and will be of immense benefit. The sugar and tobacco interests, I regret to say, are in a depressed and languishing condition. While what I have said as to rice production applies with almost equal force to them, and much may and must be done for their betterment by the Insular Government, still the fact remains that we can not hope for any real advance in these industries until they are given entrance to the markets of the United States upon equitable terms, and for this boon we can only appeal to the Congress. Even were this granted, several years must elapse before the sugar and tobacco planters of these Islands could hope to produce as much as prior to the insurrection; nor so long as the introduction of Chinese and other contract labor is prohibited as at present, and as doubtless it will be permanently, is there the slightest danger of Philippine exportation of these articles injuriously affecting prices to producers in the United States. I entertain the confident hope and belief that Congress will not long hesitate in removing the insurmountable tariff barriers which now bar the way to the entrance of these important products.

The Friar Lands

Among the last important official acts of Governor Taft was the conclusion of a preliminary contract for the purchase of what is known as the "friar lands." As soon as the necessary examination of titles and survey of these estates can be made, final conveyance will be given and these lands taken over by the Government. They will then be immediately offered for sale at cost price upon long time contract to the persons who have heretofore occupied them as tenants. Payments will be made in annual instalments at a very low rate of interest, thereby enabling the purchasers to become the owners of their holdings by paying a little more than that formerly paid as rent. In this way we hope and expect to settle for all time one of the burning questions in the Filipino mind. In making this settlement the Government has been just, not to say liberal, to the religious orders, and at the same time will confer a substantial benefit upon the occupants of the land. It is believed that the spirit which dictated this transaction will be fully appreciated, not alone by those immediately affected but will be accepted by the great mass of the Filipinos as a further evidence of the kind feeling and beneficent purpose of the American Government.

Currency

The Commission perceived in the very beginning that one of the great drawbacks to anything like the permanent prosperity and progress of the Islands was the lack of a stable currency. The only circulating medium which the Americans found here was an irredeemable silver currency composed of Mexican and Spanish-Filipino coin. The general tendency of silver has been for many years downward, but with frequent and violent fluctuations in price. The currency in circulation, as a result, rose or fell with the advance or decline of silver. All transactions, and especially those involving credits, were consequently largely speculative; this has been disastrous to all business enterprise. The Commission in its first report to the President urged legislation by Congress which would give to the people a silver currency to which they had always been accustomed but redeemable in gold, thus establishing and fixing a uniform stable standard of values. The Congress of the United States, on the 2nd day of March, 1903, passed an act the provisions of which substantially embodied the recommendations of the Commission, and provided for a new coinage of Philippine pesos redeemable at the Insular Treasury in gold, which, together with the United States gold coin, are declared to be the sole legal tender of the Islands after a date to be fixed by the Commission. Pursuant to this act, the Insular Government, by proper legislation and executive order, has demonetized Mexican dollars and provided for a redemption and recoinage of the Spanish-Filipino currency. It has, however, met with considerable difficulty in immediately retiring the outstanding Mexican and Spanish-Filipino coins, because the great mass of the people failed to understand and appreciate the real value of the new currency and continued to receive and use in their daily transactions the old upon a parity with the new coins. The difficulty of substituting the new currency for the old has furthermore been increased by reasons of the fact that certain business interests have found it to their advantage to buy the hemp, copra, and tobacco produced in the Islands in the old coins, which are much cheaper than the new, and thereafter to sell their purchases in foreign markets for gold. The Commission, however, has been thoroughly convinced that there could be no real and genuine business prosperity and progress so long as this state of affairs continued, and has therefore enacted legislation which will, after expiration of a few months, tend to make unprofitable the use of the old currency and thereby make easy and certain the introduction for the new and stable currency.

The importance of making effective the wise legislation of Congress above referred to can not be overstated. In my judgment we can not hope for any large revival of business and improvement in general conditions until we have eliminated this disturbing factor from the business of the Islands. It will be the policy of the Commission to bring about this result as rapidly as may be upon the lines which it has already laid down.

Future Policy

Did time permit I might enumerate other matters of considerable though minor importance which call for future consideration. Enough, however, has been said to indicate the general lines of policy which it is believed will be pursued by the Government in the immediate future. I can not refrain, however, from saying that the success or failure of the efforts of the representatives of the American Government in these Islands must very largely depend upon the attitude of the Filipino people themselves; and, furthermore, that their attitude will in the nature of things in turn be largely affected by the attitude of the Americans in these Islands toward the Filipino people. It has been perhaps not extraordinary, in view of past events, that Americans and Filipinos should, to some extent, still stand apart from each other. It seems to me, however, that the time has passed, if it ever existed, for an attitude of reserve and distrust. The Americans who are here in these Islands with the legitimate and laudable purpose of aiding in their development and at the same time bettering their own fortunes can not fail to see that they can only hope to accomplish their desires by establishing cordial personal and business relations with the people with whom they must necessarily come in contact. This is so obviously true that it does not require elaboration. Aside from this, every consideration of magnanimity and patriotism impels them to such a course. We are strong; and Filipinos are weak. We are justly proud of our institutions and of the benefits and blessings which spring from them. We have assumed control and government of these Islands without consulting the wishes of their inhabitants. Are we not then in conscience and honor bound to offer them the best we have to give? In inviting them to participate equally in our common birthright, we do not make ourselves the poorer but therein the richer. We can not ignore the truth that in our relations with these people the Americans here are quite as much on trial before the civilized world as are the Filipinos. On the other side, every Filipino should turn a deaf ear to the sinister promptings of restless and selfish agitators and demagogues who strive to keep alive prejudices born of the evil passions engendered by war and, following the example of the wisest and most patriotic of their countrymen, should frankly and loyally accept the situation as it is. Nothing can be accomplished that is good by a contrary course. The logic of event is inexorable. True patriotism, under existing conditions, is found in a loyal attitude to the Government. Every intelligent Filipino must realize that his people in their present stage of development are unable to stand alone and that in the very nature of things they must lean upon some stronger arm. It is suicidal, therefore, to repel the kindly advances made by those in authority or to engage in a policy of obstruction or agitation. There is no reason for antagonism. On the contrary, there is every reason against it. The coming of Americans to these Islands to build railroads and other works of public utility, to engage in agriculture, manufacturing, or the mechanical arts can only be of advantage to the Filipino people. There is room in these beautiful and fertile Islands for all. The door of equal opportunity should be thrown wide open for all alike—European, American, and Filipino.

Conclusion

And now in conclusion I desire to express my sincere thanks to the President of the United States for the great honor he has conferred upon me. I am not oblivious that I am succeeding a gentleman who has fairly earned, by his elevated character and high ability as a constructive statesman, the respect and admiration of all men, and in addition stands "best beloved" in the hearts of the Filipino people. When I step into his place I have a covering realization of how wide a space he occupied and how great a vacuum remains. I understand full well the difficulties, the perplexities, and the labor incident to the position. I can only promise to do my best. For a successful issue under that divine Providence which shapes the destinies of men, I must chiefly rely upon the aid of my colleagues and other officials of Government, and last, but not least, upon the sympathetic cooperation of all classes of people who sincerely desire that order, justice, and the reign of law shall be supreme.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF

HENRY C. IDE

Third Governor-General of the Philippine Islands

Inaugurated April 2, 1906

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN, AMERICANS AND FIL-IPINOS:

The great principles that are to guide the Government of the Philippine Islands are not determined by the Governor-General or the Philippine Commission, but by the sovereign people of the United States, speaking through their authorized representatives. The policies thus declared control and ought to control the local government. Those who might speak authoritatively upon this subject have been President McKinley, his War Secretary, Elihu Root, President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft. The declarations of these men, carried largely into effect by Congressional legislation, are the foundation stones for the whole governmental structure here. President McKinley, than whom no more sincere friend of the Filipino people ever lived, declared "The Philippines are ours, not to exploit, but to develop, to educate, to train in the science of self-government." Secretary Root, whose genius is largely responsible for that great state document known as "Instructions to the Philippine Commission," has declared: "There seems no reasonable cause to doubt that under the policy already effectually inaugurated, the institutions already implanted, the processes already begun, in the Philippine Islands, if these be not repressed and interrupted, the Filipino people will follow in the footsteps of the people of Cuba; that more slowly, indeed, because they are not as advanced, yet as surely, they will grow in capacity for self-government and receiving power as they grow in capacity, come to bear substantially such relations to the people of the United States as do now the people of Cuba, differing in details as conditions, as needs differ but the same in principle and the same in beneficent results." President Roosevelt, succeeding to the great work of President McKinley has declared, "To withdraw our Government from the Islands at this time would mean, to the average native, loss of a barely won civil freedom. We have established in the Islands a government by Americans, assisted by Filipinos. We are steadily striving to transform this into self-government by Filipinos, assisted by Americans." Secretary Taft, who doubtless is and always will be more dear to the hearts of the Filipino people than any other American, has said, "The great object we now have in the Philippines is to build up the government there so as to make it more and more useful to the Filipinos, so that they may ultimately become an educated, intelligent and self-governing people." And again, "Our policy in the Philippines must be the Philippines for the Filipinos. This duty we assumed." The principles thus enunciated by those who spoke with authority for the American people are in harmony with the best thought of the Filipino people. The greatest and most respected patriot ever known to them, Dr. Jose Rizal, but a few days before his tragic death, addressed his countrymen as follows: "My Countrymen: I have given proof that I was one who sought liberty for our country, and I still seek it. But as a first step I insisted upon the development of the people in order that by means of education and labor they might acquire the proper and individual character and force which would make them worthy of it." The first governor-general under American sovereignty, General Luke E. Wright, devoted himself with loyalty, ability, wisdom and success, to the enforcement of these principles, and is entitled to the grateful affection of his countrymen, Americans and Filipinos.

No new Policy

No new policy is now to be enunciated or adopted by the government which will stand consistently and faithfully upon the principles above laid down. The pledges made by the great founders of the Philippine Government will be implicitly fulfilled so far as fulfillment lies within my power.

The Dingley Tariff

The ability, however, faithfully to perform the entire duty of the American people towards the Philippine Islands does not rest wholly with any administration, either here or in the United States, but is in considerable part dependent upon the action of Congress. One of the present great needs of the Islands is a better market for its products, and that better market we seek by lowering or breaking down the tariff barriers that exist between the home country and the Islands. Whether in this respect we succeed now or not, such success is only a question of time. We have not merely the mighty influence of the President and the Secretary of War strenuously striving in that behalf, but we have back of us the hearts of the American people. The House of Representatives, fresh from the people and responsible to them have passed the modified tariff law in accordance with the interest of the Filipino people, by the tremendous vote of 257 to 71. This shows how the heart of the American people beats. With the President and his whole Cabinet, the American people, the House of Representatives and justice on our side the right will prevail, if not today, then tomorrow, and that tomorrow is not far away.

Transportation

Intimately connected with the subject of the tariff, as affecting industrial development, lies the question of better transportation facilities within the Islands themselves. It is of little avail, aside from supplying immediate wants, that cultivators have soil capable of producing large crops of valuable commodities if the whole value of such products is to be consumed in transporting them to any market, local or foreign. Such always has been the condition in some of the most fruitful portions of these beautiful Islands. Local capital is not available for the construction of railroads. Aside from the poverty of the great mass of the Filipino people, they have been subjected to the fearful disasters of pestilence that has destroyed many lives; contagious diseases that have swept away a large percentage of their beasts of burden; attacks of voracious insects that have devoured their crops; disastrous storms that have prostrated their fruit-trees and dwellings; internal dissensions, war, and predatory bands that have destroyed millions of valuable property and caused the death of many who ought to have been useful citizens and producers. Under such circumstances the need of capital from abroad is tremendous. Foreign capital has hesitated to enter the Islands because of uncertainty as to conditions here and because of the highly profitable use to which it could be devoted in the United States and other parts of the world, yet marked progress has already been made. The city of Manila now has a complete system of forty miles or more of well equipped street railway, which increase the values of all suburban property and diminishes the expense of living for multitudes of people. Contracts have already been entered into for the construction of 255 miles of railroads in the Islands of Cebu, Negros and Panay, under a guaranty by the government of interest at a rate not exceeding four per cent for a limited time upon the bonds to be issued, the proceeds of which are to be devoted exclusively to the construction and equipment of the railroads, and the moneys advanced by the government in pursuance of its guarantee to be ultimately returned to it, the amount thereof to be a lien upon the property of the roads. These contracts will do much to develop the Visayan Islands, and it is confidently believed that they will soon demonstrate their profitability so that the parties who have taken these contracts, or others, will cover the Visayan Islands with railroads wherever such enterprises are needed. Negotiations, also, are well under way, and which it is hoped will be consummated in the near future whereby the great Island of Luzon may have its resources opened up and its transportation facilities enormously increased without imposing any unreasonable burdens upon the people. Franchises for such enterprises should be carefully guarded so that no undue burdens may rest upon the people, and so that they may be properly controlled and prevented from becoming the masters instead of the servants of the people, yet every privilege should be granted that is consistent with security to the public and protection of its rights, both for the present and for the distant future. If we fail to get immediately all the railroads that we had hoped for yet it is to be remembered that a railroad develops a country and opens up beyond its terminus lands hitherto unavailable and tempts settlers to occupy them. Self-interest will induce the owners of railroads to push on and still on into additional territory until all needed facilities are provided. The increased agricultural development that has followed the extension of the Manila and Daguupan Railroad to Cabanatuan, in the province of Nueva Ecija, has shown almost instantaneously what we may expect in other parts of the Islands. Added railways mean added land under cultivation, added value to land near the railroads, added production for domestic consumption and for export, added demand for labor, added property for the whole country.

New Corporation Law

In connection with our need of capital may be mentioned the new corporation law, which, after extensive public discussion and careful consideration, has been passed, whereby corporations may be easily formed either with domestic or foreign capital for the lawful conduct of nearly every kind of business. This law is liberal in its provisions, available to all without special legislation, and safeguards alike the interest of the capitalists and of the public.

Additional Legislation Needed

To further the interests of commerce a bankruptcy law and a chattel mortgage law are needed. It is intended to present for public discussion and for enactment at an early date laws covering both of these subjects. There has been long a public call for them and the delay in their enactment has been only by reason of the press of more urgent duties. A law has likewise been prepared for a system of postal savings which will soon be presented for discussion. It is believed that a system may be organized in such a way as to be entirely safe for the government and for the depositors which will encourage habits of thrift and enable the people gradually to utilize their little savings for larger enterprises. When these laws shall have been enacted and the long delayed penal code and code of criminal procedure shall have finally materialized, comparatively little legislation of a fundamental character is needed in the early future.

Legislative Work Nearly Finished

The foundation will then have all been laid. Municipal, provincial and insular governments have been provided for; bureaus for carrying on the work of the customs, internal revenue collections, auditing, administering the funds of the Islands, caring for the health of the people, construction of public works, the administration of justice, procedure in all civil actions, maintenance of the currency upon a gold standard basis of unvarying value, inter-island transportation, supply of all departments of the government printing, ice and cold storage plants, quarantine service, coast and geodetic survey, encouragement and promotion of agriculture, development of scientific investigation, administration of the forest and public lands, determination of the "friar lands" controversies, the orderly administration of prisons and penal institutions, and education in the largest sense, have all been organized, and, aside from the few needed acts referred to, future legislation will be largely that of amending and improving laws and of supplying such deficiencies as may be shown to exist therein. The period of construction has mainly passed and the time is near at hand when the work will be that of administration and amendment in distinction from that of construction.

The Elections

Last December new municipal officers were elected throughout the Islands.

On the fifth of February, 1906, elections for governors of all the provinces occurred. Not a disturbance of the public peace at either municipal or provincial elections was reported, although very great interest existed and in some cases repeated but entirely orderly ballots were necessary to secure a majority. Minor irregularities occurred, and in a very few cases charges of bribery or intimidation were filed, but on the whole the municipal and provincial elections were highly encouraging and indicate that the people are becoming more and more accustomed to the exercise of the highest privilege of sovereignty in the deliberate, intelligent and fair choice of their own local officials. The governors elected represent every type of political feeling and sentiment.

The Assembly

The orderly and serious conduct of those elections is a good augury for the success of the Philippine Assembly, which will convene within one year. Its importance, educationally, cannot be overestimated. It will afford the first complete opportunity for the Filipino people to display their capacity, not merely to choose their legislators but to choose such legislators as shall bring to their task intelligence, patriotism, and high devotion to the interests of their country. It behooves the Filipino people to demonstrate that the steady though slow introduction of orderly liberty, the law-abiding freedom of the individual which is the only sure foundation upon which national independence can be built, can safely be theirs. The advent of the Assembly is to be welcomed, not merely because it gratifies many of the aspirations of the people but because reasonable hopes may be entertained that its deliberations will result in utility to the public.

Agriculture

Agriculture, which in the end lies at the bottom of all prosperity, is here the only great resource. It is the duty of the government to give every encouragement for the development of that industry. The recent congress of the "Union Agraria de Filipinas" is an encouraging indication of the interest that the best people of the Islands have in their basic industry. The display of modern machinery there presented was instructive and its introduction, which is now rapidly increasing, will, to a considerable extent, relieve the disasters caused by the loss of draft animals. The Islands need more agricultural machinery, more and better draft animals, improved facilities for transportation, larger markets, and better method of cultivation. The Bureau of Agriculture is giving great help in this direction. A most encouraging indication of the increased agricultural prosperity is seen in the statistics of the importation of rice. During the fiscal year 1904 the value of rice imported amounted to $11,548,814, but during the fiscal year 1905 to $7,456,738, showing a diminution of over $4,000,000 owing to increase in home production. During the first eight months of the fiscal year 1905 the importations of rice amounted to $4,659,057, while during the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1906, they amounted to $3,307,744, indicating a further falling-off in importations for this fiscal year as compared with the last of more than $2,000,000 or more than $6,000,000, as compared with the fiscal year 1904. Six million dollars gold saved to these Islands is a tremendous item in their prosperity.

Public Order

The marked diminution of brigandage is one of the most important elements in the development of our resources. It is impossible for agriculture, or any other industry to prosper unless the laborer and proprietor can be protected and allowed to reap the benefit of his thrift and industry, free from the dangers of robbers and extortioners. The Islands have probably never before been so free from carabao thieves and predatory bands as now. These results have not been secured without suffering and misfortune. From Scripture times down to the present it has never been possible to cast out devils without a rending of the body.

The Constabulary

The results that have been achieved are due, in great part, to the efforts of the Constabulary, aided by the loyal cooperation of the Army of the United States, including the Scouts, sustained, as they have been, by independent and fearless courts. The Constabulary has been subject to great criticism. Abuses have been committed by some of its members and officers. Those abuses, however, have been corrected and punished in all cases when their existence could be established, and it is and will be the distinct policy of the government to correct every such abuse. But the fact that abuses have occurred does not warrant the condemnation of an organization composed almost entirely of Filipinos, or a denunciation of the Filipino race. I believe in the Filipinos. Their services in the constabulary have been great. If it be true that they have occasionally committed excesses, it is likewise true that they have put an end to most horrible atrocities, tortures and barbarities which were inflicted by banded cutthroats and robbers. In certain provinces the highest legislative and executive authorities of the Islands decided that insurrection existed. To suppress inurrection means war, and war involves hardships and suffering; it did in this case. But the tremendous benefits that have come to the Islands from the restoration of tranquility make it unjust to deal only in legible—look like "deal" only in denunciation of those whose efforts have brought peace and protection. But so completely has tranquility covered these Islands that it may now be advisable carefully to scan the prison records to see if many who are still incarcerated for what was often involuntary participation in acts of disorder may not properly and safely be released.

Taxation

Taxation in the Philippine Islands ought not to be increased. The burdens are as great as the people ought now to bear. The policy of the government should be not to add to existing burdens, but if possible to relieve them and to maintain the government by a reduction of expenses and by such increased prosperity as will cause greater revenue to accrue without increase of taxation. The suspension of the land tax for the current year throughout the Islands is a measure of relief which comes home to nearly every household.

The Internal Revenue Law

This suspension, coupled as it is with an appropriation from the Insular treasury sufficient to make good the provinces and municipalities all that they had lost by suspension of the land tax, was made possible only by the internal revenue law, without the income derived from that source the suspension would have been impossible. The tax imposed by the internal revenue law is largely an optional one, paid mainly by the consumers of alcohol and tobacco products, and every consumer pays according to his consumption. The law was naturally opposed by those who were primarily affected by it. It was an innovation and redistributed burdens, yet time has vindicated its wisdom and the demonstration will be more and more complete as the years go by. Coupled with the suspension of the land tax was provision for a more equitable classification of lands and a possible new system. Ultimately free trade between the Philippine Islands and the United States must be anticipated within the not distant future.

Future Sources of Revenue

When that result ensues, customs receipts will be greatly diminished and the internal revenue law, with such modifications as experience may demonstrate ought to be made, will be the great source of income. We may expect that the importation of commodities without payment of customs duties will reduce the cost of such commodities to the people, and that free trade with the United States will greatly increase the volume and value of our exports to that country. We must then look for means of supporting the government to local taxes, including a just system of land taxes for purely local purposes, customs duties on imports from foreign countries, internal revenue taxes, and special miscellaneous sources, like the Ice Plant, postal and telegraph service, fines and costs, sales of public lands, etc. The recently enacted high license opium law will produce a moderate amount of revenue during this year and next, the prohibitory features going into operation on March 1, 1908. It is not the policy of this government to support itself by licensing vices, such as opium smoking, prostitution, gambling, and lotteries, nor would any such theory be tolerated by public sentiment in the United States.

Optional Road Tax

In connection with the revenues, it is probable that a road tax, payable in labor or money, and made optional with the different provinces to put in force or not as they see fit, may be authorized, inasmuch as roads and highways are indispensable for the transaction of all business and for all agricultural operations. Such a tax, if voted by the people of the province itself and expended immediately in the vicinity where the tax is assessed and for the benefit of that community, would be of great value, and might meet the approval of most elements in the Philippine Islands.

Land Laws

The land laws here are especially favorable to the poor man, although by Act of Congress made most burdensome and difficult for investment of large capital. In the United States homesteads would be taken up and public lands acquired with the greatest rapidity under laws as liberal as those which prevail here, but the Filipino is so accustomed to living where his friends and neighbors are, and where his forefathers were born and died that it is difficult to induce him to enter upon new and better fields. The Filipinos should make more use of the opportunities which have been offered to them and should secure to themselves, under the land law, indefeasible, titles to sufficient lands to support themselves and their descendants. The land acquired by purchase from the Friars is being rapidly dealt with by leases to the occupants, with provisions for ultimate purchase.

Church Controversies

Connected with land titles are controversies that exist all over the Islands with relation to the possession, ownership and right of administration of the churches, "conventos" and cemeteries. Under a law recently passed giving to the Supreme Court original jurisdiction over all such controversies, these disputes are now in process of adjustment, and it is believed that in a comparatively short time this fruitful source of dispute will be eliminated.

Sympathetic Cooperation

It is impossible to emphasize too strongly the necessity for cultivating good relations between Americans and Filipinos. None of us are perfect, but none are wholly bad. Unkind and censorious speeches or comments (printed or oral) are especially dangerous when racial antipathies are appealed to and thereby stimulated. They make the whole work of progress more difficult, and the situation always more dangerous. There are enough splendid and lovable qualities in each race to furnish the highest basis for commendation and emulation. Let us look for the good qualities and appreciate them and stretch out a kind and sympathetic hand, one to another, and thus make it more possible to fulfill the high mission which the United States has here taken upon itself. Let us inculcate the dignity of labor, the splendid results which it brings, not merely in tangible and visible resources but in the enabling and dignifying of the individual.

Summary of Policy

Fellow-countrymen: if I were to summarize my present hope it would be to give a business administration, to attempt in some degree to increase the prosperity of the people, to develop our wonderful but latent resources, to see the Islands more prosperous and the people more contented and happy in the end than at the beginning, to avoid, so far as possible, political and academic discussion, sacredly to preserve the blessings of individual liberty and protection of property which are now the people's heritage, and to bring about a more complete and harmonious cooperation of all to the common end of peace and more thorough development of our resources. These results cannot be secured in any short time, but with the aid of God, and the united efforts of all they may well be hoped for and worked for.

JAMES F. SMITH

Fourth Governor-General of the Philippine Islands

Inaugurated September 20, 1906

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:

By the protocol of August the 12, 1898, Spain and the United States, once bound together by the ties of strongest friendship, happily suspended the unfortunate war which had estranged them for many long months, and the terms upon which friendly relations between the two powers might be immediately resumed became the subject of official and also of unofficial discussions.

Victor in the contest of arms, circumstances which could neither shape, direct nor control made the United States the unwilling arbiter of the destinies of the Philippine Archipelago and of all its peoples. Under the guise of generosity to a fallen foe, or governed by the recognized principle that sentimentality has no place in national affairs, she might easily have ignored the condition and claims of the Filipino people and left the Islands just where she found them—in the hands of Spain; or under the specious form of a disinterested benevolence she might have conferred upon the Filipino people the wished for gift of independence and left them at the gateway of China with a nationality which, without the force or means to maintain it, would have been ephemeral; or regardless of her own interests and of the complications sure to ensue, she might have established a protectorate over the Islands and assumed all the responsibilities of government without any of its powers.

The Change of Sovereignty

In the exercise of her best judgment and influenced by no selfish motive the United States chose to do none of these things, and, departing from the beaten track of policy in dealing with an alien and a subject race, she elected to become not its conqueror, not its master, but its guide, its mentor and its friend. And so the sovereignty which had been exercised by Spain over the Philippine Islands for more than 350 years passed from her to the United States and with it the responsibility for the welfare, the happiness, the prosperity, and the advancement of more than 7,000,000 people.

Due to the difference of language and custom and to the suspicions of a race many times disappointed by those who came bearing gifts, unfortunately for the United States her benevolent purposes were misconstrued and misconceived. Her endeavors to gain the good will and affections of the inhabitants of the Islands were viewed with distrust and her promises of a liberal government in which the people should have as full representation as they were capable of exercising and enjoying were regarded as the tempting bait to lure a confiding and simple people to ruin and slavery.

Enemies of Tyranny and Oppression

Notwithstanding the fact that the history of the American people fully demonstrated that they had always been the enemies of tyranny and oppression; notwithstanding the fact that the American nation had expended the lives of a million of her own people to free from bondage the slaves within her confines; notwithstanding the fact that, moved by sentiments of profoundest pity, she engaged in a costly war which gave to Cuba her independence, the Filipino people were led to believe and did believe that the new sovereign was actuated by no higher motive than her own aggrandizement and a greed for territory whose whole area did not equal that of the state of California. Misconception, distrust and suspicion dominated the entire situation.

Bonds of Confidence and Affection

should have been united by the strongest bonds of confidence and affection were soon drifted apart and became locked in a death struggle, the one to sustain and the other to overthrow a sovereignty which had been assumed from no other motive than to benefit and to bless. Far from home and all that he held dear, many a gallant, sturdy American with the breath of battle warm upon him met a soldier's death on the wooded slopes and level fields of the Philippines. The very youth and flower of the Filipino race watered with their blood the soil which had given them birth.

In a contest with a nation 70,000,000 strong, possessed of limitless resources and determined to yield nothing to those who came with arms in their hands and threats in their mouths, but one result could follow to the Filipino people, valiant and brave though they were—and that was crushing defeat. And all for what? For a miserable misunderstanding which might have been avoided had there been a prudent exercise of patience and forbearance. All for a purpose which might have been secured without the loss of a life, without the shedding of a drop of innocent blood by careful preparation, general education of the masses of the people and the reasonable methods of evolution, advocated by Rizal, the poet, patriot and statesman of the Filipino race.

Not Shed in Vain

The blood of American and Filipino will not have been shed in vain, however, if sorrow for their dead shall bring them together in mutual sympathy and understanding, if their blood mingled on many a well fought field shall cement them together in amity and friendship. But whatever may have been the effect of the war on the friendly relations of the two peoples it had no effect on the policy which the American nation had marked out for herself nor on the highly benevolent motives which induced her to assume sovereign power over the Philippines and all that might mean.

Establishing Local Governments

In the midst of war and when it might be reasonably expected that hatred, ill-will, and dislike would be in the ascendant, those taken in arms were treated as prisoners of war though they might have been accorded the fate provided for war rebels; non-combatants were not only treated with tenderness and consideration but were encouraged to return to their usual avocations and pursuits; as soon as active military operation in any municipality or district ceased, local governments administered by native officials were established and civil protection given to personal rights and private property; schools were organized and the American soldier laying aside the rifle and the bayonet set himself to instruct and to teach the children of those who perhaps at the moment were in arms against the flag he loved so well.

Carrying Out Promises

When the war had ended and the insurrection lay shattered and broken in the dust, when the capacity for further resistance by the Filipino people was exhausted, when without criticism the United States might have declared that the native inhabitants of the Philippines had forfeited all claims to her benevolent consideration, she proceeded with undisturbed serenity and tranquility to carry out the promises which she had made and the policies which she had announced before a hostile shot was fired. She established municipal governments administered by officials elected by the people and gave to the local communities as large a measure of autonomy as that enjoyed by the similar communities at home. She organized the provinces and gave to them a government administered by a governor elected by the people and two officials appointed by the Chief Executive of the Islands with the approval of the Commission. She created a pure judiciary and gave to the people a system of justice which determined the rights of rich and poor, of foreigner and citizen of American and Filipino, without fear or favor and without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude.

Confidence In Former Enemies

On the heels of insurrection she gathered many thousands of those who had been in arms against her and with a boldness and a trust almost amounting to imprudence she imposed upon them the duty of preserving the public peace and protecting life and property.

In the face of the prophecies of failure and notwithstanding the ridicule of older governments, she created a system of public schools and brought to the doors of the people the opportunity for instruction, enlightenment, and practical education. She destroyed without hesitation a wrong system of internal taxation which imposed upon the poor almost the entire charges of government, and for it she substituted a modern system of internal revenue which so distributes the load that every citizen is compelled to bear his fair share of the governmental burdens.

For a fluctuating and variable medium of exchange which made trade a gambling game and imposed heavy losses on the great mass of consumers made up largely of the poor and the struggling, she substituted a stable currency and settled measure of value.

Public Improvements

She built roads, established lines of inter-island transportation, constructed great harbor works and erected school houses. She furnished to nearly every municipality in the Archipelago a postal service which reasonably meets the needs of business and the necessities of the people, and has established a postal savings bank to encourage thrift and to protect the earnings of the poor.

She has purchased the landed properties of the religious orders which were a source of agrarian difficulty and disturbance and has given to tenants and occupants the opportunity to acquire on easy conditions a title to their holdings.

Civil Service

She has provided for the establishment of an honest and efficient civil service and has given to the Islands a sanitary organization which has greatly reduced the death rate and improved the health of the localities in which its rules have been enforced.

Providing For Students

She has sent young men and women of the Philippines to the schools of the homeland that they might receive the instruction given to her own sons and daughters and that they might become acquainted with her laws, her customs, and the practical workings of her form of government.

She has taken a census of the people and furnished to them an easy, cheap and expeditious method of securing for their lands a title guaranteed by the Government.

Rights of Homestead

She has provided for the people the means of acquiring the public domain by lease, homestead, or sale and supplied them with a procedure to perfect their titles to portions of the public domain held by them without conveyance from the state and by no higher right than that of long possession.

She has granted to persons accused of crime the advantage of being immediately informed of the charge against them, the privilege of a speedy and public trial, and the right to be confronted with the witnesses against them at every stage of the proceedings.

Freedom Of Speech

Freedom of speech which does not incite a disturbance of the public peace or the breaking of the law has been allowed, and the right of the people to peaceably assemble and petition for the redress of grievances has been recognized.

She has definitely forbidden any interference with the free exercise of religion and has decreed that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall be forever allowed.

To Benefit The People

Never before in the history of the world was there a nation with greater power than the United States to work its will on a helpless people, and never before in the history of the world, as this record shows did a nation more fully, more conservatively, and more humanely use the strength which was hers. In the beginning she announced that she had assumed sovereignty over the Philippines not to enrich herself but to benefit the peoples for whom the chance of war had made her responsible, and from the beginning to this hour she has never departed from the policy thus voluntarily marked out as her rule of action.

No Selfish Exploitation

The holding of the Philippines not for selfish exploitation regardless of the rights of the people who resided in them, but as a sacred trust for the benefit of those for whose well-being the nation became responsible, the establishment of a government not for our satisfaction or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace and prosperity of the Filipino people, the evolution of a government by Americans assisted by Filipinos into a government of Filipinos assisted by Americans, and the education and preparation of the people for popular self-government was the broad policy of President McKinley, of Governor Taft, of Governor General Wright and of Governor General Ide.

It is the policy of President Roosevelt and will be the policy of the administration which makes its initial bow today to the people of the Philippines. It is the policy which will leave the Filipino race happy and contented in the realization of its hopes and ideals—hopes and ideals rarely attained, rarely enjoyed save through blood and tears.

It is said that there is no royal road to popular self-government and that every race must work out its national development by the light of the sparks stricken from the swords of kinsmen. May be so; nevertheless the creation, the making, the upbuilding of a new nation by means which will not leave her drenched in gore and lamenting her lost sons like another Niobe, is well worthy of the experiment.

Commerce And Industry

With the administration as with those which have gone before the restoration of commercial and industrial prosperity to the Islands will be the subject of most earnest concern and object of its indefatigable, undiscouraged and persistent activities.

The commercial and industrial depression which for more than three years has weighed so heavily on all classes is largely the natural and direct result of nearly seven years of war and disturbance, of unsettled and abnormal conditions. During these years of bitter trial the cattle upon which the people depended to cultivate the soil were killed for food or destroyed by disease; the tillers of the soil, the sweat of whose brow waters the earth and brings forth prosperity, were drafted from their usual avocations and pursuits; the laborer left the instrument of his toil and shouldered his rifle to lead the active or idle life of the soldier as circumstances prescribed.

Outside of the large cities no man sought to add to his riches for the rough hand of war might take them from him; the rice fields no longer yielded food for the people; the money which once made red the arteries of domestic trade went to enrich the veins of commerce in other lands; the purchasing power of the people was enormously impaired; few men could sell because few had the wherewith to buy and so there was, there is, and will be for some little time to come business depression.

Misrepresentation

The frightening away of capital by misrepresentations which damned the Government, the climate, the country and those who lived in it and which proclaimed the Philippines as a hell-hole breathing death, disease and disaster did not help matters much—or at least not very much. The prohibitive tariff in the United States on sugar and tobacco was also a discouraging influence.

If we would restore prosperity we must first restore the producing and therefore the purchasing power of the people. Dogged industry, patience and persistence may in time and by themselves accomplish these things but the hour of their realization may be hastened by the creation of new markets for Philippine products, by constructing roads and highways into fertile districts and opening them up to settlement and cultivation, by establishing agricultural banks, by advertising to the people of the Islands and the world at large the advantages and resources of the country and finally by speaking well of the place in which we live and spending our money there.

Legislation Necessary

In order that the markets of the United States may be opened to Philippine sugar and tobacco and that private enterprise may be induced to establish agricultural loan and mortgage banks, Congressional legislation is necessary and it will be secured once the mass and body of the American people becomes acquainted with the facts and the justice of our claims. The genius of the American people is a fair genius, a just genius and always does the fair thing and the just thing once it knows the facts.

The New Railroads

The concession for a system of railroads in the Islands has been granted already and thus provision has been made by the Insular Government for the great track lines of communication and transportation. That fertile districts may be opened to cultivation, that farmer and hacendero may be encouraged to produce more than is required for purely local consumption, that railroads now in existence and those in prospect may become available to the producer is already within the power of provinces and municipalities to accomplish, and upon the number of connecting roads and highways constructed by them will depend the prosperity to be enjoyed not only by their respective jurisdictions but by the whole Archipelago.

Adviser Solicited

To the Chambers of Commerce, to the agricultural associations and to all those interested in the commercial and industrial welfare of the country, the door of the Government will always be wide open and their counsel, advice and suggestions are not only invited but demanded in the interests of the whole people.

That within a few months after the official termination of the insurrection against the United States the overwhelming majority of the Filipino people returned to their usual avocations and pursuits and have ever since actively aided the new sovereign in suppressing sporadic disorder and in maintaining the public tranquility, demonstrates that they are by nature and training a gentle, peace-loving and law abiding race. Some there are, however, who for purposes of revenue only have for some time past persistently employed themselves in misleading the uninformed as to the designs of the sovereign power and when occasion offered have even sought to incite good but ignorant and impulsive men to deeds of violence and disturbances of the public peace, utilizing the moment of exaltation to collect from the unwary funds for patriotic purposes which it is needless to say were applied to their own private uses. That these men are arrant frauds who speak of scars and never felt a wound, patriots who insist on fighting and keep to the house when the fighting comes, goes without saying.

Public Order

The maintenance of public order and the giving of protection to the life, the property and the home of the citizen are essential to the welfare and prosperity of every community and are necessary to the existence of any form of government whether popular or otherwise. They are of the most vital importance to the Filipino people who are worn out and exhausted by many years of war, disturbance, and unsettled conditions. They are of the very first necessity to the true patriots of the Philippines who are about to take the most important political step in the history of their race—the organization of a legislative Assembly elected by and from the body of the people. Men, therefore, who would incite and promote disorder at this time of all times should not only be repressed but suppressed and they will be, in the manner and in the form prescribed by law.

The Philippine Constabulary

And speaking of public order brings me to the consideration of that great force composed almost entirely of Filipinos and organized while the passions of men were still hot with conflict—the Philippine Constabulary. Never before was such confidence shown in men who but a little before had been enemies with arms in their hands, and never before did men better justify the trust reposed in them. The suppression of the lawlessness which ever follows in the wake of war and the extinction of robber and guerilla bands which preyed upon the people of their own race made immediate work for the men of the Constabulary and they were sent into the field well disciplined but with the vaguest of ideas as to their duties to the law abiding and peaceful citizens.

Better disciplined than the outlaws they were to meet, the Constabulary suppressed marauders and bandits with an energy and bravery deserving of all praise, but laboring under a false idea as to their duties and inheriting as they did a wholly mistaken conception of their powers they also on many occasions suppressed the deserving citizen. Considering that the Constabulary force ranged from 5,000 to 7,000 men it may be said that the percentage of abuses was not great. Their number, however, was sufficient to move the Filipino people profoundly and to make them sincerely apprehensive that the oppression of other days was about to be restored with all its horrors. This condition was a matter of the gravest concern to Governor Taft, to Governor General Wright and to Governor General Ide and all of them labored most industriously to demonstrate that the Filipino people were capable of the first step in self-government—the production of a peace force strong enough to maintain public order and conscientious enough to respect the rights of the unarmed citizen.

It is gratifying to know that the confidence of these ardent believers in the Filipino people has been justified by time and that the Constabulary organization better instructed, better trained and better disciplined is gaining the confidence of the citizen and proving a most valuable aid to the governors of provinces in maintaining tranquility.

Policy As To Constabulary

In pursuance of the policy of previous administrations it will be the policy of the incoming one to insist that the Constabulary be carefully disciplined, properly instructed in its duties, and trained to regard as a most serious offense any abuse whatever of the unresisting citizen whether charged with crime or not. Constabulary officers, wherever stationed, must be careful to assist and cooperate with the provincial governors and local authorities in carrying out their lawful purposes in maintaining order, and in protecting life and property. Disrespect shown by any member of the Constabulary to any official clothed with civil authority will not be overlooked or lightly regarded. Officers in charge of districts or exercising command are responsible for the conduct and discipline of the men under their immediate control and will be called rigidly to account for any abuses committed by them.

Must Know What Is Going On

The plea by officers that they had no knowledge of abuses committed within their jurisdiction will not be received with favor. Their commissions are issued on the assumption that they will know what is going on about them and their failure to be sufficiently in touch with the men of their command and the people of their jurisdiction to be aware of abuses committed under color of authority, will be looked upon as fairly conclusive proof that they are not equal to the work for which they are paid a salary.

If the great mass of the Filipino people were educated and instructed there would be less difficulty in dealing with abuses, whether committed by peace officers or other officials. Indeed, with such a consummation achieved, abuses would be reduced to a minimum since few would dare oppress where all would know their rights and dare defend them.

Education

And so we come to education which after all is said and done is the base and foundation upon which must rest every cherished hope and beloved ideal of the Filipino race. Without it popular self-government is impossible; without it nationality is a dream gladdening as the rainbow but as unsubstantial as the iridescent colors of what are of promise, as intangible as the bag of gold that lies beneath the bow of heaven. Education will give the Filipino a common language—English, the tongue of commerce, the tongue which vies with French as the language of diplomacy. It will furnish a common means of communication to Tagalog and Visayan, Pampangan and Pangasinan, Bicol and Ilocano and bring about among the peoples of the Islands now divided and separated by half as many dialects as there are provinces, that union of action and that community of thought so necessary to stable government.

The policy of giving to the children of the Philippines whether rich or poor an opportunity to acquire useful knowledge will be continued, and the facilities for securing a practical education will be enlarged and extended as far as the financial resources of the Government will permit.

The system of instruction which devotes itself exclusively to the cultivation of the mind and gives no attention to the training of the eye and the hand, is inadequate and forces into clerical employments and professions, for which they are unfitted, many young men who if given a fair chance might become excellent mechanics and artisans.

Encouragement To Work

Such a system would leave much to be desired in any country; it would be almost criminal in this. Instruction in the useful arts and trades, will, therefore, receive special consideration in the Philippines and an earnest endeavor will be made to give to every province and ultimately to every municipality at least one trade school, completely equipped for the giving of instruction in trade and industrial work.

Church And State

With the transfer of sovereignty, the union of church and State which had theretofore existed in the Philippines was dissolved by virtue of the American Constitution which forbids the passage of any law creating an establishment of religion, and thereafter the Roman Catholic Church and State were left free to exercise the functions of their respective jurisdictions, each without interference or dictation from the other.

Some few officials have regarded the divorce of the two entities, long bound together in closest ties, as unilateral in its effects and have acted on the theory that while the separation deprived the Church as such of the right to exercise governmental functions it did not deprive the Government of the right to interfere in matters purely ecclesiastical and spiritual. To others the separation meant that the Church was outlawed and was no longer entitled to the protection either of the law or of the Government. Such views are erroneous and when made the basis of official action have been unjust and injurious both to Church and State.

Under existing laws Church and State within their respective spheres are each independent of the other, and no invasion by either of the jurisdiction of the other can be or will be allowed. The Catholic Church and churches of all denominations are entitled to be protected in the exercise of religious worship and it will be the special care of the Government to see that no person is either favored or discriminated against on account of his religion, and that every person, no matter what may be his religious convictions is protected in the practice of the religion of his choice.

Politics

The Government will welcome and encourage in the future as it has in the past the free discussion by the people of public and political questions, insisting, however, as it has always done, that language tending to incite public disorder and violence is unlawful and does not come within the protection guaranteed to free speech.

Political parties will be protected in their right to peaceably assemble and persons duly elected to office will, if otherwise qualified, be seated regardless of their political bias, prejudice or convictions.

As To Independence

For some time past the question of the independence of the Islands has been the subject of discussion not to say of agitation. Indeed, in some form or other it is the feature of nearly every political platform in the Islands. Some want it when the sovereign power believes they are prepared to receive it; some desire it when the people have demonstrated that they are capable of exercising and enjoying the privileges of popular self-government; some wish it when the people have shown that they are capable of governing themselves and strong enough to sustain and maintain their government; some would have it irrespective of conditions; some want it immediately, some urgently and some explosively, whatever that may mean.

This question is one which can only be determined by the American Government and is one, therefore, with which the Insular Government has no concern save in so far as the prosperity and the welfare of the Islands may be affected by any untimely agitation of the matter. Unless independence is to be granted immediately, and I surmise that it will not be, it seems to me that a good deal of valuable time and energy is lost by able men which might be more profitably employed in perfecting the existing government and in restoring commercial confidence and industrial prosperity.

What Has Cuba Done

Personally I doubt sincerely whether independence will prove a panacea for all ills to which a people may fall heir. Indeed, if the experience of Russia counts for anything, and I think it does, a people may be independent and still be the most unhappy, the most down-trodden, the most oppressed of all the world. And Cuba—has her new found independence and nationality—fought for, bled for, for more than thirty years, given her good government and her people peace and content?

Independence By Common Consent

To me it has always seemed that independence without the force, without the means to maintain it, is not worth the having; that the independence which exists by common consent will be as durable as the interests which made the consent possible; and that independence without good government is as deceiving as the mirage which promises green slopes, shady trees and bubbling springs, and leaves the trusting traveler to die of thirst on the blistering desert sands.

But this is invading the domain of political discussion which properly belongs to the political parties. Let the excuse for my intrusion be my anxiety to avoid the introduction of any new factor which may divert the people from the work of restoring the prosperity lost by war, agitation and unsettled conditions.

How Governors Have Been Hampered

Entering upon the arduous duties of Chief Executive of the Philippines, Governor Taft was hampered by the doubt, the suspicion and the reserve with which the people received civil government at the hands of a nation regarded as a conquering enemy; Governor-General Wright by the immense popularity and affection which had been poured out upon his predecessor, and Governor-General Ide by the unjust belief that his heart was as cold and unresponsive as his conduct in dealing with the people's money and in demanding that justice be done.

His Own Hopes

Entering upon the duties of the office which I have just assumed I encounter no obstacles in the way of accomplishment save those presented by the problem itself; when I surrender its burdens to my successor may I do so with some faint glow of the glorious achievement of the Taft administration, with the record for sincerity, courage, zeal and unflinching devotion to duty of the Wright administration, and with some of the brilliancy which marks the splendid administration of the man who has just retired from office with the heartfelt praise and devotion of the whole people.

W. CAMERON FORBES

Fifth Governor-General of the Philippine Islands Inaugurated November 24, 1909

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:

When a man undertakes the guidance of the ship of state, it is customary for him to announce the course that it is his intention to steer, to proclaim so far as may be the goal which it is hoped to reach. It is profitable at such time to look to the instructions under which others have previously assumed direction of the same ship, and with these fresh in mind, face the problems of the present and prepare plans for the future.

Among the names of those who have directed the initial policy of the American Government in the Philippine Islands are those of William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, William H. Taft, and Luke E. Wright. The Philippine Islands have indeed been fortunate in having received the services of such men as these, men who have directed the affairs of the United States from the commanding positions of President, and of Secretary of War.

The original work done by the Navy of the United States under Admiral Dewey and later the fine work of the Army and of the beginnings of civil government under the notable Generals, Otis and MacArthur, will always deserve a tribute of admiration and respect.

The initial period is always the one which requires the most intense application of effort, the highest order of ability; and the wisdom of the choice of President McKinley for the position of first Civil Governor of the Philippine Islands has been abundantly proven and ratified by the overwhelming vote which elected Mr. Taft President of the United States last November. He had served these Islands first as President of the Commission, then as Civil Governor, then as Secretary of War, and now he is completing the full measure of service by directing their affairs from the highest position within the gift of the American people.

I cannot pass by this period without pausing to dwell for a moment on the services of that notable friend of the Filipino, Governor-General Wright, whose farsighted wisdom has woven threads of order throughout the fabric of Government which have vastly strengthened its usefulness and efficiency.

There has never been the faintest shadow of a doubt cast upon the official or personal integrity of any one of the first four governors that succeeded each other in the administration of these Islands.

The foundations of our work have been so systematically laid and the plans so comprehensively prepared that a man of far less ability than these may hope to carry on the affairs of the Government and achieve a success impossible but for the work of those who have passed before.

It is indeed difficult to emulate the virtues of the last retiring Governor-General, whom all of us had learned to love so well; one can only use the superlative degree in describing the rectitude of purpose, the devotion to duty, the spotlessness of the personal integrity of James Francis Smith.

President McKinley, in instructing the Philippine Commission to proceed immediately with the establishment of civil government, used the following words:

"That in all cases the municipal officers who administer the local affairs of the people are to be elected by the people, and that wherever officers of a more extended jurisdiction are to be selected in any way, natives are to be preferred, and if they can be found competent and willing to perform the duties, they are to receive the offices in preference to any others.

"An indispensable qualification for all officers and positions of trust and authority in the islands must be absolute and unconditional loyalty to the United States, and absolute and unimpaired power and authority to remedy and punish any officer deviating from that standard shall always be retained in the hands of the central authority of the islands.

"In all forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe, the Commission should bear in mind that the Government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction, nor for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the Happiness, Peace and Prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands, and that measures adopted should be made to conform to their customs, their habits, and even their prejudices to the fullest extent consistent with the accomplishment of the indispensable requisites of just and effective government. At the same time, the Commission should bear in mind, and the people of the Islands should be made plainly to understand, that there are certain great principles of government which have been made the basis of our governmental system which we deem essential to the rule of law and the maintenance of individual freedom and of which they have unfortunately been denied the experience possessed by us; that there are also certain practical rules of government which we have found to be essential to the preservation of these great principles of liberty and law, and that these principles and these rules of government must be established and maintained in their Islands for the sake of their liberty and happiness, however much they may conflict with the customs or laws of procedure with which they are familiar.

"Upon all officers and employees of the United States, both civil and military, should be impressed a sense of duty to observe not merely the material, but the personal and social rights of the people of the Islands, and to treat them with the same courtesy and respect for their personal dignity which the people of the United States are accustomed to require from each other."

Analyzing the instructions of President McKinley, we may fairly take them as the goal toward which we are to steer the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the Philippine people. In so far as the people are today happy, peaceful, and prosperous we have succeeded; in so far as the people do not enjoy these blessings, we have not yet achieved success. The people are today peaceful. We can concentrate our attention in bringing them prosperity, secure in the belief that under just and equitable laws, under a wise and firm government, with that freedom of thought, of speech, of worship, of labor, and of opportunity which now prevails, happiness, will not be found far away when the means of procuring it are abundantly at hand.

Here is a climate particularly favorable for some classes of products and capable of yielding vast returns to honest and intelligent expenditure of efforts, and yet here we have a people bemoaning their poverty and living from day to day without those reserve supplies so necessary where crops are uncertain without the alleviation from suffering which modern medicines and surgery can give, without the nourishing kinds of food so necessary to build up the strength of the body, without houses built to withstand the elements, without in fact, most of those things which modern civilization believes to be necessary for the happiness of a community.

An analysis of the fundamental conditions of life reveals in part the reasons for these conditions. A very large proportion of the people have been held in that primitive condition where each man supplied all of the things necessary for his own use and got along with only what he could personally produce. We must bend our efforts to advance the day when each individual supplies the articles which he is best fitted to produce, which he sells to his fellow-men, and uses the money thus gained to purchase of others the things which they can produce better and cheaper than he. This is the essence of trade, and this condition of affairs is impossible without economical and adequate means of transportation, hitherto woefully lacking.

Our success in accomplishing of the principal object in these Islands, namely that of bettering the condition of the people may be best measured by the increase from time to time in the rate of wages and in the value of imports and exports.

I am opposed to the admission of Chinese labor, nor do I think there is any need of it. The Filipino can do all the necessary work in the Islands. I have entire confidence that the Philippine laborer, properly treated, properly paid, and given the opportunity to use the money which he receives to better his own condition and that of his family, and to purchase those things for which people are usually willing to work, will respond to the opportunities given and demonstrate the fact that he is fully able to supply all the demand for labor in these Islands.

What is needed here is capital.

Let us turn our attention to a few comparative figures. The total population of Hawaii is 198,000 people, or about one-fortieth part of the population of the Philippine Islands, now approximately eight millions. *The total exports from Hawaii in 1907 were $29,000,000, the total exports from the Philippine Islands for the same year were $34,000,000. In other words, Hawaii produced for export approximately thirty-six times as much per capita as did the Philippine Islands.

This is not because their laborers are superior, as Hawaii has come here in search of laborers and reports that these few whom they have obtained are equal to their Japanese, Korean, and other laborers. Porto Rico has 1,000,000 people, or one-eighth the population of the Philippine Islands, and in 1907 its exports were $27,000,000. Porto Rico evidently does not exercise the same degree of economy in the use of its labor as does Hawaii, for it produces only one-sixth as much per capita for export and still Porto Rico exports six times as much per capita as do the people of the Philippine Islands. Were these Islands to produce for sale to other countries as much per capita as Porto Rico the total exports would be $216,000,000. Were they to produce as much per capita as Hawaii the total exports would be $1,179,000,000 a year.

The explanation of this lies in the fact that Hawaii has an abundance of capital, employs modern methods of cultivation and manufacture, modern freight-handling devices, and suitable and adequate steamship and railroad facilities. In other words, in Hawaii the work of the laborer counts, in the Philippine Islands it does not. No, it is not labor that is wanted here; it is capital.

Many Filipinos have a tendency to oppose the introduction of capital into these Islands, either from the United States or from foreign countries, fearing lest somehow it should militate against the realization of their aspirations. In my judgment it will have the opposite effect. It is true that it might be possible in the course of several generations to develop the latent resources of the Philippine Islands without the assistance of outside capital and finally to accumulate enough to develop the domestic business from within. But why wait? We had better attract for our use the accumulations of wealth already made in other countries, sure that the advantages which flow from them will far more than offset any possible disadvantage due to the fact that some of the profits will leave the country or that the owners of the capital will endeavor to influence the administration of the Islands or their political status.

Capital demands a stable Government. Capital is not particularly interested in the color or design of the flag. It wants just and equitable laws, sound and uniform policy on the part of the government, just and fair treatment in the courts. The faith of the United States is pledged that all of these benefits shall be permanently assured to the Filipinos. No capitalist need feel alarmed as to the security of his investment provided it has been made in such a way as to fulfill the conditions imposed by law. The United States stands pledged to the establishment and maintenance of a stable government in the Philippine Islands, not for the sake of such capital as may be invested here only but for the sake of the welfare of the Philippine people and of the good faith of the United States before the world. The security of foreign capital is merely an incident in the general security of property and other rights to the Filipino, and both are now permanently assured. It would be good general policy for us to offer every reasonable inducement to capital to come, and with that end in view, to liberalize our land and mining laws and lessen the restrictions which have hitherto tended to discourage investors. My policy will be to hold out the hand of welcome to all people desiring to engage in legitimate enterprise.

There has been some doubt in the minds of Filipinos as to the effect which trusts would have were they to enter the Philippine field. The word "trust" is properly used to describe a combination of capital engaged in producing on a large scale some article of general consumption. The whole trend of modern development has been in the line of such concentration of energies, and in the United States, where this movement has reached its greatest development, we have the greatest prosperity. The articles sold by the trusts are sold at a lower price than was possible before their organization, and the laboring people of the United States live better and receive better wages than anywhere in the world. Four to six pesos a day are not uncommon wages for unskilled laborers in the United States. Forty to sixty centavos is the prevailing price per day in the Philippine Islands, which is one-tenth of that which a laborer can earn in the United States, while there is by no means the same disparity in the effectiveness of the labor. Experience, however, has proved that the trusts, when uncontrolled, esteem themselves above the law and may become a menace to the welfare of the community, by making illegal combinations in restraint of trade or by unduly raising prices at times when such an action works to the disadvantage of the community. The only question then as to the desirability of investment here by trusts lies in the nature of the control to be exercised by the Government. The laws which have already been passed give sufficient power of regulation to the Insular Government and to the Government of the United States to obviate any danger to be apprehended from that source.

An analysis of the census reveals certain peculiarities about the distribution of population in these Islands, some regions being densely overpopulated and others being practically without inhabitants. Curiously enough it is not always the richest sections that support the most people and from many districts come complaints of the difficulty of getting an adequate and reliable supply of labor. I think the Government can very properly use its vessels to provide free transportation to families wishing to move to those cultivated regions where laborers are scarce and thus increase the general production of the Islands. The Bureau of Labor has already made some progress along these lines.

The passage of the Payne Bill should give a new lease of life to the Philippine Islands. It assures us of the best market in the world for our products, a market that is not open to our neighbors, and therefore gives the Philippine Islands a preference which should enable us to increase very greatly the production of certain of our staples. This will have a vivifying effect which will be felt throughout the length and breadth of these Islands and awaken new hope in the hearts of the people who have been struggling against almost overwhelming difficulties.

It is part of our programme to push to early completion a general and systematic improvement of the means of transportation. The existing contracts for railroad aggregate nearly a thousand miles, of which half are now built. This in itself is earnest of the beginning of the new era and will provide adequate transportation for a large proportion of the people.

The Government should bend its efforts toward the development of the rivers and harbors — a potential means of transportation which should equal in importance the facilities supplied by the railroads.

We have more than a hundred rivers navigable within but closed at the mouth to the entrance of seagoing vessels by reason of the bars formed by the action of the waves at the shore. Especial attention should be given to the dredging of these bars and the building of bulkheads and scourways to render these natural highways available for the use and development of the Islands, and the Government should not rest until both sides of every one of these navigable rivers are lined from end to end with farms occupied and worked by prosperous and happy people.

More important still, and supplementary to all of these, are the roads, and in present progress of the work in connection with roads, I find the most happy augury for the future success of the Philippine people. In December, 1907, the Commission, until then the sole legislative body of the Islands, adjourned without passing any law making adequate provision for the necessary construction and annual maintenance of roads. I am glad to credit the members of the Assembly with having taken the most advanced and enlightened interest in the work and having made the most liberal provisions for roads by voting funds for that purpose to the limit of the capacity of the treasury. Before the Legislature had convened the Commission had passed a law making a majority of the provincial boards elective, a measure which provided for the extension of autonomy to the provinces in line with the instructions of Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt and the policy of the American Government here. The success of the road movement depended upon getting the provincial board to pass a law each year increasing the amount of the cedula or poll tax from P1 to P2. To do this it is necessary to convince the provincial officials each year of the necessity of road construction and maintenance for their own present development and future welfare. How nobly these officers have responded is demonstrated by the fact that the first year 27 of the 31, the second year 30, and the third year 31, or all of the provinces affected, have adopted the double cedula tax and put themselves in the line of advancement.

All Government construction should be of permanent and durable material. A building if worthy of construction is worthy of good construction. Our people are too poor, our resources too slender, our need of money too great to admit of our wasting any of that which we have. The Government buildings and bridges should always be of reinforced concrete, the roads should be built upon strong foundations, with durable surfacing, and guarded from hour to hour by roadmen to see with jealous eye that no sign of deterioration is allowed even to appear. Our wharves should be built of materials that will resist destructive insects of the seas. Our plans should always be made upon what will be the most economical construction calculated on a basis of at least fifty years of use.

The Filipinos are not strong enough to do the work which is required of able-bodied people. Examinations made by the sanitary authorities reveal the fact that in the regions inspected, which may be taken as fairly representative, by far the greater majority of the people are afflicted with more than one form of intestinal parasite, which sap the vitality and lessen the power to do work and the power of resisting disease. The most fruitful sources of these parasites are the polluted surface waters which the people have been accustomed to drink. A supply of pure potable water is the first requisite for the purpose of sanitation. To this end the most important agency is that of the artesian wells, which should be bored in every municipality and barrio in the Islands. Fortunately, the people themselves are most keenly alive to this necessity, and there has been no difficulty in getting a vote of the Philippine representatives of the different entities of government—insular, provincial, and municipal—in favor of this most vital and important work.

Another direction in which the energy of the government can be profitably employed is in checking the infant mortality, which continues at a most alarming rate. Care of infants will result in an increase in the numbers of the population and in the physique of the children, which cannot fail to be most beneficial to the Islands.

There is no agency more potent in creating good citizenship than is the ownership of land. It is necessary that the owners of the land should be provided with recorded titles, to use as security for loans or they may be able to sell without there being any probability that the purchaser has acquired only a lawsuit. It is my purpose to provide for a complete survey of all the parcels of land in each municipality. I should like to so arrange matters that a judge of the Court of Land Registration may be at hand to fix the ownership to each parcel as surveyed, and when fixed the Government will give title to the land on the basis of division of expense of the same, the owner repaying somewhere from 60 to 80 per cent of the cost, in easy installments. This will save much of the travelling of surveyors and greatly reduce the cost. The Agricultural Bank and Postal Savings Bank will then be able to make advantageous loans and greatly assist agriculture.

It is my intention to make appointments to the vacant authorized positions in the Court of Land Registration in the near future.

The Government will adopt the policy of not entering objections to the issue of titles to land to its occupants where it is clear that the interest of the public will not suffer. I believe that these measures will end the present stagnant condition in the matter of land registration.

In the matter of irrigation it is the plan of the Government to continue the active work of surveys and the gathering of data until we have a complete irrigation survey of the Islands and know each area capable of irrigation, the flow of each river, even at the driest times, the works necessary for its control in time of floods, the cost of the intended irrigation works, and the cost per hectare of putting water on the land to be improved. Having due regard to distributing the benefits from the irrigation works so as not to concentrate them all in one province or island, it is the policy of the Government to develop those areas first where the cost of the construction of the system per hectare is least. It is expected to collect from the land benefited the cost of maintenance of the system, the interest on the money invested, and something besides, which is to be added to the original fund, and which, with the continuing annual appropriation of ₱750,000 voted by the Legislature, should roll up into a sum which will, in the course of time, supply the Islands with irrigation systems wherever it can be done with profit.

The establishment of post offices and extension of the rural delivery of letters should be continued as fast as funds will permit, until at least every municipality has its post office.

It is hoped to establish and maintain wire or wireless telegraphic communication with every provincial capital, and to extend the system of telephone connection between the municipalities throughout the provinces. The general dissemination of knowledge as to prices, movements of ships, availability of cargo, and so forth, is of the greatest importance in stimulating production.

There is no question as to the necessity and importance of the Constabulary; they should be maintained at their present strength. The officers should understand that they have a career in this service and the Government will support them in the proper conduct of their work. The legislation enacted assures an excellent personnel and increasing efficiency. The organization has fully met the hopes which were entertained for it when it was started and there is no plan either for a diminution of its force or for a lessening of its duties.

It is necessary that some way be found to improve the municipal police throughout the Islands, especially in the matter of longer term for the men and better methods of discipline, drill, and inspection.

I want to see emphasis laid upon the importance of the practical side of industrial and agricultural education. Success in agriculture and industry are the things sought, and they can be best taught, and one might say only taught, by those who have themselves achieved success. Our agricultural schools should be made self-supporting, so that their products should pay the cost of the labor which is done on them, and something more.

I should like to see every one of the two million children of school age in these Islands receiving an education. The thought is grievous that any boy or girl in the Philippine Islands wanting to get an education should be unable to do so because of failure of the Government to provide facilities, and yet the resources of the Islands have not developed to a point where I feel that we are justified in largely increasing the appropriation for education. When the time comes that facilities can be available, I shall not be opposed to a law providing for compulsory education. The amount of education we shall be able to accomplish in ten years will be very much greater if we devote our first money toward increasing the wealth of the people and later use the resulting increase of revenue for extending our educational facilities. I liken the work of the Government on irrigation and improvement of transportation to cutting the strings which close the mouth of a purse of gold. The gold will pour forth and yield enough for all.

It is my hope that the Philippine University will soon establish, among other technical schools, a school of engineering, so that the important work of building up the public works of these Islands may be placed gradually in the hands of Filipinos.

The Filipino is as quick as any person to indulge in desirable and health-giving forms of amusement. Nothing could be better for the Filipino than stimulating interest in wholesome outdoor sports, to develop the body and divert the mind. In the large cities of the United States it is a well-known fact that crime decreases in the neighborhood of playgrounds for children and I hope the time is not far distant when every city in the Philippine Islands will maintain a plaza where children and young men and women can indulge themselves in healthy outdoor recreation. A strong body is earnest of mind, ready to work and to endure, and the young men and women of the Philippine Islands should make it a matter of pride to have broad and deep chests, finely developed muscles, and hands inured to toil.

The rinderpest is now the greatest menace to material development. The draft animals must be saved to the farmer, otherwise he can neither cultivate the land nor haul his products to market. The method of immunization is well known. The control of the disease is now a question of money and organization and I have already taken measures to remedy the deficiencies that have existed and shall allow no stone to remain unturned until this effort is crowned with success.

The destruction caused by locusts can be greatly lessened in my judgment by a system of rewards to be given for information brought of the places where the eggs are laid and, under provision of existing law, turning out the populace to destroy these or the young locusts before they have reached the age when they can fly.

The arm of the Government will be strongly used to reach out and find and punish those captains of steamers who refuse to carry a consignment of goods so that they may buy it at less than its value. The hand of the Government will be heavily laid on those officials—Insular, provincial, or municipal, who use their positions to compel any one to sell his products at a price that he knows to be so low as to be unfair.

It is necessary that the civil service should be rigidly maintained and its rules carefully observed. Any other system is sure to result in eventual disintegration of the service.

I believe that we have today an accounting system which in principle is more nearly akin to the best modern commercial practice than is usual in governments. The system is as yet incomplete in its working, but in principle is correct.

In matters pertaining to religious beliefs and observances, I shall carry out the American policy of religious tolerance. Every man has the right to worship according to his own belief. The Government will not interfere with the customs, manners and preferences of the people in so far as they observe our laws, which are framed in accordance with accepted usage in civilized countries. All churches will receive protection under the law for the proper conduct of their affairs and in regard to their property rights.

Financially the conditions of the Insular Treasury has been most satisfactory. We have had a reasonable surplus and rate of expenditure for current expense which has left a comfortable margin, some of which has been available each year for the construction of public works out of the current revenues. Although many people have got into the habit of complaining that the rate of taxation is high, and there has been a good deal of political agitation in favor of lower taxes, a study of comparative figures reveals the fact that the rate of taxation in the Philippine Islands, compared with that of other countries similarly situated, is extremely low, and the Filipino who questions the ability of his people to pay the low rate of taxation now imposed shows a great lack of confidence in their capacity.

It will be my policy to confine myself strictly to those things which lie within the ample powers of the Governor-General to direct. I do not propose to occupy my time nor my attention in the unprofitable consideration and discussion of the future political status of the Islands.

I deem it proper, however, at this time to call attention to the manner in which the Government has observed President McKinley's instructions, that the Filipinos be given participation in the Government to an extent limited only by the retention by the people of the United States of a strong control over the affairs of the Islands.

We have given the Filipinos a complete autonomous government in the municipalities outside of Manila, with wide powers under a municipal code, and a franchise that permits of the election of all the members of the governing body of the people, and have brought it about that the officer directing the immediate government of the individual throughout the Islands is the man of his own choice.

Later, the provinces were given the right to elect the majority of their provincial boards, until that time held by officers appointed by the Governor-General. This further extension of autonomy to the provinces has given over to the hands of the Filipinos a larger unit in civil administration. Later the Legislature was convened and the Commission was divested of its powers as sole legislative body over the Christian and civilized inhabitants and it became only one House of a Legislature, both Houses of which have an equal voice in framing legislation for the people concerned and at the same time the number of Filipinos on the Commission was increased by one, so that today the Philippine Legislature consists of one House with eighty-one Philippine members and one House of whom four out of nine are Filipinos. Relations between the two Houses of the Legislature have left little to be desired. The proceedings were all conducted in a dignified and formal manner and each House adjourned after disposing of all business submitted to it by the other and most of the pressing legislative matters were well cared for. Although I realize the difficulties inherent in the work of a new organization and although the Filipinos had no parliamentary experience, I am glad to say that the First Assembly has fully justified the hopes that were held for it.

One very distinguished Filipino recently has been appointed to administrative control of one of the most important departments of the Government, equal in rank to any executive position in the Islands with the exception of the executive head. In the executive branch of the Government, the Filipinization of the service must steadily continue. As vacancies occur Filipinos will be gradually substituted for Americans as rapidly as can be done without positive detriment to the service.

At the same time, care will be taken to provide a suitable career for honest and capable Americans who have come out here in good faith. They should know that during good behavior and efficient performance of their duty they are secure in their positions, and that when they desire to return to the United States an effort will be made to place them in the civil service at home. I am heartily in favor of a pension for Americans who have given their lives to faithful service in the Islands, and shall present the matter for consideration to the next Legislature.

There has been a constant increase in the number of Filipinos in the classified civil service, which has grown from 49 per cent in 1903 to 55 per cent in 1905, 60 per cent in 1907, and 62 per cent in 1909, according to the last returns.

I want no better men than the present officers and employees of the Government, Americans and Filipinos. They compare favorably with any set of men I have ever seen both as regards ability and fidelity to duty.

To the Filipinos I say, turn your undivided attention to the material development of your country and rest confident in the good faith of the United States. If it were the desire of the United States to prevent the Filipinos from becoming a progressive, happy, and united people, strong in the accumulation of wealth and knowledge and capable of nationality, we should not be devoting our entire energies toward the accomplishment of those measures which make such a nationality possible; we should not be providing all of the people of the Islands with a common language; we should not be maintaining a different organization of armed Filipinos drilled in the art of war, aggregating 10,000 men, of whom 5,000 are paid from the Treasury of the United States as United States troops; we should not be extending the privileges of occupying the more important posts in the Government service to Filipinos; we should not be devoting our first efforts toward binding the Filipinos together into a closer union by these ties which come from improved means of communication, as post-offices, telegraph and telephones, railroads, roads, subsidized steamboats, and so forth.

I regret to have to say that in my judgment in some instances the Filipinos themselves have hindered the fruition of these efforts, as for example by discouraging the universal adoption of a common language, by endeavoring to avert the opening of the markets of the United States to Philippine products and by discouraging the coming of capital, thus impeding and delaying the arrival of that time when a national existence will be possible.

The success of an administration varies directly with the degree and confidence and assistance given by the people themselves. The desire and ability to assist the Government is characteristic of successful democratic forms of government and I invite the Filipino people to bring me their recommendations and suggestions of measures for the betterment of their condition with the certainty that I shall always be ready to receive them with sympathetic attention.

To the Americans I say, those of you who wish to see the fullest measure of American success in these Islands should deal courteously with the Filipino. Speak him fair; deal with him fairly, and look after his interests as though they were yours, as indeed they are. To those engaged in business I add, do not feel it necessary to make a big profit on each transaction. It is important that each transaction should be creditable to you. The great axiom of modern business is that a trade to be a good trade must be a good trade for both parties. A man to really succeed in business must have his clients and customers satisfied. Safe profits are made by economics in operation, in transportation, in methods of production and manufacture and not by charging high prices. See that your customer gets his full money's worth and that the good which he receives of you are as represented. Those who do otherwise are enemies to the successful administration of the Islands. It is not that I object to large profits—on the contrary, I should like to see all the merchants here accumulating wealth—but that I believe the methods I have suggested will result in a greater volume of business that will in the long run yield larger and safer returns.

To all of you I say: Have confidence, turn your attention to those occupations which are fitting to people in time of profound peace. There is not on the horizon discernible any cloud which indicates the possibility of any kind of disturbance in the present status of these Islands, either from within or from without, by insurrection or war.

The United States is strong, determined, fixed in her policy, and not to be dissuaded or coerced. The development of the Philippine Islands will proceed along the lines originally set forth, strictly adhered to by each successive administration and by gradual processes in line of declared policy, not by spasms or jerks.

There seems to be in some quarters a fear that with the new administration there is an intended change of regime; that somehow or other the people will be made to suffer by the exercise of something which they designate as "the strong hand." I hope that my hand will prove to be strong in justice, in maintaining law and order, in helping the weak and distressed, in combating the forces of evil. No people want a weak or feeble government. The only persons who need fear the exercise of a strong hand are those who fear justice, or those who for reasons of their own may be planning evil. The man who is loyal to himself, loyal to his people, and loyal to his oath of allegiance to the United States, need have no anxiety. I think that the character and history of the present President of the United States is a guaranty that no man will be allowed to remain a Governor of these Islands who uses his power in an unjust cause or to the disadvantage of the rights of the Filipinos as guaranteed them by the liberal provisions of Congress.

In friendliness, in cooperation, there is strength; in recrimination, in hostility, there is weakness. Let us all reach out the hand of friendship to our neighbor and endeavor to promote an era of good feeling, of ample confidence, of mutual respect, and of cooperation that we may all secure the realization of the main object to the attainment of which all the energies of this administration are hereby pledged; namely, the material prosperity of the Philippine Islands.

PRESIDENT CLARO M. RECTO OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

The Commonwealth March. Inspired by the advent of the coming of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, Rodolfo T. Cornejo, a Filipino youth composer, wrote a melody of the tenor of the melody of the University of the Philippines, composed a song entitled "The Commonwealth March" at the opening day of the Constitutional Convention on June 30, 1954, which was sung for the first time by the Students' Forum of the Philippine Women's University where the members of the Faculty of said institution gave a special program in honor of the Delegate to the Constitutional Convention on September 22, 1954. Senator Claro M. Recto, president of the Constitutional Convention, in his letter of November 28, 1954, addressed to the author of the aforementioned musical composition, said as follows:

Respectfully Dedicated to the Leaders of the Filipino People, the Members of the Constitutional Convention, and the first Constitutional Officers of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands

CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES

[Adopted by the Philippine Constitutional Convention at the City of Manila, Philippine Islands, on the eighth day of February, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and Approved by the President of the United States on the twenty-third day of March, nineteen hundred and thirty-five.]

The Filipino people, imploring the aid of Divine Providence, in order to establish a government that shall embody their ideals, conserve and develop the patrimony of the nation, promote the general welfare, and secure to themselves and their posterity the blessings of independence under a regime of justice, liberty, and democracy, do ordain and promulgate this Constitution.

ARTICLE I.—The National Territory

SECTION 1. The Philippines comprises all the territory ceded to the United States by the treaty of Paris concluded between the United States and Spain on the tenth day of December eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, the limits of which are set forth in Article III of said treaty, together with all the islands embraced in the treaty concluded at Washington, between the United States and Spain on the seventh day of November, nineteen hundred, and in the treaty concluded between the United States and Great Britain on the second day of January, nineteen hundred and thirty, and all territory over which the present Government of the Philippine Islands exercises jurisdiction.

ARTICLE II.—Declaration of Principles

SECTION 1. The Philippines is a republican state. Sovereignty resides in the people and all government authority emanates from them.

SEC. 2. The defense of the State is a prime duty of government, and in the fulfillment of this duty all citizens may be required by law to render personal military or civil service.

SEC. 3. The Philippines renounces war as an instrument of national policy, and adopts the general accepted principles of international law as a part of the law of the Nation.

SEC. 4. The natural right and duty of parents in the rearing of the youth for civic efficiency should receive the aid and support of the Government.

SEC. 5. The promotion of social justice to insure the well-being and economic security of all the people should be the concern of the State.

ARTICLE III.—Bill of Rights

SECTION 1. (1) No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor shall any person be denied the equal protection of the laws.

(2) Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation.

(3) The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, to be determined by the judge after examination under oath or affirmation of the complainant and the witnesses he may produce, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

(4) The liberty of abode and of changing the same within the limits prescribed by law shall not be impaired.

(5) The privacy of communication and correspondence shall be inviolable except upon lawful order of the court when public safety and order require otherwise.

(6) The right to form associations or societies for purposes not contrary to law shall not be abridged.

(7) No law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed. No religious test shall be required for the exercise of civil or political rights.

(8) No law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the Government for redress of grievances.

(9) No law granting a title of nobility shall be enacted, and no person holding any office of profit or trust shall, without the consent of the National Assembly, accept any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any foreign state.

(10) No law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be passed.

(11) No ex post facto law or bill of attainder shall be enacted.

(12) No person shall be imprisoned for debt or nonpayment of a poll tax.

(13) No involuntary servitude in any form shall exist except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.

(14) The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended except in cases of invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, when the public safety requires it, in any of which events the same may be suspended wherever during such period the necessity for such suspension shall exist.

(15) No person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law.

(16) All persons shall before conviction be bailable by sufficient sureties, except those charged with capital offenses when evidence of guilt is strong. Excessive bail shall not be required.

(17) In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, and shall enjoy the right to be heard by himself and counsel, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have compulsory process to secure the attendance of witnesses in his behalf.

(18) No person shall be compelled to be a witness against himself.

(19) Excessive fines shall not be imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

(20) No person shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment for the same offense. If an act is punished by a law and an ordinance, conviction or acquittal under either shall constitute a bar to another prosecution for the same act.

(21) Free access to the courts shall not be denied to any person by reason of poverty.

ARTICLE IV.—Citizenship

SECTION 1. The following are citizens of the Philippines:

(1) Those who are citizens of the Philippine Islands at the time of the adoption of this Constitution.

(2) Those born in the Philippine Islands of foreign parents who, before the adoption of this Constitution, had been elected to public office in the Philippine Islands.

(3) Those whose fathers are citizens of the Philippines.

(4) Those whose mothers are citizens of the Philippines and, upon reaching the age of majority, elect Philippine citizenship.

(5) Those who are naturalized in accordance with law.

SEC. 2. Philippine citizenship may be lost or reacquired in the manner provided by law.

ARTICLE V.—Suffrage

SECTION 1. Suffrage may be exercised by male citizens of the Philippines not otherwise disqualified by law, who are twenty-one years of age or over and are able to read and write, and who shall have resided in the Philippines for one year and in the municipality wherein they propose to vote for at least six months preceding the election. The National Assembly shall extend the right of suffrage to women, if in a plebiscite which shall be held for that purpose within two years after the adoption of this Constitution, not less than three hundred thousand women possessing the necessary qualifications shall vote affirmatively on the question.

ARTICLE VI.—Legislative Department

SECTION 1. The Legislative power shall be vested in a National Assembly. The Members of the National Assembly shall not exceed one hundred and twenty, shall be chosen every three years, and shall be apportioned among the several provinces as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants, but each province shall have at least one Member. The National Assembly shall by law make an apportionment within three years after the return of every enumeration, and not otherwise. Until such apportionment shall have been made, the National Assembly shall consist of ninety-eight Members, of whom eighty-seven shall be elected by the representative districts as now provided by law; and three by the Mountain Province; and one by each of the other eight existing special provinces. The Members of the National Assembly in the Provinces of Sulu, Lanao, and Cotabato shall be chosen as may be determined by law; in all other provinces they shall be elected by the qualified voters therein.

SEC. 2. No person shall be a Member of the National Assembly unless he has been five years a citizen of the Philippines, is at least thirty years of age, and, at the time of his election, a qualified elector, and a resident of the province in which he is chosen for not less than one year immediately prior to his election.

SEC. 3. (1) In case of vacancy in the National Assembly a special election may be called in the corresponding district, in the manner prescribed by law, but the Member thus elected shall serve only for the unexpired term.

(2) Elections for the National Assembly shall be held on the dates fixed by law.

(3) The National Assembly shall convene in regular session once every year, on the second Monday of the month immediately following that on which the election of its Members was held, unless a different date is fixed by law. The National Assembly may be called in special session at any time by the President to consider general legislation or only such subjects as he may designate. No special session shall continue longer than thirty days, and no regular session longer than one hundred days, exclusive of Sundays.

(4) The National Assembly shall choose its Speaker, a secretary, a sergeant-at-arms, and such other officers as may be required. A majority of all the Members shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent Members, in such manner and under such penalties as the National Assembly may provide.

(5) The National Assembly may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a Member. It shall keep a Journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in its judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays on any question shall, at the request of one-fifth of its Members present, be entered in the Journal.

SEC. 4. There shall be an Electoral Commission composed of three Justices of the Supreme Court designated by the Chief Justice, and of six Members chosen by the National Assembly, three of whom shall be nominated by the party having the largest number of votes, and three by the party having the second largest number of votes therein. The senior Justice in the Commission shall be its chairman. The Electoral Commission shall be the sole judge of all contests relating to the election, returns, and qualifications of the Members of the National Assembly.

SEC. 5. The Members of the National Assembly shall, unless otherwise provided by law, receive an annual compensation of five thousand pesos each including per diems and other emoluments or allowances and exclusive only of travelling expenses to and from their respective districts when attending sessions of the National Assembly. No increase in said compensation shall take effect until after the expiration of the full term of the Members of the National Assembly elected subsequent to the approval of such increase. The Speaker of the National Assembly shall receive an annual compensation of sixteen thousand pesos until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 6. The Members of the National Assembly shall in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the National Assembly, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate therein, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

SEC. 7. The National Assembly shall elect from among its Members, on the basis of proportional representation of the political parties therein, a Commission on Appointments and a Commission on Impeachment, each to consist of twenty-one members. These Commissions shall be constituted within thirty days after the National Assembly shall have been organized with the election of its Speaker, and shall meet only while the National Assembly is in session at the call of their respective Chairmen or a majority of their members, to discharge such powers and functions as are herein conferred upon them.

SEC. 8. (1) No member of the National Assembly may hold any other office or employment in the Government without forfeiting his seat, nor shall any such Member during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office which may have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased while he was a Member of the National Assembly.

(2) No Member of the National Assembly shall directly or indirectly be financially interested in any contract with the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof, or in any franchise or special privilege granted by the National Assembly during his term of office; nor shall any such Member appear as counsel before the Electoral Commission or any court in any civil case wherein the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof is the adverse party, or collect any fee for his appearance in any administrative proceedings or in any criminal case wherein an officer or employee of the Government is accused of an offense committed in relation to his office. No Member of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly shall appear as counsel before any court inferior to the Supreme Court.

SEC. 9 (1) The President shall submit within fifteen days of the opening of each regular session of the National Assembly a budget of receipts and expenditures, which shall be the basis of the general appropriation bill. The National Assembly may not increase the appropriations recommended by the President for the operation of the Government as specified in the Budget, except the appropriations for the National Assembly and the Judicial Department. The form of the Budget and the information that it should contain shall be prescribed by law.

(2) No provision or enactment shall be embraced in the general appropriation, unless it relates specifically to some particular appropriation in the bill; and any such provision or enactment shall be limited in its operation to such appropriation.

SEC. 10. The heads of departments upon their own initiative or upon the request of the National Assembly may appear before and be heard by the National Assembly on any matter pertaining to their departments, unless the public interest shall require otherwise and the President shall so state in writing.

SEC. 11. (1) Every bill which shall have passed the National Assembly shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President. If he approves the same, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it with his objections to the National Assembly, which shall enter the objections at large on its Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of all the Members of the National Assembly shall agree to pass the bill, it shall become a law. In all such cases the votes of the National Assembly shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the Members voting for and against shall be entered on the Journal. If any bill shall not be returned by the President as herein provided within twenty days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the National Assembly by adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall become a law unless vetoed by the President within thirty days after adjournment.

(2) The President shall have the power to veto any particular item or items of an appropriation bill, but the veto shall not affect the item or items to which he does not object. When a provision of an appropriation bill affects one or more items of the same, the President cannot veto the provision without at the same time vetoing the particular item or items to which it relates. The item or items objected to shall not take effect except in the manner heretofore provided as to bills returned to the National Assembly without the approval of the President. If the veto refers to a bill or any item of an appropriation bill which appropriates a sum in excess of ten per centum of the total amount voted in the appropriation bill for the general expenses of the Government for the preceding year, or if it should refer to a bill authorizing an increase of the public debt, the same shall not become a law unless approved by three-fourths of all the Members of the National Assembly.

(3) The President shall have the power to veto any separate item or items in a revenue or tariff bill, and the item or items vetoed shall not take effect except in the manner provided as to bills vetoed by the President.

SEC. 12. (1) No bill which may be enacted into law shall embrace more than one subject which shall be expressed in the title of the bill.

(2) No bill shall be passed or become a law unless it shall have been printed and copies thereof in its final form furnished the Members at least three calendar days prior to its passage by the National Assembly, except when the President shall have certified to the necessity of its immediate enactment. Upon the last reading of a bill no amendment thereof shall be allowed, and the question upon its final passage shall be taken immediately thereafter, and the yeas and nays entered on the Journal.

SEC. 13. (1) All money collected on any tax levied for a special purpose shall be treated as a special fund and paid out for such purpose only. If the purpose for which a special fund was created has been fulfilled or abandoned, the balance, if any, shall be transferred to the general funds of the Government.

(2) No money shall be paid out of the Treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation made by law.

(3) No public money or property shall ever be appropriated, applied, or used, directly or indirectly, for the use, benefit, or support of any sect, church, denomination, sectarian, institution, or system of religion, or for the use, benefit, or support, of any priest, preacher, minister, or other religious teacher or dignitary as such, except when such priest, preacher, minister, or dignitary is assigned to the armed forces or to any penal institution, orphanage, or leprosarium.

SEC. 14. (1) The rule of taxation shall be uniform.

(2) The National Assembly may by law authorize the President, subject to such limitations and restrictions as it may impose, to fix within specified limits, tariff rates, import or export quotas, and tonnage and wharfage dues.

(3) Cemeteries, churches, and parsonages or convents appurtenant thereto, and all lands, buildings, and improvements used exclusively for religious, charitable, or educational purposes shall be exempt from taxation.

SEC. 15. The National Assembly shall, with the concurrence of two-thirds of all its Members, have the sole power to declare war.

SEC. 16. In times of war or other national emergency, the National Assembly may by law authorize the President, for a limited period and subject to such restrictions as it may prescribe, to promulgate rules and regulations to carry out a declared national policy.

ARTICLE VII.—Executive Department

SECTION 1. The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the Philippines.

SEC. 2. The President shall hold his office during a term of six years, and together with the Vice President chosen for the same term, shall be elected by direct vote of the people. The election returns for President and Vice President duly certified by the board of canvassers of each province, shall be transmitted to the National Assembly. Upon receipt of such returns the National Assembly shall forthwith, in public session, count the votes, and proclaim the persons elected President and Vice President. The persons respectively having the highest number of votes for President and Vice President shall be declared elected, but in case two or more shall have an equal and the highest number of votes for either office, the National Assembly shall, by a majority vote of all its Members, elect one of said persons as President or Vice President.

SEC. 3. No person may be elected to the office of President or Vice President, unless he be a natural-born citizen of the Philippines, a qualified voter, forty years of age or over, and has been a resident of the Philippines for at least ten years immediately preceding the election.

SEC. 4. No person elected President may be reelected for the following term, nor shall the Vice President or any other person who may have succeeded to the office of President as herein provided at least one year before the election, be eligible to the office of President at such election.

SEC. 5. Elections for President and Vice President shall be held once every six years on a date to be fixed by the National Assembly.

SEC. 6. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the thirtieth day of December following the expiration of six years after their election, and the terms of their successors shall begin from such time.

SEC. 7. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President-elect shall have died, the Vice President-elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President-elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice President shall act as President until a President shall have qualified, and the National Assembly may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President-elect nor a Vice President-elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice President shall have qualified.

SEC. 8. Before he enter on the execution of his office, the President shall take the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully and conscientiously fulfill my duties as President of the Philippines, preserve and defend its Constitution, execute its laws, do justice to every man, and consecrate myself to the service of the Nation. So help me God." (In case of affirmation, last sentence will be omitted.)

SEC. 9. In the event of the removal of the President from office or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the National Assembly shall by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

SEC. 10. The President shall have an official residence and receive a compensation to be ascertained by law which shall be neither increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the Government or any of its subdivisions or instrumentalities. Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise the President shall receive an annual salary of thirty thousand pesos. The Vice President, when not acting as President, shall receive an annual compensation of fifteen thousand pesos until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 11. (1) The President shall have control of all the executive departments, bureaus, or offices, exercise general supervision over all local governments as may be provided by law, and take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

(2) The President shall be commander-in-chief of all armed forces of the Philippines and, whenever it becomes necessary, he may call out such armed forces to prevent or suppress lawless violence, invasion, insurrection, or rebellion. In case of invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, or imminent danger thereof, when the public safety requires it, he may suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, or place the Philippines or any part thereof under martial law.

(3) The President shall nominate and with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly, shall appoint the heads of the executive departments and bureaus, officers of the Army from the rank of colonel, of the Navy and air forces from the rank of captain or commander, and all other officers of the Government whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and those whom he may be authorized by law to appoint; but the National Assembly may by law vest the appointment of inferior officers, in the President alone, in the courts, or in the heads of departments.

(4) The President shall have the power to make appointments during the recess of the National Assembly, but such appointments shall be effective only until disapproval by the Commission on Appointments or until the next adjournment of the National Assembly.

(5) The President shall from time to time give to the National Assembly information of the state of the Nation, and recommend to its consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

(6) The President shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, and remit fines and forfeitures, after conviction, for all offenses, except in cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may deem proper to impose. He shall have the power to grant amnesty with the concurrence of the National Assembly.

(7) The President shall have the power, with the concurrence of a majority of all the Members of the National Assembly, to make treaties, and with the consent of the Commission on Appointments, he shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls. He shall receive ambassadors and other ministers duly accredited to the Government of the Philippines.

SEC. 12. (1) The executive departments of the present Government of the Philippine Islands shall continue as now authorized by law until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise.

(2) The heads of departments and chiefs of bureaus or offices and their assistants shall not, during their continuance in office, engage in the practice of any profession, or intervene, directly or indirectly, in the management or control of any private enterprise which in any way may be affected by the functions of their office; nor shall they, directly or indirectly, be financially interested in any contract with the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof.

(3) The President may appoint the Vice President as a member of his cabinet and also as head of an executive department.

ARTICLE VIII.—Judicial Department

SECTION 1. The Judicial power shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as may be established by law.

SEC. 2. The National Assembly shall have the power to define, prescribe, and apportion the jurisdiction of the various courts, but may not deprive the Supreme Court of its original jurisdiction over cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, nor of its jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm on appeal, certiorari, or writ of error, as the law or the rules of court may provide, final judgments and decrees of inferior courts in—

(1) All cases in which the constitutionality or validity of any treaty, law, ordinance, or executive order or regulation is in question.

(2) All cases involving the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, or toll, or any penalty imposed in relation thereto.

(3) All cases in which the jurisdiction of any trial court is in issue.

(4) All criminal cases in which the penalty imposed is death or life imprisonment.

(5) All cases in which an error or question of law is involved.

SEC. 3. Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise, the Supreme Court shall have such original and appellate jurisdiction as may be possessed and exercised by the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands at the time of the adoption of this Constitution. The original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court shall include all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall be composed of a Chief Justice and ten Associate Justices and may sit either in banc or in two divisions unless otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 5. The members of the Supreme Court and all judges of inferior courts shall be appointed by the President with the consent of the Commission on Appointment of the National Assembly.

SEC. 6. No person may be appointed member of the Supreme Court unless he has been five years a citizen of the Philippines, is at least forty years of age, and has for ten years or more been a judge of a court of record or engaged in the practice of law in the Philippines.

SEC. 7. No judge appointed for a particular district shall be designated or transferred to another district without the approval of the Supreme Court. The National Assembly shall by law determine the residence of judges of inferior courts.

SEC. 8. The National Assembly shall prescribe the qualifications of judges of inferior courts, but no person may be appointed judge of any such courts unless he is a citizen of the Philippines and has been admitted to the practice of law in the Philippines.

SEC. 9. The members of the Supreme Court and all judges of inferior courts shall hold office during good behavior, until they reach the age of seventy years, or become incapacitated to discharge the duties of their office. They shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by law, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office. Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall receive an annual compensation of sixteen thousand pesos, and each Associate Justice, fifteen thousand pesos.

SEC. 10. All cases involving the constitutionality of a treaty or law shall be heard and decided by the Supreme Court in banc, and no treaty or law may be declared unconstitutional without the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members of the Court.

SEC. 11. The conclusions of the Supreme Court in any case submitted to it for decision shall be reached in consultation before the case is assigned to a Justice for the writing of the opinion of the Court. Any Justice dissenting from a decision shall state the reasons for his dissent.

SEC. 12. No decision shall be rendered by any court of record without expressing therein clearly and distinctly the facts and the law on which it is based.

SEC. 13. The Supreme Court shall have the power to promulgate rules concerning pleading, practice, and procedure in all courts, and the admission to the practice of law. Said rules shall be uniform for all courts of the same grade and shall not diminish, increase, or modify substantive rights. The existing laws on pleading, practice, and procedure are hereby repealed as statutes, and are declared Rules of Courts, subject to the power of the Supreme Court to alter and modify the same. The National Assembly shall have the power to repeal, alter, or supplement the rules concerning pleading, practice, and procedure, and the admission to the practice of law in the Philippines.

ARTICLE IX.—Impeachment

SECTION 1. The President, the Vice President, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and the Auditor General, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, culpable violation of the Constitution, treason, bribery, or other high crimes.

SEC. 2. The Commission on Impeachment of the National Assembly, by a vote of two-thirds of its Members, shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3. The National Assembly shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose the Members shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the Philippines is on trial, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall preside.

No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of three-fourths of all the Members who do not belong to the Commission on Impeachment.

SEC. 4. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy an office of honor, trust, or profit under the Government of the Philippines, but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to prosecution, trial, and punishment, according to law.

ARTICLE X.—General Auditing Office

SECTION 1. There shall be a General Auditing Office under the direction and control of an Auditor General, who shall hold office for a term of ten years and may not be re-appointed. The Auditor General shall be appointed by the President with the consent of the Commission on Appointments, and shall receive an annual compensation to be fixed by law which shall not be diminished during his continuance in office. Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise, the Auditor General shall receive an annual compensation of twelve thousand pesos.

SEC. 2. The Auditor General shall examine, audit, and settle all accounts pertaining to the revenues and receipts from whatever source, including trust funds derived from bond issues; and audit, in accordance with law and administrative regulations, all expenditures of funds or property pertaining to or held in trust by the Government or the provinces or municipalities thereof. He shall keep the general accounts of the Government and preserve the vouchers pertaining thereto. It shall be the duty of the Auditor General to bring to the attention of the proper administrative officer expenditures of funds or property which, in his opinion, are irregular, unnecessary, excessive, or extravagant. He shall also perform such other functions as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 3. The decisions of the Auditor General shall be rendered within the time fixed by law, and the same may be appealed to the President whose action shall be final. When the aggrieved party is a private person or entity, an appeal from the decision of the Auditor General may be taken directly to a court of record in the manner provided by law.

SEC. 4. The Auditor General shall submit to the President and the National Assembly an annual report covering the financial condition and operations of the Government, and such other reports as may be required.

ARTICLE XI.—Civil Service

SECTION 1. A Civil Service embracing all branches and subdivisions of the Government shall be provided by law. Appointments in the Civil Service, except as to those which are policy-determining, primarily confidential or highly technical in nature, shall be made only according to merit and fitness, to be determined as far as practicable by competitive examination.

SEC. 2. Officers and employees in the Civil Service including members of the armed forces, shall not engage directly or indirectly in partisan political activities or take part in any election except to vote.

SEC. 3. No officer or employee of the Government shall receive additional or double compensation unless specifically authorized by law.

SEC. 4. No officer or employee in the Civil Service shall be removed or suspended except for cause as provided by law.

ARTICLE XII.—Conservation and Utilization of Natural Resources

SECTION 1. All agricultural, timber, and mineral lands of the public domain, waters, minerals, coal, petroleum, and other mineral oils, all forces of potential energy, and other natural resources of the Philippines belong to the State, and their disposition, exploitation, development, or utilization shall be limited to citizens of the Philippines, or to corporations or associations at least sixty per centum of the capital of which is owned by such citizens, subject to any existing right, grant, lease, or concession at the time of the inauguration of the Government established under this Constitution. Natural resources, with the exception of public agricultural land, shall not be alienated and no license, concession, or lease for the exploitation, development, or utilization of any of the natural resources shall be granted for a period exceeding twenty-five years, renewable for another twenty-five years, except as to water rights for irrigation, water supply, fisheries, or industrial uses other than the development of water power, in which cases beneficial use may be the measure and the limit of the grant.

SEC. 2. No private corporation or association may acquire, lease, or hold public agricultural lands in excess of one thousand and twenty-four hectares, nor may any individual acquire such lands by purchase in excess of one hundred and forty-four hectares, or by lease in excess of one thousand and twenty-four hectares, or by homestead in excess of twenty-four hectares. Lands adapted to grazing, not exceeding two thousand hectares, may be leased to an individual, private corporation, or association.

SEC. 3. The National Assembly may determine by law the size of private agricultural land which individuals, corporations, or associations may acquire and hold, subject to rights existing prior to the enactment of such law.

SEC. 4. The National Assembly may authorize, upon payment of just compensation, the expropriation of lands to be subdivided into small lots and conveyed at cost to individuals.

SEC. 5. Save in cases of hereditary succession, no private agricultural land shall be transferred or assigned except to individuals, corporations, or associations qualified to acquire or hold lands of the public domain in the Philippines.

SEC. 6. The State may, in the interest of national welfare and defense, establish and operate industries and means of transportation and communication, and, upon payment of just compensation transfer to public ownership utilities and order private enterprises to be operated by the Government.

ARTICLE XIII.—General Provisions

SECTION 1. The flag of the Philippines shall be red, white, and blue, with a sun and three stars, as consecrated and honored by the people and recognized by law.

SEC. 2. All public officers and members of the armed forces shall take an oath, support and defend the Constitution.

SEC. 3. The National Assembly shall take steps toward the development and adoption of a common national language based on one of the existing native languages. Until otherwise provided by law, English and Spanish shall continue as official languages.

SEC. 4. The State shall promote scientific research and invention. Arts and letters shall be under its patronage. The exclusive right to writings and inventions shall be secured to authors and inventors for a limited period.

SEC. 5. All educational institutions shall be under the supervision of and subject to regulation by the State. The Government shall establish and maintain a complete and adequate system of public education, and shall provide at least free public primary instruction, and citizenship training to adult citizens. All schools shall aim to develop moral character, personal discipline, civic conscience, and vocational efficiency, and to teach the duties of citizenship. Optional religious instruction shall be maintained in the public schools as now authorized by law. Universities established by the State shall enjoy academic freedom. The State shall create scholarships in arts, science, and letters for especially gifted citizens.

SEC. 6. The State shall afford protection to labor, especially to working women and minors, and shall regulate the relations between landowner and tenant, and between labor and capital in industry and in agriculture. The State may provide for compulsory arbitration.

SEC. 7. The National Assembly shall not, except by general law, provide for the formation, organization, or regulation of private corporations, unless such corporations are owned or controlled by the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof.

SEC. 8. No franchise, certificate, or any other form of authorization for the operation of a public utility shall be granted except to citizens of the Philippines or to corporations or other entities organized under the laws of the Philippines, sixty per centum of the capital of which is owned by citizens of the Philippines, nor shall such franchise, certificate, or authorization be exclusive in character or for a longer period than fifty years. No franchise or right shall be granted to any individual, firm, or corporation, except under the condition that it shall be subject to amendment, alteration, or repeal by the National Assembly when the public interest so requires.

SEC. 9. The Government shall organize and maintain a national police force to preserve public order and enforce the law.

SEC. 10. This Constitution shall be officially promulgated in English and Spanish, but in case of conflict the English text shall prevail.

ARTICLE XIV.—Amendments

SECTION 1. The National Assembly, by a vote of three-fourths of all its Members, may propose amendments to this Constitution or call a convention for that purpose. Such amendments shall be valid as part of this Constitution when approved by a majority of the votes cast at an election at which the amendments are submitted to the people for their ratification.

ARTICLE XV.—Transitory Provisions

SECTION 1. The first election of the officers provided in this Constitution and the inauguration of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall take place as provided in Public Act Numbered One hundred and twenty-seven of the Congress of the United States, approved March twenty-four, nineteen hundred and thirty-four.

SEC. 2. All laws of the Philippine Islands shall continue in force until the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines; thereafter, such laws shall remain operative, unless inconsistent with this Constitution, until amended, altered, modified, or repealed by the National Assembly, and all references in such laws to the Government or officials of the Philippine Islands shall be construed, in so far as applicable, to refer to the Government and corresponding officials under this Constitution.

SEC. 3. All courts existing at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall continue and exercise their jurisdiction, until otherwise provided by law in accordance with this Constitution and all cases, civil and criminal, pending in said courts, shall be heard, tried, and determined under the laws then in force.

SEC. 4. All officers and employees in the existing Government of the Philippine Islands shall continue in office until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise, but all officers whose appointments are by this Constitution vested in the President shall vacate their respective offices upon the appointment and qualification of their successors, if such appointment is made within a period of one year from the date of the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

SEC. 5. The Members of the National Assembly for the Mountain Province shall be elected as may be provided by law. The voters of municipalities and municipal districts formerly belonging to a special province and now forming part of regular provinces shall vote in the election for Members of the National Assembly in such districts as may be provided by law.

SEC. 6. The provisions of this Constitution, except those contained in this article and in Article V, and those which refer to the election and qualifications of officers to be elected under this Constitution, shall not take effect until the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

ARTICLE XVI.—Special Provisions Effective upon the Proclamation of the Independence of the Philippines.

SECTION 1. Upon the proclamation of the President of the United States recognizing the independence of the Philippines—

(1) The property rights of the United States and the Philippines shall be promptly adjusted and settled, and all existing property rights of citizens or corporations of the United States shall be acknowledged, respected, and safeguarded to the same extents as property rights of citizens of the Philippines.

(2) The officials elected and serving under this Constitution shall be constitutional officers of the free and independent government of the Philippines and qualified to function in all respects as if elected directly under such Government, and shall serve their full terms of office as prescribed in this Constitution.

(3) The debts and liabilities of the Philippines, its provinces, cities, municipalities, and instrumentalities, which shall be valid and subsisting at the time of the final and complete withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States, shall be assumed by the free and independent government of the Philippines; and where bonds have been issued under authority of an Act of Congress of the United States by the Philippine Islands, or any province, city, or municipality therein, the Government of the Philippines will make adequate provision for the necessary funds for the payment of interest and principal, and such obligations shall be a first lien on all taxes collected.

(4) The Government of the Philippines will assume all continuing obligations of the United States under the Treaty of Peace with Spain ceding the Philippine Islands to the United States.

(5) The Government of the Philippines will embody the foregoing provisions of this article [except subsection (2)] in a treaty with the United States.

ARTICLE XVII—The Commonwealth and the Republic

SECTION 1. The government established by this Constitution shall be known as the Commonwealth of the Philippines. Upon the final and complete withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States and the proclamation of Philippine independence, the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall henceforth be known as the Republic of the Philippines.

ORDINANCE APPENDED TO THE CONSTITUTION

SECTION 1. Notwithstanding the provisions of the foregoing Constitution, pending the final and complete withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines—

(1) All citizens of the Philippines shall owe allegiance to the United States.

(2) Every officer of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take and subscribe an oath of office, declaring, among other things, that he recognizes and accepts the supreme authority of, and will maintain true faith and allegiance to the United States.

(3) Absolute toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured and no inhabitant or religious organization shall be molested in person or property on account of religious belief or mode of worship.

(4) Property owned by the United States, cemeteries, churches, and parsonages or convents appurtenant thereto, and all lands, buildings, and improvements used exclusively for religious, charitable or educational purposes shall be exempt from taxation.

(5) Trade relations between the Philippines and the United States shall be upon the basis prescribed in section six of Public Act Numbered One hundred and twenty-seven of the Congress of the United States approved March twenty-four nineteen hundred and thirty-four.

(6) The public debt of the Philippines and its subordinate branches shall not exceed limits now or hereafter fixed by the Congress of the United States, and no loans shall be contracted in foreign countries without the approval of the President of the United States.

(7) The debts, liabilities, and obligations of the present Government of the Philippine Islands, its provinces, municipalities, and instrumentalities, valid and subsisting at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, shall be assumed and paid by the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

(8) The Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall establish and maintain an adequate system of public schools, primarily conducted in the English language.

(9) Acts affecting currency, coinage, imports, exports, and immigration shall not become law until approved by the President of the United States.

(10) Foreign affairs shall be under the direct supervision and control of the United States.

(11) All acts passed by the National Assembly of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall be reported to the Congress of the United States.

(12) The Philippines recognizes the right of the United States to expropriate property for public uses to maintain military and other reservations and armed forces in the Philippines, and, upon order of the President of the United States, to call into the service of such armed forces all military forces organized by the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

(13) The decisions of the courts of the Philippines shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States as now provided by law, and such review shall also extend to all cases involving the Constitution of the Philippines.

(14) Appeals from decisions of the Auditor General may be taken to the President of the United States.

(15) The United States may, by Presidential proclamation, exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines and for the maintenance of the Government as provided in the Constitution thereof, and for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty and for the discharge of Government obligations under and in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

(16) The authority of the United States High Commissioner to the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines as provided in Public Act Numbered One hundred and twenty-seven of the Congress of the United States approved March twenty-four, nineteen hundred and thirty-four, is hereby recognized.

(17) Citizens and corporations of the United States shall enjoy in the Commonwealth of the Philippines all the civil rights of the citizens and corporations, respectively, thereof.

(18) Every duly adopted amendment to the Constitution of the Philippines shall be submitted to the President of the United States for approval. If the President approve the amendment or if the President fail to disapprove such amendment within six months from the time of its submission, the amendment shall take effect as a part of such Constitution.

(19) The President of the United States shall have authority to suspend the taking effect of or the operation of any law, contract, or executive order of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, which in his judgment will result in a failure of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines to fulfill its contracts, or to meet its bonded indebtedness and interest thereon or to provide for its sinking funds, or which seems likely to impair the reserves for the protection of the currency of the Philippines, or which in his judgment will violate international obligations of the United States.

(20) The President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall make an annual report to the President and Congress of the United States of the proceedings and operations of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines and shall make such other reports as the President or Congress may request.

SEC. 2. Pending the final and complete withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines, there shall be a Resident Commissioner of the Philippines to the United States who shall be appointed by the President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines with the consent of the Commission on Appointments. The powers and duties of the Resident Commissioner shall be as provided in section seven, paragraph five of Public Act Numbered One hundred and twenty-seven of the Congress of the United States, approved March twenty-four, nineteen hundred and thirty-four, together with such other duties as the National Assembly may determine. The qualifications, compensation, and expenses of the Resident Commissioner shall be fixed by law.

SEC. 3. All other provisions of Public Act Numbered One hundred and twenty-seven of the Congress of the United States, approved March twenty-four, nineteen hundred and thirty-four, applicable to the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines are hereby made a part of this Ordinance as if such provisions were expressly inserted herein.

PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT SHAKING HANDS WITH SENATE PRESIDENT MANUEL L. QUEZON UPON THE LATTER'S ARRIVAL AT THE WHITE HOUSE IN WASHINGTON, D.C., WHEN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES WAS SUBMITTED FOR THE APPROVAL OF THE U.S. PRESIDENT. SECRETARY OF WAR GEORGE H. DERN IS SEEN IN THIS MEMORABLE MEETING OF THE TWO LEADERS. (1935)

President Roosevelt's Certification of the Constitution • of the Philippines

THE WHITE HOUSE

March 23, 1935

TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS:

The foregoing proposed Constitution of the Philippines, with ordinance appended thereto, having been submitted to me on March 18, 1935, I certify that the same conforms substantially with the provisions of the Act of Congress approved March 24, 1934 (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 48, pp. 456-465).

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

President Roosevelt's Message to Congress Certifying The Constitution of the Philippines

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I have pleasure in informing the Congress that I have today certified to the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands that the proposed Constitution of the Philippines as adopted by the Philippine Constitutional Convention conforms substantially with the provisions of the Act of Congress approved March 24, 1934 (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 48, pp. 456-465).

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 23, 1935.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SIGNING THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES (MARCH 23, 1935)

TENTH PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE

SPECIAL SESSION

H. NO. 1601

[No. 4200]

AN ACT TO SUBMIT TO THE FILIPINO PEOPLE, FOR RATIFICATION OR REJECTION, THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES WITH THE ORDINANCE APPENDED THERETO, TO APPROPRIATE THEREFOR, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Philippines in Legislature assembled and by the authority of the same:

SECTION 1. The Constitution of the Philippines with the Ordinance appended thereto, approved by the Philippine Constitutional Convention on February eight, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and certified by the President of the United States on March twenty-three, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, to conform substantially with the provisions of the Act of Congress of March twenty-four, nineteen hundred and thirty-four (being Act numbered One hundred twenty-seven of the Seventy-third Congress of the United States) is hereby submitted to the people of the Philippine Islands, for ratification or rejection, and for this purpose registered qualified voters shall vote either for the ratification or the rejection of said Constitution, with the Ordinance appended thereto, in an election to be held on Tuesday, May fourteen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Said Constitution, with the Ordinance appended thereto, shall be published in the Official Gazette, in English and in Spanish, for three consecutive issues at least fifteen days prior to said election, and a printed copy of said Constitution, with the Ordinance appended thereto, shall be posted in a conspicuous place in each municipal and provincial government office building and each polling place not later than the twenty-second day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and shall remain posted therein continuously until after the termination of the election. At least ten copies of this Constitution, with the Ordinance appended thereto, in English and in Spanish, shall be kept at each polling place available for examination by the qualified electors during election day. Whenever practicable, copies in the principal local dialects as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior shall also be kept in each polling place.

SEC. 2. The provisions of the Election Law regarding the holding of special elections, insofar as they are not inconsistent herewith, are hereby declared applicable to the election provided for in this Act. The watchers shall be appointed by the political parties, branches or fractions thereof, or political groups which have polled votes in the preceding general election in each municipality at the rate of two watchers for each such party, branch or fraction thereof or political group. Acts and omissions penalized by the Election Law shall, if committed during the holding of this election or in connection therewith, be punished with the penalties prescribed by said law.

SEC. 3. In specially organized provinces, whenever necessary, the provincial boards shall, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, provide for the formation of election precincts in every municipality by municipal district, shall designate the proper polling places, and shall appoint election inspectors and poll clerks with their respective substitutes.

SEC. 4. The existing boards of election inspectors shall meet for the registration of new voters and revision of the list of voters for the purposes of this Act, on the twenty-second and twenty-third days of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, between the hours of eight in the morning and five in the afternoon.

SEC. 5. All judicial proceedings for the inclusion or exclusion of electors shall be filed not later than the thirtieth day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-five and shall be finally decided on or before the ninth day of May, nineteen hundred and thirty-five. The board of election inspectors shall hold its last meeting on May eleven, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, for the purpose specified in section four hundred and thirty-nine of the Election Law.

SEC. 6. The ballots to be used in the election shall be printed in English and in Spanish and shall conform to the following form:

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES

with the Ordinance appended thereto, approved by the Constitutional Convention on February 8, 1935, and certified by the President of the United States on March 23, 1935, to conform substantially with the provisions of the Act of Congress of March 24, 1934, known as the Tydings-McDuffie Act (being Act No. 127 of the 73rd Congress of the United States), is submitted in this election to the People of the Philippine Islands, for ratification or rejection, by virtue of the provisions of section 4 of said Act, the pertinent portions of which read as follows:

"After the President of the United States has certified that the Constitution conforms with the provisions of this Act, it shall be submitted to the People of the Philippine Islands for their ratification or rejection at an election to be held within four months after the date of such certification, on a date to be fixed by the Philippine Legislature, at which election the qualified voters of the Philippine Islands shall have an opportunity to vote directly for or against the proposed Constitution and Ordinances appended thereto, * * *. If a majority of the votes cast shall be for the Constitution, such vote shall be deemed an expression of the will of the People of the Philippine Islands in favor of the Philippine independence, * * *. If a majority of the votes cast are against the Constitution, the existing Government of the Philippine Islands shall continue without regard to the provisions of this Act."

To vote for the ratification of the Constitution with the Ordinance appended thereto, write the word "YES" in the blank space after the question; to vote for the rejection thereof write the word "NO."

Do you vote for the ratification of the Constitution of the Philippines, with the Ordinance appended thereto?

¿Vote Ud. en favor de la ratificación de la Constitución de Filipinas, con la Ordenanza adscrita a la misma?

SEC. 7. The boards of inspectors shall prepare only four copies of the returns of the election in their respective polling places on a form to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior. One copy shall be deposited in the ballot box for the valid ballots and the three copies shall be delivered to the proper municipal treasurer, who shall immediately forward, by registered mail, one copy to the Secretary of the Senate, one copy to the Secretary of the House of Representatives and the other copy to the Secretary of the Interior. The Bureau of Posts shall accept and transmit without delay and free of charge all returns of the election and any official report or telegram connected therewith.

SEC. 8. Within thirty days after the election, the presiding officers of both Houses of the Philippine Legislature shall request the Governor-General to call the Legislature in special session for the purpose of canvassing the returns and certifying the result thereof to the Governor-General. Such certification shall include a statement of the votes cast, and a copy of said Constitution with the Ordinance appended thereto.

SEC. 9. The sum of three hundred and fifty thousand pesos or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Insular Treasury not otherwise appropriated for the payment subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the expenses incurred in connection with the holding of the election provided for in this Act, and for the expenses necessary for the printing, publication, posting and free distribution of five hundred thousand copies of the Constitution with the ordinance appended thereto in English and in Spanish and, whenever practicable, in the principal local dialects. Each election inspector and poll clerk shall receive two pesos for each day of actual service rendered by him.

SEC. 10. This Act shall take effect upon its approval.

Approved, April 8, 1935.

Formation of Political Parties.—Political parties never existed in the Philippines prior to American occupation of the islands. In 1899, however, during the war with the United States, the revolutionists who favored the acceptance of American sovereignty helped General Otis in pacifying the country. Hence they were called the "Pacíficos".

But Apolinario Mabini and his followers demanded the recognition of the independence of the Philippines at all cost and proclaimed a policy of independence or death. Mabini regained his power over the deputies and was elected President of the Malolos Congress and Minister of Foreign Affairs, with Teodoro Sandiko as Minister of War; General Mariano Trias, Minister of Finance; and Gregorio Gonzaga, Minister of Public Works. Because of their warlike attitude, they were called the "Irreconcilables".

The irreconcilable Filipino patriots who refused to submit to American sovereignty, thirty-two in all, were ordered deported to the Island of Guam on January 7, 1901. Among these were Apolinario Mabini, Artemio Ricarte, Pio del Pilar, Maximo Hizon, Pablo Ocampo, and Julian Gerona.

To suppress the agitation for Philippine Independence, a law on treason, insurrection, and sedition, known as Act No. 292, was enacted by the Philippine Commission on November 4, 1901, section 10 of which provides as follows:

"Sec. 10. Until it has been officially proclaimed that a state of war or insurrection against the authority or sovereignty of the United States no longer exists in the Philippine Islands it shall be unlawful for any person to advocate, orally or by writing or printing, or like methods, the independence of the Philippine Islands or their separation from the United States, whether by peaceable or forcible means, or to print, publish, or circulate any handbill, newspaper, or other publication advocating such independence or separation.

Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding two thousand dollars and imprisonment not exceeding one year."

The "Partido Federal" (Federal Party).—Some of the Filipino revolutionary leaders who stood for peace, or the so-called "Pacíficos", organized themselves into "Partido Federal". Their first meeting was held in a house on Calle Villalobos, in Quiapo, Manila, on December 23, 1900, under the chairmanship of Florentino Torres, who later became an associate justice of the Supreme Court. Among the organizers were Cayetano Arellano, T. G. del Rosario, and Trinidad H. Pardo de Tavera, who was elected president of said party.

The objects of this political party, according to its platform, were to bring about peace under the sovereignty of the United States, to work for the establishment of a liberal, democratic and representative government for the Philippines, free elementary education, complete separation of church and state, freedom of worship, individual rights, civil liberties, guarantees of person, property and domicile, a militia, and, finally, to prepare the way for the admission of the Archipelago, as a state to the American Union.

Through the activities of the Federal Party a better understanding between Americans and Filipinos was arrived at. The wise counsel of individual members of the party aided the second Philippine Commission. But because of the adoption of a resolution to the effect that necessary steps would be taken for the annexation of the Philippines to the United States, the Federal Party lost the support of the nationalists who believed in the ultimate independence of the Philippines, though it remained the party in power for some time during the early days of American administration in the islands.

The "Partido Conservador" (Conservative Party).—Being opposed to the annexationist plank of the Federal Party, a new party known as "Partido Conservador", was formed in February, 1901, by some Filipino leaders, among them were Macario Adriatico, Gregorio Singian, Francisco Ortigas, Juan Miciano, Julian Moreno Lacalle, Enrique Barrera, and Eusebio Orense. This party stood also for co-operation with the American administration, separation of church and state, an autonomous representative government for the Islands, and autonomous municipal and provincial governments. But they could not advocate Philippine independence which was prohibited by the Sedition Law or Act No. 292 herein referred to above.

The "Independista" Parties.—When war was officially declared to be ended on September 8, 1902, peace and prosperity led to the renewal of political activities. The Filipinos gave up the idea of resorting to arms, simply because they were beginning to realize the benevolent intentions of the American government as reiterated by President William McKinley in his instructions to the second Philippine Commission. The appointment of a Filipino in the person of Cayetano Arellano, of Orion, Bataan, to preside the supreme court of the Philippine Islands and of five other distinguished Filipino lawyers as associate justices of said high tribunal, namely, Manuel Araullo, Gregorio Araneta, Raymundo Melliza, Ambrosio Rianzares Bautista, and Julio Llorente, in the early days of American occupation, convinced the leaders of the good policy of the American people to prepare the Filipinos for self-government. So when the war ceased and the Filipinos have shown sign of their loyalty and allegiance to the United States, the Philippine Bill or Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, was enacted, providing for the election of the assemblymen or deputies to the Philippine Assembly two years after the taking of the census. Upon certification by the Philippine Commission that general peace had prevailed in the country since the taking of Census in 1903, the ban against the formation of nationalist political parties was lifted in 1906. Consequently, the nationalists who were opposed to the "Partido Federal" organized their own political parties, namely,

The "Partido Independista Inmediatista", which favored immediate independence;

The "Partido Urgentista", which urgently demanded independence; and

The "Comité de la Union Nacional", which was composed of the conservative nationalists.

In 1907, the Comité de la Union Nacional and the Partido Urgentista were merged under the name "Unión Nacionalista". Later in the same year, the two parties, Partido Independista Inmediatista and the Unión Nacionalista, were fused under the name "Partido Nacionalista".

Reorganization of the Partido Federal.—Seeing that the people were generally in favor of the ultimate separation from the United States, the leaders of the "Partido Federal" revised their platform on May 21, 1905, abandoning the "annexationist" plank and advocating economic and cultural progress as a preparatory step for Philippine independence. On the second day of January, 1907, in another convention, the party changed its name to that of "Partido Nacional Progresista", or National Progressive Party.

In the election for deputies to the first Philippine Assembly held on July 30, 1907, the Partido Nacionalista won 59 seats, and the Partido Progresista, 16 seats. The rest of the seats, or 5, were filled by non-partisan or independent candidates. Because of their "Independence" plank, the Partido Nacionalista, of which the "Colectivistas", the "Unipersonalistas", the "Coalicionistas", the "Consolidados", the "Pros" and the "Antis", were offsprings, has since 1907 been in continuous control of the Philippine Legislature up to the establishment of the new Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, and many people predict that it may remain so for at least five or more years if no stronger opposition party is organized between now and 1941.

The "Partido Demócrata" or Democratic Party.—Alleging that the leaders of the "Partido Nacionalista" were not sincere in their plea for immediate, complete and absolute independence, because of their failure to support the Clarke Amendment to the so-called Jones Bill No. 1 which the American Senate passed in 1916, authorizing the President of the United States to recognize the independence of the Philippines within four years after the approval of the law, a third party, known as the "Partido Tercerista", was organized by prominent political leaders who seceded from the two major parties—Nacionalista and Progresista—in the general elections of 1916. Two years later, the "Partido Progresista" and the "Partido Tercerista" were fused under the name "Partido Demócrata" (Democratic Party) under the leadership of Judge Juan Sumulong and Senator Teodoro Sandiko. Among the organizers of this party were a number of Filipino ex-generals, Tomás Mascarado, Pio del Pilar, Daniel Tirona, Juan Cailles, Pio Valenzuela, Jose Alejandrino and Antonio Montenegro, and prominent politicians, newspapermen, professionals, businessmen, and others, namely, Ruperto Montinola, Eulogio Rodriguez, Mariano Melendres, Vicente Sotto, José Padilla, Claro M. Recto, Antonio Llamas, Pedro F. Espiritu, Alfonso E. Mendoza, Emiliano Tria Tirona, Gerónimo Santiago, Gregorio Perfecto, Pedro Gil, Felipe Tempongko, and many others.

In the general elections of 1922, the Democratas of Manila won all the elective posts against the Nacionalistas-Unipersonalistas and Colectivistas. But Quezon and Osmeña lost no time in reuniting their two divided forces through the special election in the fourth senatorial district comprising Manila, Rizal, Laguna and Bataan, where they created a national issue against Governor-General Wood and the Democrata Party by presenting former Mayor Ramón J. Fernandez, clad in native suit or barong tagalog as "Candidate of Juan de la Cruz" for Senator of said district, against Judge Juan Sumulong, of the Democrata Party, as "Candidate of Governor Wood", who they pictured as highly inimical to Philippine independence and as "Champion" of American imperialism. Thus, a great number of the Filipino people was made to believe that the "fusion" of the Colectivista Party and the Unipersonalista Party into the so-called "Coalition" was imperative and essential to save the national prestige of the Filipino leaders against the alleged usurpation of powers by the American governor-general, and later on the leaders of the Democrata Party joined the so-called Supreme National Council which the then Senate President Quezon and Speaker Manuel Roxas organized in the early part of 1926, apparently, to strengthen the position of the Filipino participation in the government, but politically, the intention behind said political alliance was no other than to weaken the prestige of the opposition party during the administration of Governor Wood. So after said governor died in 1927 and a new governor-general came to succeed him in 1928, the two Nacionalista leaders—Quezon and Osmeña—reorganized their party into the so-called "Partido Nacionalista Consolidado", with the result that the Supreme National Council was allowed to die a natural death, and, three years later, the Democrata Party was dissolved by the national convention held at the Palma de Mallorca Hotel in Manila under the chairmanship of ex-Representative Claro M. Recto, then acting president of said party. But under the leadership of former Representative Gregorio Perfecto, the Democrata Party was given a new lease on life as an opposition party until same was split into the so-called "Pros" and "Antis" in 1933, and, a year and a half later, said party was completely absorbed by the Nacionalista Party, when the "Pros" and the "Antis" formed the "Coalition" a few months before the first commonwealth election in 1935.

Other Opposition Parties. Having lost their faith in the national leaders or in the leaders of the two major political parties in the islands, some of the labor leaders organized their own political factions. These small opposition groups were known as the "Partido Obrero," founded by Crisanto Evangelista, in 1925; the "Partido Independista Popular," headed by former Representative Miguel R. Cornejo, in 1926; the "Partido Liberal," founded about the same year by Atty. Prudencio A. Remigio; the "Partido Radical," organized in 1928 by former Representative Alfonso E. Mendoza; and other minor opposition parties which were formed thereafter. All of these parties were in favor of immediate, complete and absolute independence of the Philippines.

In 1930, the "Partido Comunista" was organized in lieu of the "Partido Obrero," under the leadership of Antonio D. Ora and Crisanto Evangelista with the cooperation of other local communists. During the same year, the "Sakdal," a weekly paper in Tagalog, which made important revelations of the truths about the Nacionalista party, was founded by Benigno Ramos, former employee of the Philippine Senate, who advocated non-payment of cedula taxes and abandonment of popular suffrage as a means, he said, to obtain Filipino freedom. In 1933, however, the same advocate of non-election and non-cooperation with the government organized a political party under the name "Partido Sakdalista," which presented its candidates in the general elections of 1934 and won three seats in the House of Representatives, not to mention other offices, because of the support given by the people to its "immediate-independence-without-taxation" plank, which its leaders launched to the public. Ramos and his campaign orators told the people that, if given a chance to win even a legislative seat in that election, they would get independence within eighteen months, or before December 31, 1935; but what the leaders of the Sakdalista Party did was to stage a revolt in May, 1935, which caused the horrible death of not less than sixty of their faithful followers from the bullets of the Constabularymen. The rest of the rebels and ring-leaders were prosecuted for sedition and sentenced to jail, save those who were found innocent of the crime charged.

Prior to the Sakdalista revolt, it may be remembered, the discontented masses had already shown signs of animosity in the so-called Kolorum uprising in Tayug, the Jolo massacre, the Lanao trouble, the Tanguan plot, and other minor outbreaks, for they believed that the only way to end their sufferings, miseries and privations, and to stop election frauds, land-grabbing, political persecutions, and other forms of social and political injustices was to be free and independent, for then the American forces would necessarily be withdrawn from the islands and the Filipino leaders in the government who used to depend upon American protection for the realization of their selfish ambition would be more careful in discharging their official duties and in observing the laws and ordinances with all fairness and justice to the inhabitants, regardless of nationality and social or political rank. And, in case of foreign invasion or aggression, the Filipinos would learn how to defend their country and their own interests, for in that way alone could they feel the grave responsibilities of a free and independent nation.

Acting upon that belief, Miguel R. Cornejo, founder and president of the "Filipinos Unidos" and of the "Kapatirang Demokrata" (Democratic Fraternity), upon noticing the change of front of his colleagues in the Democrata Party, resigned from said organization and formed the "Partido Independista Popular" referred to herein above, with the following platform, which was published for the first time in 1927:

"PLATFORM"

For the attainment of our early Independence, this party has adopted the following platform, subject, of course, to changes that the National Convention of delegates may deem fit to make:

1. National Union;
 2. National Defense;
 3. National Language;
 4. Economic Development;
 5. Improvement of Labor conditions; and
 6. Re-organization of the present system of Government:
- (a) To effect Economy and Efficiency;
 - (b) To suppress grafts, abuse of power, irregularities, and anomalies in the government service;
 - (c) To give municipal governments ample autonomy in the conduct of their local affairs;
 - (d) To re-organize the justice of the peace courts throughout the Philippine Islands;

The "Partido Independista Popular" was changed to "Philippine Fascists" in April, 1933, and again to "Loyal Advocates of Philippine Independence", or briefly "LAPI",—a Tagalog term meaning Fascism, which organization consistently advocates Philippine independence supported by a strong Philippine army and navy which can be maintained from the natural and economic resources of the country which should be preserved at all cost for the prosperity and happiness of the Filipino people.

The Division of the major political parties into the so-called "Pros" and "Antis".—Because of the split in 1933 between the two chief leaders of the Nacionalista Party into two opposite camps, namely, the Partido Nacionalista Consolidado, otherwise known as "Antis", and the Partido Nacionalista Pro-Independencia, otherwise known as "Pros", the Partido Democrata and other opposition parties and civic organizations were also divided into "Antis" and "Pros", with the exception of the Partido Comunista, which was wholly against the present form of government, and the Partido Sakdalista, founded in 1933, which stood solidly for the rejection of the Hare-Hawes-Cutting Law, while the Partido Independista Popular was reorganized into "Philippine Fascists" with a view to accepting any kind of law that would grant immediate Philippine independence regardless of all kinds of restrictions. The Philippine Fascists, in other words, was the revival or continuation of the "Filipinos Unidos" which was originally organized as a Socialist Party in 1921.

The Coalition of the "Pros" and "Antis".—As the national issue in the general elections of 1934 was the acceptance or the rejection of the Hare-Hawes-Cutting Law, the rejectionists or the "Antis" won a great majority of the seats in the Philippine Legislature as well as in the provincial and municipal governments. The advocates of the independence act or "Pros" occupied the second place. All other candidates not affiliated with the "Pros" and "Antis" were defeated, with the exception of two Sakdalistas from Laguna and one from Tayabas who won their seats in the lower house.

As one-half of the old Democrata Party became affiliated with the Partido Nacionalista Consolidado or "Antis" under the leadership of Senate President Quezon, and the other half of said opposition party joined the Partido Nacionalista Pro-Independencia or "Pros" under Senator Osmeña, and seeing that all the elective posts were filled by their men, the two presidents of the big political groups, having succeeded to win the Democrata Party to their sides, thought it wise to declare that their respective parties—the "An-tis" and the "Pros"—should not mention any party affiliation in the election for Delegates to the Constitutional Assembly, inasmuch as both parties had accepted the Tydings-McDuffie Independence Act. This step on the part of the two Leaders—Quezon and Osmeña,—led to the election of delegates from either party. And as a next wise political step said leaders had taken to win the confidence of the people, in general, and of the Democrata followers, in particular, was their joint support of the election of Senator Claro M. Recto to the presidency of the Constitutional Assembly, and that of Delegate Ruperto Montinola and of Delegate Teodoro Sandiko to the positions of first vice president and second vice president of the convention, respectively. So the responsibilities of the Constitutional Convention which framed the Constitution of the Philippines were placed in the hands of the Democrata leaders who were once their bitter political enemies. But the majority of the members of the constitutional assembly was not Democrata but Nacionalista Consolidado and Democrata "Antis", and, as a matter of courtesy, Senate President Quezon's opinion on important provisions of the Constitution could not be overlooked. As a matter of fact Delegate Tomás Cabili from Lanao refused to sign said constitution, because he said that "it gives too much power in the executive department which might inspire the establishment of a dictatorial government, that it carries no provision for municipal or provincial autonomy, that it may encourage communism because of the allowance given to the government to appropriate and subdivide landed estates, that the safeguards provided against the acquisition of agricultural lands by foreigners are not sufficient, and that there was too much intervention from the outside, especially from President Quezon in the drafting of the Constitution."

When said Constitution was nearing its completion and before Senate President Quezon left for the United States of America in company with Senator Claro M. Recto, president of the Constitutional Convention, in the early part of 1935, the provincial governors at a special gathering held in Manila were told by the National Leader of his plan to prolong their term of office by postponing the elections for provincial and municipal offices until after the establishment of the new government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines. This policy of attraction no doubt induced the Democrata leaders, especially the Antis who were given high positions in the insular government, to support the move for the fusion of all "Antis", on one side, and that of all the "Pros", on the other, with a view to forming a Coalition as contemplated in the Election Law, or Act No. 4203, of the Philippine Legislature, approved July 23, 1935, which provides among other things as follows:

"WHEREAS, in accordance with section four of Act Numbered One hundred twenty-seven of the Seventy-third Congress of the United States, commonly known as Tydings-McDuffie Law, the Governor-General has issued a proclamation to the People of the Philippine Islands calling an election to be held on Tuesday, September seventeen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, for the purpose of electing the President and Vice President of the Philippines and the Members of the National Assembly, provided for in the Philippine Constitution;

"WHEREAS the existing Election Law does not contain any provisions for the election of said officers;

"WHEREAS the national political parties which contended during the last general election and which subsequently consolidated into two parties, to wit, the Nacionalista Democrático Party and the Nacionalista Demócrata Pro-Independencia Party, agreed on June sixteen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, to present joint candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the Philippines, with only one platform, and although said parties continue as separate and independent organizations, it is the sense of the Philippine Legislature that the holding of a free and orderly election will be best guaranteed and public confidence in the result thereof will be more firmly grounded, if any party or parties that may during the coming election (September 17, 1935) contend against said Coalition is given an opportunity to examine everything in connection with the holding of said election, without detriment to the principle of party government;"

The platform of the coalition herein referred to above is found in Senate President Quezon's Acceptance Speech, as follows:

SPEECH DELIVERED ON JULY 20, 1935

By the Hon. MANUEL L. QUEZON, accepting his nomination for President of the Philippines

"MR. CHAIRMAN, GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE, FELLOW-CITIZENS:

It is with a profound sense of gratitude that I receive in the presence of this vast multitude the formal notification of my nomination for the Presidency of the Commonwealth. A party nomination for the highest office within the gift of the people is in itself a great distinction, but when the nomination comes under such auspicious circumstances as have attended that which is now proffered to me, I regard it as the greatest honor that can be accorded to any public man short alone of his actual election to the Presidency.

Ever since the approval and acceptance of the Independence Act there has been growing among the people a feeling of deepest concern over the difficult problems and impending responsibilities which will confront us upon the inauguration of the Commonwealth. While the Constitutional Convention was in session, partly fostered by the spirit of national solidarity exhibited by the members of that body, the anxiety to prepare the country adequately to meet these problems and responsibilities became articulate in an increasingly popular demand for national unity, that political parties give pause to partisan strife, that the leaders of the vital forces of the nation join in their efforts for the attainment of the common goal, and that the entire country resolve to support loyally the man who may be entrusted with the national leadership so that through the Government of the Commonwealth the foundations of the future Philippine Republic may be solidly and firmly established.

Resolutions were passed by municipal councils as well as by civic and social organizations, including labor unions, demanding a coalition of the two great political parties as the most practical means of obtaining this unity of effort. Before the Constitutional Convention adjourned the cry of national unity was taken up by the League of Provincial Governors. Without regard to party affiliation and voicing the prevailing sentiment in their respective provinces, these spokesmen of our local governments unanimously joined in the general appeal for unity.

Lastly, prominent Filipino business men, professionals and leaders in agriculture, industry and labor formally submitted to the directorate of the two political parties a concrete proposal that the two parties nominate jointly the candidates for President and Vice President and thus insure the cooperation of all the vital forces of the nation during the first and trying years of the Commonwealth. When the two parties held their respective national conventions they readily responded to this popular clamor and forthwith agreed to form a coalition and to nominate the same candidates for President and Vice President.

Neither Senator Osmeña nor I sought these nominations. We made no preconvention campaign nor did we have any desire to secure them. We entered public life about the same time thirty years ago both pledged to the cause of independence. The vicissitudes which have been our lot during these years are not now to be recounted, but as I look back upon our joint efforts in the attainment of the goal which we set out before us I feel happy that at the end of the long struggle we can face our people standing on the same platform, our pledge fulfilled, our mutual friendship and regard enhanced, and, still enjoying, I hope, their continued confidence and support.

With the approval of the Independence Act and its acceptance by the country we believed that our extended public service could at last come to an end. We would have been content as private citizens to lend our unstinted support to the new Government. But it seems that our fellow-citizens have once again chosen to place upon our shoulders the new responsibility of organizing the Commonwealth and leading the nation during the early years of its existence. The nomination that has been proffered to us attains the category of a call to duty which no public-spirited citizen may evade or disregard. I, therefore, Mr. Chairman, make public announcement that I accept the nomination for the Presidency which has been tendered to me, deeming it my bounden duty to do so, and I accept it with the most profound sense of the responsibility that it entails and the deepest feeling of gratitude.

Having been nominated under the circumstances I have mentioned, I can not afford to speak in uncertain terms. The need of the hour is for fixed orientation, clear statement of policies, and a definition of the national purposes. In the course of the present campaign I shall have opportunity to discuss all important questions before the country. For the present I have to limit myself to a few of them.

THE PLATFORM

The coalition platform meets with my wholehearted approval. I took part in the drafting of that document and I make my own every commitment contained therein.

THE CONSTITUTION

I look upon the Constitution of the Philippines as the expressions of the sovereignty and of the aggregate will of the Filipino people. I shall abide by its provisions. I shall uphold the democratic principle underlying the institutions that it establishes. I am opposed to a dictatorship. I maintain that no man who believes in a dictatorship can with safety be entrusted with the reins of executive power under our Constitution. Democracy can only survive if those at the helm of the Government believe in the people's right to rule and have faith in their inherent capacity to decide rightly important public questions.

I will hold inviolate and will defend to the utmost the individual rights and liberties. I shall safeguard free speech, the freedom of the press, and the equality of every man before the law however poor or ignorant. I shall insure for every citizen of the Philippines, from Luzon to Mindanao and Sulu, the right to worship God as his own conscience dictates.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE COMMONWEALTH

We are entering a new era. We are on the threshold of free nationhood. The Government of the Commonwealth that we shall establish derives its powers from a constitution approved by the people themselves. It may truly be said that it is a government of our creation to be administered for our own welfare.

Except in a few specified cases, it will be free from American control in the conduct of domestic affairs. Only in our foreign relations do we remain subject to American supervision, and this because of the continuing responsibility of the United States to protect and defend the Islands from foreign aggression during the life of the Commonwealth. Hence, the Government will be, in fact if not in name, an independent government under the protection of the United States.

The immediate task before us is to set up the new Government,—a task that will require all the foresight, the wisdom, and the courage of our people. Then we must adopt such measures as will insure the stability of our national economy, and provide for the honest and efficient administration of the affairs of government. Equally important is to make adequate provision for the defense of our country against external aggression or internal disorders.

I favor a simple and economical government, one in keeping with the limited resources of our country but which is capable of ministering to the needs of the nation.

I shall be unsparing in my efforts to carry out the mandate of the Constitution regarding the civil service. Merit and character alone will be the qualification for office or promotion. For the highest responsible posts I shall call on the most capable, honest and patriotic citizens, regardless of political affiliation or religious belief. This is no time for placing party considerations above the common weal. In fact, one of the main purposes of the coalition is to secure the cooperation and help of the best available men to insure the success of the Commonwealth. I shall tolerate neither corruption nor inefficiency in public office.

FINANCIAL POLICY

The financial stability of the Government depends upon our ability to keep expenses within our income. At the time when other governments are resorting to loans in order to meet their obligations we can take pride in the fact that we have been able to maintain a balanced budget. Under our Constitution the responsibility for maintaining a balanced budget falls mainly upon the executive. I pledge myself to maintain the credit of the Government and at all times to balance the budget and keep our finances in a sound condition.

I shall keep our present currency system in all its integrity and will allow no change that will affect its value. If new conditions should require such a change it will be done only after the most careful study and consultation with competent experts. For the present I can see no reason for any radical modification in our monetary system.

TAXATION

Irresponsible demagogues have tried to arouse in the hearts of our people the hope that under an independent Philippines there shall be no taxes except upon the rich. It is my duty to warn the credulous against such misrepresentation. Governments can be supported only through taxation. It is a primary duty of citizens to contribute to the support of the Government, but taxation that does not take into consideration the relative financial ability of the taxpayer is unjust. I favor a complete revision of our system of taxation with the best technical advice available. I advocate that the burdens of the State be equitably distributed in proportion to the means and possibilities of the taxpayer. We shall make a general reduction of the assessed value of real property in accordance with present prices.

PUBLIC WORKS

The so-called pork barrel system, as known in the United States and as sometimes practised in the Philippines, must definitely be discarded. It is a waste of public funds. I am in favor of continuing the building of roads and schools, in accordance with a carefully prepared plan to be followed systematically, in the order of their relative importance to the general public.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION

I stand by the educational policy enunciated in the Constitution. The principle underlying this policy is the training for useful, well-disciplined, self-sacrificing citizenship that draws its breath of life from Filipino patriotism. Our system of education should be revised so as to accomplish that aim still more effectively. The State is in duty bound to maintain a complete and adequate system of public education providing at least free public primary instruction and citizenship training to adult citizens.

My attention will be especially devoted to making it possible for every child to go to school. Adult citizenship training will be carried out in accordance with a broad and systematic plan. To the end that poverty may not prevent gifted young men and women from developing their talent, the Government should create the largest possible number of scholarships for them in all branches of learning. Our educational objective should fit in with our economic policy. I am for greater emphasis on vocational and agricultural training in the intermediate and high schools, but the instruction should always be in keeping with the economic conditions of each region and of the country as a whole.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

An independent judiciary administering justice without fear or favor promptly and impartially to rich and poor alike is the strongest bulwark of individual rights and the best guaranty against oppression and usurpation from any source. Equally important is the maintenance of the confidence of the people in the courts. I will appoint no man to the bench without having satisfied myself, after a thorough investigation, of his character and ability.

To strengthen the faith of the common people in our courts it is necessary that the utmost care be exerted in the selection of justice of the peace. These courts are often the only tribunals accessible to the larger portion of our population and it is essential that they be maintained worthy of their confidence. If the disinherited can not obtain redress of their grievances or vindication of their right in these courts, they have no further recourse, for the Courts of First Instance and the Supreme Court are often beyond their reach. By the impartiality and integrity of the justices of the peace, therefore, the judiciary of the Philippines is judged by the millions of our countrymen who live in the barrios and distant places. I pledge myself to do everything in my power to maintain these courts free from political or other extraneous influence and to appoint thereto only men of proven ability and integrity and of the broadest human sympathies.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The welfare of the people should be the concern of the Government. The helpless and the needy, the jobless as well as the workers in the factories and in the field have a claim upon the factories and in the field have a claim upon the Government to safeguard their health and well-being. The contentment of the masses is the first insurance against social and political disorders. It is the duty of the Government to protect the working men against abuses and exploitation to secure to them fair wages and reasonable return for their labor.

Let us beware of men who deliberately, for political or selfish aims, stir up discontent among the masses. They preach subversive doctrines, speak of evil and abuses that do not exist, or magnify those which often are inevitable in democracies. These men are the worse enemies of society, more dangerous to the community than ordinary criminals. They have no sympathy for the people, but are mere self-seekers, intent only in securing either pecuniary or political advantage for themselves. If as a result of their preachings disorders occur, they cowardly disclaim all responsibility for that which none other than themselves had brought about. He who tries to curry favor with the masses by appealing to the passions of the people, stirring up their prejudices, or capitalizing discontent or human suffering, is unworthy of public trust.

LANDED ESTATES

The ownership of big landed estates by corporations or absentee landlords have invariably caused discontent and unrest among the tenants or occupants of such estates. The discontent among the tenants of the friar lands contributed to the causes which led to the rebellion against Spain. Those friar lands have been acquired by the Government and sold in small lots but there are still a few large haciendas particularly in Luzon that are the hotbeds of discontent and unrest among their tenants. Not only for the sake of these tenants, but also in the interest of peace, every effort should be made to acquire these haciendas, at a fair and just price to be sold in small lots to the tenants.

There are complaints in certain places that the tenants are the victims of unfair practices on the part of their landlords. These abuses must be stopped and the tenant protected in his rights.

LABOR

Fortunately for our country, we have had no sharp cleavages between labor and capital. Strikes have been few and far-between, and they have never been long-drawn out or general. That we have so far been spared the extremities of class warfare, is no proof that we shall forever be exempt. Our good fortune should rather teach us to seek the means to preserve the country against such conflicts by the only method which experience has shown to be effective, namely, by taking steps designed to prevent the exploitation and oppression of the working men and thus assure their happiness and contentment.

Filipino laborers, compared to those of other oriental countries, receive higher wages and are much better protected in their rights by legislation. We have enacted many laws protecting labor. In all earnestness, however, I must say that we must go further in this direction. The experience of centuries shows that the one sure way to protect society against class war is to secure to wage-earners their due.

I am against communism. I am a firm believer in the institution of private property. I contend, however, that whenever property rights come in conflict with human rights, the former should yield to the latter.

If we would preserve the institution of private property, we must hold fast to this principle, in the determination of conflicting rights between man and man. It is thus that we may draw the line between the rights of labor and capital and erect an economic structure based on the principle that human life is the measure of all other values, that considerations of possession and profit must give way to the supremacy of human existence.

CAPITAL

A change in the political status of a country always gives rise to fear and misgivings. Not only among Americans and foreigners, but even among a few Filipinos, the impending political changes have caused anxiety as to the future.

There is no justification for these fears. I give assurance that peace, order, law and justice will reign supreme under the Commonwealth, and that the rights of foreigners and nationals alike will be safeguarded. Existing investments, whether foreign or national, will receive every inducement to stay, and outside capital will be welcomed. We especially desire that new American capital should come and help in the development of the country.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

I believe in the efficacy of the instrumentalities of peace, such as the League of Nations or treaties of neutrality. In due time we should apply for admission to the League and urge the negotiation of a multilateral treaty for the neutralization of the Philippines. However, we cannot ignore present-day realities. We cannot rely exclusively on these implements of peace for our national defense.

I favor preparedness for national defense. We cannot afford to have nor do I approve of, a large standing army or costly military establishments, but we must have a regular army of sufficient size for our requirements and a trained citizenry ready to be drafted into service in any emergency. For the proper planning of our defenses and the organization and training of our regular and citizen army I shall secure the best expert advice.

OUR RELATIONS WITH AMERICA

It should be our constant endeavor to maintain the most friendly relations and closest collaboration with the United States. We owe much to America and we are grateful to her. Our present economy is tied up with the free American market. Many of our industries depend for their existence on our reciprocal free trade relations with the United States and we should try to maintain these trade relations, if possible, even after independence. I shall spare no effort to obtain the elimination of the export tax provided in the Independence Law. I shall work for the repeal of the excise tax on coconut oil. I shall endeavor to take such action as may be required to place our trade relations with the United States on a truly reciprocal basis, so that they may be continued after independence for the mutual advantage of both countries.

FOREIGN RELATIONS

As already stated, our foreign relations will be under the control and supervision of the United States during the Commonwealth; but there is nothing in the Independence Act which prevents the Commonwealth from beginning to lay the foundation for our future relations with foreign nations. Indeed, the period of transition having been provided to give to the Filipino people time to prepare themselves for the responsibilities of an independent government, it can be rightly assumed that the United States meant to give us the opportunity, under the Commonwealth, of initiating both political as well as trade relations with other countries, subject to its supervision and control.

We shall request the State Department at Washington to permit the Commonwealth to send men as attaches to American legations or embassies as well as to American consulates in order that these men may acquire the knowledge and experience in the diplomatic service and provide our government with needed information concerning foreign trade.

It will be necessary and to our advantage besides to win the good-will of, and maintain friendly relations with, other nations. But to accomplish this aim, mere protestations of good purposes are not enough. We must deal fairly with all nations and respect their rights. We must secure to every foreigner who lives with us full protection of our laws. His life, his property, must be as safe among us as they are in his own hands.

During the transition period we shall endeavor to find new markets for our products so that if and when the market of the United States shall no longer be open to us, except on a competitive basis, we may not be left without outlet for our products.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE

The question of Philippine Independence has been settled. The Independence Law sets the day for independence and prescribes the process leading to its consummation. We accepted the Independence Law, we have approved a Constitution pursuant to its provisions, and the people by ratifying it with practical unanimity have agreed to the grant of independence under the terms and conditions prescribed by the Congress. Independence, therefore, is no longer an issue either in the United States or in the Philippines. Insofar as the terms and conditions of independence are concerned, we made it plain when we accepted the Independence Law that we reserved the right to petition Congress for their modification with a view to making them less burdensome for our people and more adapted to the attainment of the purpose for which Congress intended them.

We consider the economic provisions of the Independence Law not entirely fair to the Philippines. We regard legislation recently passed by Congress imposing greater restrictions on our free imports to the United States or authorizing the collection of exorbitant taxes on some of our products sold in that country, not only discriminatory, but a virtual violation of the solemn covenant between the two countries. We shall exert every effort to secure the repeal of those discriminatory measures and to obtain amendments to the Independence Law looking to a more equitable trade arrangement between the United States and the Philippines during the Commonwealth.

In relation to the transition period, the Congress of the United States fixed the term of ten years considering it necessary to allow the Philippines gradually to adjust their national economy to the conditions which will obtain when independence should eventuate and to permit the Filipinos to prepare themselves adequately for the responsibilities of independent nationhood. It was, therefore, chiefly for the benefit of the Philippines rather than of the United States that the intermediate period of ten years was fixed. While there may be differences of opinion as to whether this period is too long or too short, all must agree that, if our trade relations with the United States during the Commonwealth should prove more injurious to our country than they would under complete independence, the Philippines would then do well to hasten the date of separation from America. This fact will not be revealed to us until after the first years of the Commonwealth and we have known the result of the economic conference between representatives of the United States and the Philippines which, I trust, will be called by the President of the United States at an early date.

Meanwhile, I consider it a most disturbing influence which will retard our work of economic readjustment and reconstruction, for anyone to advocate now the shortening of the transition period. What the country direly needs to-day is a period of stability and business confidence so that we may proceed unhampered in the task of erecting our new Government and building up the national economy to increase the wealth of the nation, promote commerce, agriculture, industry; improve the condition of our wage-earners, and create economic opportunities for all our citizens. We need to give capital reasonable certainty as to those conditions which affect investment; we need to assure the industries that are dependent upon the free American market that no radical changes will take place which will bring about a sudden loss of the market on which they depend; we need above all to provide economic security for the masses of our people which can only be accomplished through the maintenance of stable business conditions.

I yield to no one in my fervent desire to see the Philippines independent as soon as possible, but I cannot close my eyes to the fact that a difference of a few years may mean a great deal to the well-being of our people and the permanence of our national liberty. Besides, we should not be deluded into believing that it is possible for anyone at this time to obtain from Congress the shortening of the transition period. All the pleas that may now be submitted in support of this action had already been considered and passed upon by that body. No new reason can be advanced that had not been already submitted. Therefore making an issue of the shortening of the transition period is unfair to our people and most injurious to their interests.

I am anxious to see our independence established at the earliest possible date. I look upon it as the most precious reward for the many years of ceaseless efforts that I have spent in its quest. I pledge myself anew resolutely to take all the necessary steps leading to the advent of independence, and to do everything in my power to make the Philippine Republic strong and enduring, and the blessings of liberty not only the cherished possession of this generation but the priceless heritage of the Filipino people for all time."

The "Partido Socialista Nacional".—During the absence of Senate President Quezon and Senator Recto, who were then in Washington, D.C., to submit the Constitution of the Philippines for the approval of President Roosevelt, the leaders of General Emilio Aguinaldo began to mobilize their followers for the formation of a political group. Among the first leaders of the movement were former city councilors Geronimo Santiago and Segundo Agustin who organized the so-called "Coalición del Pueblo" against the coalition of the two national political parties. Later on a general meeting was held at the Banahaw Restaurant on calle Carriedo for the purpose of discussing the organization of a new opposition party, and the executive committee appointed by the organizers at said meeting of which the "Philippine Fascists" organization was a member, held its succeeding assemblies at the Fascist headquarters on Calle R. Hidalgo, in Manila, where the "Partido Socialista Nacional" was formally organized with former Senator Emiliano Tirona as president and chief campaign manager. The Campaign Headquarters of this party was established in the Yangco Building at Muelle de la Industria in San Nicolas where Gen. Aguinaldo had his office as president of the "Asociación de los Veteranos de la Revolución."

At a banquet given in honor of General Aguinaldo at the Manila Grand Opera House in May, 1935, Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, founder and supreme head of the Philippine Independent Church, promised to support the candidacy of the former president of the erstwhile Philippine Republic for the presidency of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, but two months later said bishop was chosen by his admirers as their official candidate for the same office, which event affected to a large measure the candidacy of General Aguinaldo.

The political platform of General Aguinaldo was drafted by him with the assistance of his advisers, among whom were Senator Tirona, Judge Julio Llorente, Judge Anastacio Teodoro, Delegate Sotto, Councilor Gerónimo Santiago, Atty. Rufo M. San Juan, and Atty. Mariano Laureola. Said platform was adopted as the official platform of the "Partido Socialista Nacional". This platform formed a part of Gen. Aguinaldo's acceptance speech delivered at Cavite, Cavite, on June 1, 1935, as follows:

AGUINALDO'S PLATFORM

Speech Delivered by General Emilio Aguinaldo on His Acceptance of the Candidacy for President of the Commonwealth

BROTHERS AND COUNTRYMEN:

I am filled on this occasion by deep emotion, the cause of which is that the honor of being a candidate for president of the Philippines is too great, as the responsibilities incumbent in such a high position are also heavy.

The mere thought of the colossal fight that is coming weakens me. Financially, I am in no position for an extensive and intensive political campaign. I do not occupy any privileged post from where I can give or promise appointments and spoils to those who will support me. Those who will accompany me in this battle will have to undergo great sacrifices and privations. Nevertheless, let us be inspired by the example of those heroes of '96 who, with the ground for bed and the sky for roof, and fruit for food, did not hesitate to fight for the cause of our liberty. And it is because all redemption presupposes sacrifices.

Why did I accept your offer? Had I refused, I would have ignored the voice of thousands of my countrymen who are at present in the clutches of hunger and misery, and whose laments awaken not the pity of those who are in power. While they are enjoying the delights of the feast, they should remember the underdogs to whom not even the crumbs are left.

IF I HAD STAYED HOME

If I should refuse to leave the peace of my home, I would have closed my eyes to the sufferings of our people whose farms are prostrate, whose trades are unprotected and whose industries are not given sufficient stimulus for development.

If I had not acceded to your petition, I would have turned my back to the complaints of thousands of my poor countrymen for whose children there is not sufficient room in the school where they may learn the most elementary knowledge of good citizenship; I would have ignored the protests of many government employees who are victims of injustices and prejudices, and whose merits are superseded by favoritism and sectionalism.

Had I remained in my refuge, I should have tolerated the continuous waste of the people's money in trips of recreation and political propaganda under the guise of official inspection tours; I should have allowed the vice of sending costly missions to the United States to continue without any beneficial result to the country; I should have tolerated the placing of heavier burdens on the tax-payers with a budget and salaries not adjusted to the exhausted resources of our people.

LONG HOUR OF SLEEPLESSNESS

In truth, I have passed long hours of sleeplessness before deciding on this step. I have been expecting that better men should realize that the supreme ideal of the people is being toyed with, and should head the movement to punish the guilty. Have you not observed the many occasions when independence was within our reach because the American people themselves, loving liberty as they do, were willing to give it to us, and, nevertheless, due to the maneuvers of those who have pledged themselves to secure freedom, it has been pushed beyond our reach?

Luxurious residences for certain high government officials in Baguio have just been constructed, where one may enjoy the cool climate at the cost of the public treasury, while thousands of laborers do not have even a shack where their children may stay protected from the inclemencies of the weather. Has anyone called upon to do so, raised his voice in protest? Only two newspapers have done so, and their voice was lost in the desert.

Where are the patriots, where are those who have sworn to serve the people's interest? Why are they silent? Why is it that instead of looking into the complaints of the people and telling the people what is going on, there is sepulchral silence in our political world? Is there, within that silence, a plot against the people's welfare? Is it because, in exchange for that silence and submission, there will be rewards in the form of fat salaried positions?

OLIGARCHY AND AUTOCRACY

I still have not lost the hope that those who have sworn to guard the public treasury, to check the excesses of those in power and denounce their abuses and extravagances will stay in their posts. Unfortunate is the country where power is monopolized by a single group, without any other group to stop its excesses. That country should intone a funeral dirge to democracy and above its remains shall arise, arrogant and challenging, the figure of oligarchy, of dictatorship, of tyranny and autocracy.

A country of patriots should not fear the existence of political parties. National unity is not secured by the fusion of parties. Within the variety of political hues, unity of action shall always arise majestically on the wings of patriotism, that magic force that unites wills and antagonistic hearts.

Can there be a greater national crisis in the United States than that which originated from the world war from 1914 to 1917? Nevertheless, the political parties of that country, the model of democracies, were not fused and worked together without a coalition to face that state of emergency. And thus the American people were able to localize the responsibility for the mistakes in national and international policies when the time to render accounts arrived, and were able to administer justice, withdrawing their confidence from the existing leadership.

WHERE ARE THE PROMISES?

Where are the promises that after the acceptance of the McDuffie-Tydings law, which was taken from HHC act, amendments would be sought and efforts would be exerted to shorten the transition period? Ah! In the drunkenness of the last electoral victory, these promises have been forgotten. Now they say it is untimely to ask for the shortening of the transition period. Although they do not dare to say so in public, for fear of losing the people's support in the polls, they now propose to prolong the transition period and even to perpetuate the commonwealth government through a protectorate which is incompatible with independence.

Ah! How the people allow themselves to be duped once again with comforting promises which are soon forgotten after an election victory; how some persons delight in wielding power from the sumptuous Malacañag palace; how the distribution of posts and spoils is being made to placate some and muzzle others. Good-bye to the improvement of the conditions of our masses; farewell independence, good-bye democracy!

I do not want to expose our people to desperation: I do not want my compatriots to lose their faith in the men who govern us and follow the footsteps of our brothers who had to sacrifice their lives in the recent disturbances. When our contemporary history is written, I do not want it recorded that in a country of 14,000,000 people there has been only one man, who for two decades and in spite of his shifty, doleful politics, which has been "pernicious to Democracy," has always merited the support of his fellow citizens, because no one has ever dared the risks of a struggle to overthrow his leadership.

NO ONE TO STAGE FIGHT

And since no one wants to do it, I, the last of your fellow citizens, without the power which political influence affords, without economic resources, have to hear the voice of the small sons of the people who clamor for a change of direction and leadership. I have to place myself on the side of those who thirst for justice, of those who are starving, of taxpayers who are crushed by weight of public burdens, to lead them in this specific revolution, going to the polls brandishing the pencil instead of the sword and the ballot in place of the cuirass, to do away so many injustices and impositions of an autocracy which has sunk the country in misery, which destroyed when it pleased to do so, our political organizations, has sowed discontent and ill-feeling among the masses and has scattered the seeds of Sakdalism, communism and rebellion.

Some of my friends tell me that I am risking my prestige, humble because it is mine, in this unequal fight. But, what matters the prestige of a man, in the face of the sufferings of his 14,000,000 countrymen? Of what value is to me my modest name if I shall have to continue living in a country where a man has to be in the good graces of the rulers in order to win recognition for his merits? Of what use is it to us to have our ears delighted by the chords of a national hymn that does not symbolize the glories of an emancipated country?

I have decided, then to risk the loss of my prestige, the quietude of home and all that I am, because I long for the happiness of our masses and for the early independence of my beloved people.

NO POLITICAL PARTY BEHIND

I do not have any political party behind me. My party is composed of the humble sons of the people, flattered during elections and forgotten after the triumph; it is composed of the thousands of unemployed who have neither rice nor medicine for their children; it is composed of taxpayers who pay their contributions punctually and see the money squandered; by those who cannot allow the servants of the people to enrich themselves at the expense of the people; those who ask a little education for their children and are denied it; those who want to see a just, clean and honest government in our country; those who want an early independence. What more could I ask for? When we undertook our two libertarian struggles in the past it was the humble sons of the people who answered the call to arms; they are the ones who will swell our ranks and with right and justice, on our side, God who is the fount of all justice, will give strength. He will not be deaf to the voice of the humble, of the poor, of those who are hungry, and thirsty for justice. He will guide the conscience of 14,000,000 Filipinos on the true path to well being and quick liberation.

A leadership of more than twenty years is too long for a leader's labor to be appreciated by the people. He has employed all the potentiality he has had and he has been given all the opportunities and necessary means to develop his policy and initiative.

In other countries of the world, when the rulers have failed to fulfill the promises made to the people, when they fail to remedy the ills that afflict the body politic, their governors, inspired by a patriotic spirit, yield their positions to other men for the good of the country.

NEW DEAL, NEW DIRECTION

I have not lost hope that the present leadership, being aware of the present discontent which prevails all over the country, will commiserate with the people in their sufferings and will give the opportunity to put into practice new procedures which lie within the law and tending to speed the advent of our freedom and to cure the social and economic ills of the country.

A "new deal" requires new direction and new orientation. A change of direction is regenerative and health giving in democracies.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES

I have already stated that I am no politician and I said so in the sense that I have not depended on politics, that is that I have never been a professional politician and that I cannot make promises in this capacity. But as a man, citizen and gentleman who guarantees his word with his honor, I promise before 14,000,000 compatriots and before the Supreme Maker, that if they give me their confidence, I shall endeavor to realize the following purposes:

FOR SHORTER TRANSITION

1. To continue working for the shortening of the transition period provided for in the Tydings-McDuffie law, so that our people may enjoy their independence immediately or within a period of from three to five years.

2. To begin negotiation with the United States as soon as possible, for the purposes of improving the economic relations between the Filipino and American peoples and to reach just the same once it is obtained.

Before the advent of independence the Philippine government shall try to find foreign markets for our products, promote the conclusion of commercial treaties with other countries under the conditions provided for by the Tydings-McDuffie law.

3. To defend the constitution and support the guarantees provided in it both for nationals as well as for Americans and foreigners who live with us, without prejudice, to asking for the revision of the same with a view to correcting any deficiencies therein.

INDEPENDENCE OF JUDICIARY

4. The constitutional provision regarding compulsory arbitration should be revised so as to make it compatible with the freedom to contract.

5. To promote friendly relations between our people and Americans and foreigners who reside in the country, treating the latter as our coworkers in the moral, social and economic progress of the country.

6. Maintain the division of powers without prejudice to the harmonious coordination of their activities on a basis of mutual cooperations as integral parts of a national organization.

7. Preserve the independence of the judiciary and the real immovability of judges so that the bench may be the real bulwark against which influence which tends to corrupt justice may be shattered. Cases where a poor man may have complaint that he has not been given due hearing in the defense of his rights, shall be made impossible.

8. The civil service and the auditor's office shall have real independence.

9. Merit and seniority shall be bases of all appointments and promotions, laying aside favoritism and regionalism.

ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY

10. Promote an effective reorganization of the offices of the government with a view to establishing greater efficiency and simplifying their activities.

11. To implant a policy of strict economy, reducing the expenses and salaries of high public officials as demanded by the critical conditions of the country and to increase the salaries of small employees, especially those of municipal teachers. In order that this principle may be equitable, the President of the Commonwealth should be the first to decrease his salary by taking a reduction of at least 50 per cent.

REVISION OF TAXES, LEVY

12. The revision of the present system of taxation so that the taxes shall not be an excessive burden for the taxpayer, but instead that they should serve as a stimulus for the creation of new sources of production and national wealth. To endeavor the equitable apportioning of the weight of taxation to the poor and the well-to-do. The poll tax shall be abolished. It is not exacted as a tax in advanced nations.

In order to cover the deficiency in the public treasury which will result in the abolition of the national lottery may be established temporarily under the auspices of the government, patterned after the lottery which existed during the Spanish regime. In this way the celebration of the so-called "Sweepstakes may be avoided and gradually bring about the elimination of illegal games."

13. Change the basis of the land tax, making it fall not on the value of the real property but on its productivity or income.

14. To make an intensive study of the problems which affect agriculture, industry and commerce with the end in view of solving them and to promote their development and growth.

15. National boards for the protection of the basic products of the country like sugar, copra, abaca, rice, tobacco and others should be created. Said boards should take charge of the study of the problems affecting said products with the end in view of proposing to the government the solution to those problems, and other measures which should be adopted for the proper protection against any danger which may confront the aforesaid products.

16. Promote and encourage the creation of new industries that may produce, with local raw materials, articles that until now are being imported from abroad as this is one of the ways of reducing unemployment.

17. Put into practice the nationalization of natural resources and economic enterprises and some of the social principles that circumstances may require as another means of solving the unemployment problem and raise the standard of living of our masses.

18. Revise the taxes that are laid on articles of primary necessity to alleviate the plight of poor consumers who constitute the majority of our people.

PUBLIC WORKS PROGRAM

19. Justice and equity must be the basis in the distribution of the public improvements, considering them as direct means of returning to the people their taxes.

20. Improvement of the laborers' conditions with a view to giving them a minimum salary, in accordance to the locality against old age and incapacity in connection with their work.

21. Revise the relations between proprietors and field laborers seeing that no injustice is done the latter.

22. Opportunity will be granted the laborer and employee so that in due time, by their industriousness and good conduct, they should partake of the benefits, not as mere instrument of production, but as industrial partners.

23. The laborer and field worker are internal part and complement of capital. The laws that shall regulate their relations should be inspired by justice and equity. But both should be considered subordinate to the exigencies of the general welfare.

UNEMPLOYMENT BOARD PROPOSED

24. Unemployment should be quickly remedied, it being a problem affecting the public order and the general welfare. To this end, funds should be liberally appropriated for public works, in order to facilitate work to those who do not have; and promote the increase of agencies for the help of the unemployed, and for this purpose a census should be taken of the unemployed, with a view to remedying their situation.

A national unemployment board should be created to promote means conducive to the solution of this grave social problem.

25. To establish an information center for the poor who may need help in their negotiations with the government offices.

26. Promote the construction of cheap living abodes for the laborers and poor employees, granting them facilities that they may get loans with banking institutions, with their salaries and wages as guaranty, and with the intervention of their employers or the chiefs of the government office where they work.

27. In the event of public calamity or financial depression, provide the government with extraordinary powers for the control or regulation of the price of staple products, to prevent cornering, at the cost and misery of the poor, as well as to regulate the rent of the poor people's quarters.

LARGE ESTATES TO BE SUBDIVIDED

28. The large estates which are the constant origin of conflicts between their owners and the tenants, deserve a serious and immediate study on the part of the government, with a view to lessening the tenants' burden of excessive rent, or, to offering the estates for sale to the tenants in small subdivided lots at easy payments.

29. Children's mortality, tuberculosis and deficient nutrition should be fought with more vigor and efficacy, and the health agencies of the government should be extended better help.

30. Make easier the suffering caused by the segregation of the lepers by establishing sanatoriums in other places so that their loved ones may have better and more frequent access to them.

31. The organization of a national social economic council wherein every element and class of the country is represented, to study our economic and social problems and to help officials of the government with its advice in the solution of said problems.

32. Our educational system should be revised in such a way that it would have a more national and practical character. The vocational system of education should be expanded. The academic courses should be reduced. And no children of school age should be permitted to grow without acquiring elementary education. Public instruction should be free.

COLLEGE GRADUATES MUST HAVE JOBS

33. The ever increasing number of graduates from the colleges and universities deserve more careful attention on the part of the government. Their knowledge should as much as possible be utilized for the development of our rich natural resources, avoiding the disappointment they suffer due to the lack of opportunity wherein their knowledge could be put into practice and for not being able to make use of the knowledge which they have acquired.

34. In pensioning our youth to study abroad absolute preference should be given to the poor, and the studies these pensioners should pursue should be those that can not be studied in this country, giving special attention to military, naval or industrial engineering and military aviation.

35. In the pension system among the employees of the government, discrimination against small employees should be avoided.

36. The creation of a council of national defense to study the first steps in the organization of our national defense, and study the more humane methods to quell uprising, insurrections and public disorders. Military training in schools, colleges and universities as well as among citizens should be promoted.

MUST IMPROVE COMMUNICATIONS

37. The need of means of communication between many inhabited islands and the capital of the Islands should be looked into and remedied.

38. When the public revenues permit, commercial capitals of certain provinces like Cebu, Iloilo, Zamboanga, Legaspi and Aparri and others of national importance should be improved.

39. The buying of votes and other electoral frauds which have prostituted suffrage in the country should be punished severely as true attempts against democracy and the stability of the government; and the amendment of the electoral law to prevent or minimize these frauds should be sought.

IN GRANTING OF PARDONS

40. In the granting of pardons, the chief executive shall commit neither injustice nor discrimination. Equality before the law, between poor and rich, humble and powerful, should guide the chief executive in the exercise of so high a prerogative.

41. Greater autonomy for the provinces, and municipalities, and Manila and Baguio should have elective mayors. In the special provinces, as soon as circumstances permit, the qualified voters should elect their provincial and municipal officials.

42. There should be a reorganization of municipal police forces to raise standards of efficiency and keep them out of the sway of party politics, and to provide them with pensions for old age or incapacity in line of service.

43. The masses should be encouraged to read newspapers and magazines as vehicles of information on events and the activities of their government, and as supplementary means of education for those who unfortunately have not acquired adequate instruction. Limited only by the means of the government, there should be municipal libraries in which citizens can gather to read books, magazines and newspapers from which they may derive knowledge useful to their lives and their occupations.

44. All officials and employees, high or low, in the service of the government, should not forget that they are public servants paid by the public and that in the transaction of public matters, they should attend to the poor with the same courtesy and amability as they attend to the rich, to the humble as to the powerful.

LINCOLNIAN CLIMAX

In a nutshell, I wish to see established in our country, a government of the people, by the people and for the people; a government that is loved, esteemed and respected by the governed.

BRETHREN: To demonstrate the sincerity of my proposition and my firm determination to translate them into reality with the cooperation of the representatives of the people who, I hope, will not deny me their assistance when the occasion presents itself, because I believe they are interested in the welfare of their country, I shall now embrace this task before a relic which I deeply love and venerate.

(At this juncture, three girls hoisted a historic Filipino Flag)

Here, dear countrymen, you have this sacred banner, mute witness of our efforts to redeem our country from slavery.

It is fortunate that it has been possible to preserve it for over three decades. It was carried in victory by our liberating throngs. Watch it closely and you will observe holes and tears not caused by age but by the bullets of enemies. The smoke of gun powder blurred its colors. It reminds us of our brethren who sacrificed their lives and of the blood generously poured for the redemption of our country.

This flag reminds us of the tears that dimmed the eyes of thousands of wives, mothers and daughters of those compatriots who, like the thirteen Martyrs of Cavite and the Heroes of '96 and '98, "fell in the night without seeing the dawn of liberty."

PLEDGE BEFORE HISTORIC BANNER

As one of those who had the great fortune of accompanying you in those sad days for the country, I now invite you to dedicate our thoughts for a moment to those compatriots to whom we owe all the liberties which we enjoy today.

Before this venerable banner, I declare that I shall use all the energies of which I am capable to carry out the propositions which I have enumerated, if the electorate places its confidence in me, with the cooperation of all compatriots of good will, and with the aid of Divine Providence.

DIVINE PROVIDENCE

I do not want to conclude this speech, without first declaring before the entire world, that I offer my candidacy to our dear Philippines, without any purpose other than the liberty and happiness of all its sons. God grant that our motherland will soon occupy a position in the concert of nations that enjoy true liberty and happiness.

Finally, I am grateful to all those who, leaving homes and comfort, have come to contribute to the splendor of this occasion. Your presence encourage me to continue without discouragement the task of seeking the early restoration of our glorious Republic."

The "Partido Republicano".—The Philippines Herald of July 1, 1935, on the formation of the "Partido Republicano" which supported the candidacy of Monsignor Gregorio Aglipay for the office of the President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, gave the following news:

"The Republican party which stands behind the candidacy of Monsignor Gregorio Aglipay for president of the Commonwealth was formally organized at the Manila Opera House yesterday morning (June 30, 1935) immediately after the proclamation of the candidacy of the supreme head of the Aglipay church.

During the process of the organization, communist followers present at the gathering proposed the name of Crisanto Evangelista, who is still serving a prison term in Bilibid, as candidate for vice-president. Bishop Aglipay took the matter under advisement.

The constitution of the new party follows:
'Preamble:

The members of the Republican party of the Philippine Islands, realizing the necessity of an organized action in order to help the sufferer, who undertook heavy burden under the clever politician of the Philippine Islands, and desiring to be of service to the people in general and to our beloved country in particular, do hereby form ourselves into a body henceforth to be known as the Republican Party, and draft the following Constitution.

MONS. GREGORIO AGLIPAY

ARTICLE I.—Name of Party

Sec. 1. The name of the party shall be Republican Party.

ARTICLE II.—Purposes

Sec. 1. The purposes of the Republican Party shall be:

1. To help the poor, the unemployed, the laborers, and to establish a good government in general.
2. To preserve equality and fraternity among the masses.
3. We should try to help the jobless and reduce the salaries of high paid officials, and try to divide between two officials the salary of one; and those who are jobless should not have the burden of paying personal tax; the women and children should also be helped.
4. Get in a short time the independence that our beloved Country has been longing for a long time.

5. Multiply the Hospitals for the poor, asylums or places for beggars who are scattered in the streets, and the lame and in general the old who could not secure work.

6. Protect the merchandises of the Philippines, by having limitations of foreign merchandise, have our own factories for nails, automobiles, other machineries with the capital of the government.

7. Establish National Defense for the defense of the Philippine Islands from foreign enemies. Improve our army and train our youth in military sciences, and other needs of our National Defense.

8. Beautify the Islands, build parks and places of pleasure, and construct asphalted roads and bridges in the parts where they are needed.

9. Help the poor, by reducing the taxes on lands, or exempt from tax lands not measuring one lot. Establish a fire department in every municipality. Help the farmer and fishermen, by lending money at low interest; so with the laborers and unemployed.

10. Investigate all the lands to discover mines, and establish a University of Scientists to locate the different mineral resources.

11. Liberty, Equality, Fraternity is what Republican party stands for."

ELECTION LAW OF 1935

TENTH PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE

Second Session

(No. 4203)

AN ACT TO REGULATE THE HOLDING OF THE FIRST ELECTION FOR PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES AND MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY, TO APPROPRIATE FUNDS THEREFOR, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

Whereas, in accordance with section four of Act Numbered One hundred twenty-seven of the Seventy-third Congress of the United States, commonly known as Tydings-McDuffie Law, the Governor-General has issued a proclamation to the People of the Philippine Islands calling an election to be held on Tuesday, September seventeen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, for the purpose of electing the President and Vice President of the Philippines and the Members of the National Assembly, provided for in the Philippine Constitution;

Whereas the existing Election Law does not contain any provisions for the election of said officers;

Whereas the national political parties which contended during the last general election and which subsequently consolidated into two parties, to wit, the Nacionalista Democrático Party and the Nacionalista Democrática Pro-Independencia Party, agreed on June sixteen, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, to present joint candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the Philippines, with only one platform, and although said parties continue as separate and independent organizations, it is the sense of the Philippine Legislature that the holding of a free and orderly election will be best guaranteed and public confidence in the result thereof will be more firmly grounded, if any party or parties that may during the coming election contend against said coalition is given an opportunity to examine everything in connection with the holding of said election, without detriment to the principle of party government; Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Philippines in Legislature assembled and by the authority of the same:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SECTION 1. Effective date and application of this Act.—This Act shall take effect on its approval and shall govern only with reference to the first election for President and Vice President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly.

SEC. 2. Date of election and legal provisions applicable to same.—The first election for President and Vice President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly shall be held on September seventeenth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, in accordance with the provisions of the Philippine Constitution, of this Act, and of the existing Election Law relative to the holding of general elections, in so far as they may be applicable and not in conflict with the provisions hereof. All acts and omissions penalized by the Election Law which shall be committed during the holding of this election or in connection therewith, shall be punished by the penalties prescribed by said Law.

CANDIDACIES

SEC. 3. Candidacies of public officers or candidacies for more than one office.—Any person holding a public office or employment in the executive or judicial branch, shall automatically cease in his office at the time of filing his certificate of candidacy. No person shall present himself as a candidate for or be eligible to more than one office at the election provided for in this Act, and any person filing certificates of candidacy for two or more different offices shall not be understood to be a candidate for any of such offices.

SEC. 4. Certificates of candidacy.—Certificates of candidacy shall be signed and sworn to by the candidates themselves and shall be filed with the Department of the Interior at least forty days before the election. Said certificates shall not contain any nicknames or aliases of the candidates.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR CERTAIN LOCALITIES

SEC. 5. Electoral organization in the special provinces.—On August first, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, the provincial boards of the special provinces, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, shall, whenever necessary, perform the duties of the municipal councils as regards the formation of election precinct, designation of polling places and appointments of election inspectors and poll clerks and substitutes therefor in their respective municipal districts, giving in the latter case due consideration to the recommendations of the accredited representatives of the national political parties.

In the municipalities of said provinces, action on such matters shall be taken by the municipal councils concerned, the same as in the case of regular municipalities.

SEC. 6. Municipal districts of certain provinces.—The voters of Allacapan and Langgan, in the Province of Cagayan, shall vote in the second legislative district of said province; those of Alilem, Angaki, Cervantes, Concepcion, San Emilio, Sigay, Sugpon, Suyo, and Tagudin, in the Province of Ilocos Sur, shall vote in the second legislative district of said province; the voters of Sudipen, Santol, and San Gabriel, in the Province of La Union, shall vote in the first legislative district of said province; and the voters of Bagulin, Burgos, and Pugo, also in the Province of La Union, shall vote in the second legislative district thereof.

SEC. 7. Legislative districts of the Mountain Province.—For the purposes of the election of Members of the National Assembly, the Mountain Province shall be divided into three districts, as follows: First District, composed of the municipal districts of Bayag, Conner, Kabugao, Luna, Namaltogan, and Taut, Subprovince of Apayao, of the municipal districts of Balbalan, Lubuagan, Pinukpuk, Tabuk, and Tanudan, Subprovince of Kalinga, and of the municipal districts of Bontoc (the capital of the province), Barlig, Sabangan, Sadangan, Sagada, Natunin, and Tinglayan, Subprovince of Bontoc; Second District, composed of the City of Baguio and the municipal districts of Ampasungan, Atok, Bokod, Bakun, Buguias, Itogon, Kabayan, Kapangan, Kibungan, La Trinidad, Mankayan, Sablan, Tuba, and Tublay, Subprovince of Benguet; Third District, composed of the municipal districts of Banaue, Burnay, Hungdoan, Kiangnan, and Mayoyao, Subprovince of Ifugao, and of the municipal district of Banaue, Bauco, Resao, and Kayan, Subprovince of Lepanto.

SEC. 8. Election of Members of the National Assembly for Cotabato, Lanao, and Sulu.—The Members of the National Assembly for the Provinces of Cotabato, Lanao, and Sulu shall in each case be elected by the presidents, vice presidents and present municipal councilors of the municipalities and districts making up the province, by the persons who occupied similar positions in said municipalities and municipal districts in the past, and by the present senators, representatives, delegates to the Constitutional Convention, provincial governors and members of provincial boards, and by any persons who occupied any of said offices in the past and reside in the province concerned. For said purpose, a board of election inspectors of each of the municipalities and municipal districts of said provinces, and in case there is more than one board of election inspectors in any municipality or municipal district, the one designated by the provincial board concerned, shall make a special list of said officers and ex-officers, including in said list those of them who may apply therefor on the days set aside by this Act for the registration of voters. On the day of the election, the officers and ex-officers registered as above mentioned shall be entitled to vote, filling out the proper official ballot and depositing the same in a separate ballot box furnished to the board of inspectors by the provincial board, and upon the termination of the balloting, the board of election inspectors shall count the votes so deposited and shall prepare a separate return of the result, in accordance with section four hundred and sixty-five of the Election Law.

ELECTION REGULATIONS OF GENERAL APPLICATION

SEC. 9. Election precincts and polling places.—The election precinct shall remain the same as now established and the polling places shall be the same, unless the municipal council or board concerned shall, for good reason, designate a different place on or before August first, nineteen hundred and thirty-five.

SEC. 10. Appointment of election inspectors and poll clerks.—On August first, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, the municipal council shall appoint three election inspectors and one poll clerk, with their respective substitutes, for such election precinct.

Two of said election inspectors and the poll clerk, and their respective substitutes, shall belong to the political party, branch or fraction thereof, or political group, which polled the largest number of votes in said municipality at the general election of nineteen hundred and thirty-four, and the other inspector and his substitute shall belong to the political party, branch or fraction thereof, or political group, which polled the next largest number of votes at said election.

No inspector or representation of any kind on the board of inspectors shall be granted to any branch, fraction or political group which has since the general election of nineteen hundred and thirty-four separated, or which may hereafter separate, from said parties, branches, fractions or political groups, or from the party created by their consolidation.

The election inspectors and poll clerks and their respective substitutes shall be persons nominated by the accredited representatives of said parties, branches, fractions or political groups.

If any party or political group presenting candidates for President and Vice President of the Philippines shall be formed before August first, nineteen hundred and thirty-five such party or group shall, upon nomination by the same, be given representation at each of the polling places of the municipalities or places where such party or group has an accredited representative, by means of the appointment on said date of a fourth inspector, with his substitute, having the qualifications required by section four hundred and nineteen of the Election Law, and if, besides, other parties or political groups are formed which present candidates for said offices and which have accredited representatives in the locality, the Supreme Court shall, at the request of an interested party, grant such additional inspector to the party or political group showing that it has the most extensive organization in said locality. This paragraph shall not be construed to mean that the new party or political group or the candidates thereof may have more than one inspector on the board.

In case a fourth inspector is appointed as provided in the next preceding paragraph, the poll clerk shall be entitled to vote on the board of inspectors in case of a tie.

An election inspector or poll clerk may be replaced at any time at the request of the party or group on whose nomination he was appointed, and in case there shall be no time for holding a meeting of the municipal council for said purpose, or if the latter shall fail to act or to come to an agreement the duties of inspector or poll clerk, as the case may be, shall be performed by the substitute or by the person nominated by the party or group concerned.

Any protest made by an inspector against any act of the board of inspectors or of any member thereof shall be made to appear over his signature in the return, and no protest not so made and appearing shall be entertained or considered as made.

SEC. 11. Revision of list of voters and registration of new voters.—The boards of election inspectors shall meet on August ninth and tenth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, to revise the list of voters and register new voters therein. On said days, said boards of inspectors shall strike from the present lists of voters the names of persons not having the qualifications prescribed by Title Five of the Constitution, of those disqualified from voting under the provisions of section four hundred and thirty-two of the Election Law, and of those serving sentences of imprisonment. This section shall, however, not to be construed as barring the re-registration of voters rejected as illiterates if they can show, on one of the days set aside by law for the registration of voters, that they can write and read and are not otherwise incapacitated by law.

SEC. 12. Voters who may register and vote by mail.—Voters confined at a leper station or colony and not otherwise incapacitated may register and vote by mail, sending their respective applications or ballots by registered mail to the board of inspectors of the precinct in which they resided prior to their confinement and it shall be the duty of the board of inspectors of said precinct to register them and consider their ballots, provided the applicants have the qualifications required of voters and the application or ballot reaches said board of inspectors in time. The Secretary of the Interior shall make such additional regulations as may be necessary to facilitate the registration of said electors and to insure a secret, free and honest ballot.

SEC. 13. Proceedings for inclusion and exclusion of voters and correction of list of voters.—All judicial proceedings for inclusion in or exclusion from the list of voters shall be free of charge and shall be filed at the latest on August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and a final decision thereon shall be rendered on or before September sixth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five. The boards of election inspectors shall hold their last meeting on September seventh, nineteen hundred and thirty-five for the purposes specified in section four hundred and thirty-nine of the Election Law.

SEC. 14. Compensation of election inspectors and poll clerks.—Election inspectors and poll clerks shall receive compensation at the rate of four pesos for each day of service rendered.

SEC. 15. Ballots.—The ballots shall be uniform throughout the Philippine Islands, except in the Provinces of Cotabato, Lanao and Sulu. No ballot shall have any printing on the back and the stubs thereof shall be numbered consecutively in each municipality or municipal district.

SEC. 16. Preparation of ballot and spoiled ballots.—Every voter shall prepare his ballot himself and no one shall be permitted to assist him therein, any provision of existing law to the contrary notwithstanding, except as far as the election of Members of the National Assembly in the Provinces of Cotabato, Lanao and Sulu is concerned. Ballots prepared in violation of this provision shall be void and shall not be counted. Nor shall any vote be counted on which the candidate is designated by his nickname or alias, although mention thereof is made on his certificate of candidacy.

SEC. 17. Counting of votes and canvass of returns.—The result of the balloting for Members of the National Assembly shall be determined by the board of canvassers of the province concerned as now provided by law for elective members of the House of Representatives. Said board shall forthwith certify the result of the election for Members of the National Assembly in its province to the Governor-General.

The election returns of the President and Vice President, duly certified and sealed by the board of canvassers of each province, including special provinces and the City of Manila, shall be prepared in triplicate and shall forthwith be sent, one copy to the Secretary of the Senate, one to the Secretary of the House of Representatives, and one to the Secretary of the Interior.

Thirty days after the election has been held, or on a date to be designated by the Governor-General, the Legislature shall meet in joint session and shall publicly count the votes cast at the election of President and Vice President of the Philippines, determine the result thereof, and certify the same to the Governor-General.

SEC 18. Transmission of document relating to election.—The Bureau of Posts shall receive and transmit without delay and free of charge all election returns and other official documents, reports, telegrams or radiograms relating to the election in this Act provided for.

FINAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 19. Assumption of office by officers elect.—The President and Vice President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly elected in accordance with this Act shall assume office and the National Assembly shall hold its first session immediately after said officers shall have been proclaimed as elected by the President of the United States.

SEC. 20. Appropriation.—The sum of eight hundred thousand pesos, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any funds in the Insular Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the expenses of the election ordered in this Act.

SEC. 21. Repealing clause.—All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

Approved, July 23, 1935.

The First Commonwealth Election.—Pursuant to the provisions of Act No. 4203 of the tenth Philippine Legislature, approved July 23, 1935, the first national election for President and Vice-President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly was held throughout the Philippines on Tuesday, September 17, 1935, with the following results:

RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PHILIPPINES, IN JOINT SESSION ASSEMBLED, CERTIFYING TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL THE RESULT OF THE ELECTION FOR PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Whereas, in pursuance of section four of Public Act Numbered One hundred twenty-seven of the Seventy-third Congress of the United States, commonly known as the Tydings McDuffie Act, and section seventeen of Act Numbered Forty-two hundred and three of the Philippine Legislature entitled "An Act to regulate the holding of the first election for President and Vice President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly, to appropriate funds therefor, and for other purposes," the Philippine Legislature met in joint session, publicly counted the votes cast at the election held on September seventeen nineteen hundred and thirty five, for the office of President and Vice President of the Philippines, determined the result thereof, and has found that for the office of President, Hon. Manuel L. Quezon received six hundred ninety-five thousand two hundred ninety-seven (695,297) votes; Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo received one hundred seventy-nine thousand, four hundred one (179,401) votes; Mons. Gregorio Aglipay received one hundred forty-eight thousand, six (148,006) votes; and Mr. Pascual Racuyal received one hundred fifty-eight (158) votes; and for the Office of Vice President Hon. Sergio Osmeña received eight hundred ten thousand, six hundred sixty-six (810,666) votes; Hon. Kaymundo Melliza received seventy thousand, eight hundred ninety-one (70,891) votes; and Mr. Norberto Nabong received fifty-one thousand four hundred forty-four (51,444) votes; and

Whereas, the number of votes received for the Office of President by Hon. Manuel L. Quezon and for the Office of Vice President by Hon. Sergio Osmeña constitutes not only a plurality, but a majority of the votes legally cast for the said offices: Now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Philippines, in joint session assembled in the Hall of the House of Representatives:

To certify as they hereby certify, to the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands that Honorable Manuel L. Quezon and Honorable Sergio Osmeña have been elected President and Vice President of the Philippines, respectively, by a majority of all the votes cast at the election held on September seventeenth, nineteen hundred and thirty-five; and

That the statement of the votes cast in said election by provinces duly certified by the presiding officers and hereto attached be, and the same hereby is, certified to the Governor-General of the Philippines as a part of this Resolution: and

That the certificates of canvass made by the provincial boards of canvassers of returns of votes for President and Vice President of the Philippines, duly certified by the Provincial Board of Canvassers of the respective provinces and hereto attached be, and the same hereby is, certified to the Governor-General of the Philippines as a part of this Resolution.

Adopted, October 12, 1935.

PROCLAMATION ANNOUNCING RESULTS OF NATIONAL ELECTIONS

Whereas pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved March 24, 1934 (48 Stat. 456), and in accordance with the Constitution of the Commonwealth of the Philippines heretofore adopted and ratified by the people of the Philippine Islands, an election was held in the Philippine Islands on September 17, 1935, for the purpose of electing officers of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines; and

Whereas the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands has certified to me as President of the United States of America the result of the said election;

Now, therefore, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by the aforesaid Act and in conformity with section 4 thereof, do announce and proclaim that at the election so held in the Philippine Islands on September 17, 1935, officers of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines were duly elected as follows:

(President, Vice-President; and members of the National Assembly, see pages 379-383 hereof)

This proclamation shall be effective upon its promulgation at Manila, Philippine Islands, on November 15, 1935, by the Secretary of War of the United States of America, who is hereby designated as my representative for that purpose.

And I do further announce and proclaim that, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act, upon such promulgation of this proclamation the existing Philippine Government shall terminate and the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall enter upon its rights, privileges, powers, and duties as provided under the said Constitution of the Philippines.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this fourteenth day of November in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixtieth.

ARRIVAL OF THE DISTINGUISHED GUESTS OF THE PHILIPPINES

Vice President Garner and Speaker Byrns at Pier 7 Upon Their Arrival

Secretary of War Dern Giving Radio Greeting at the Luneta Upon His Arrival

Since the inception of American rule over the Philippines there had been sent to the Islands several delegations of Senators and Congressmen, as well as private individuals officially appointed to represent the President of the United States, to investigate and survey conditions in the Archipelago. The most impressive delegation, however, that ever set foot on the Philippine soils was the Congressional Delegation that attended the Inauguration of the Commonwealth Government of the Philippines. This delegation was headed by Hon. John Nance Garner, Vice-President of the United States, Hon. George H. Dern, Secretary of War, personal representative of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Hon. James F. Byrns, Speaker of the United States House of Representatives. Coming along with the members of the Congressional Delegation were their wives, as well as outstanding American publishers, authors and journalists. All these were the official guests of the Commonwealth Government during its inauguration on November 15, 1935.

This delegation of high government officials of the United States and leading American journalists came upon the invitation of the Philippine Commonwealth Government. An appropriation of P200,000.00 was set aside from the Philippine coffers to meet the expenses of entertaining these guests.

The delegation, in the words of Vice-President Garner, was highly impressed by the "peaceful birth of a new nation that comes quietly into the world's sisterhood of states, with a well chosen leader, with all promise for happiness. We are impressed, we return home inspired, with another great forward step in world progress."

HON. JOHN NANCE GARNER
VICE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
AT THE
JOINT SESSION OF THE PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE
ON NOVEMBER 12, 1935, AT 10 A. M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Through the accident of war some thirty-five years ago your beautiful islands came under the sovereignty of the United States.

Within five years of this acquisition my people made me a member of the United States House of Representatives. During my first term in that body was formed the impression that our American sovereignty was of a temporary character. The discussions in those early days of whether they should be retained permanently or ultimately be given their independence caused keen interest in the expressions of opinion of our greater statesmen and at a very early period there came from all the promise of ultimate independence.

This was followed by expressions of opinion of our great men in the Presidential chair and in our Congress that independence should be granted.

To-day it is a pleasure to be with you because of your great happiness on this historic occasion, although perhaps the early years may prove a period of trial and tribulation, such as we had in our country.

The thought foremost in my mind is that Americans have fulfilled their promise—the word of the American nation is good no matter how great the sacrifice to make it good. It is a sacrifice to part with a wonderful country such as yours, populated by a kindly, industrious, and intelligent people.

I have a feeling of pride that for the first time in the world's history, at a great loss to itself, the American nation has redeemed its promise.

In company with our distinguished Speaker Byrns of the House of Representatives, one of the great coordinate branches of our government, with twenty-seven Congressmen and seventeen United States Senators and our wives, we have traveled approximately ten thousand miles, and must travel ten thousand miles in return to celebrate two things.

Putting them in the order in which my mind dwells upon them, there is the redemption of a national promise that all right-thinking Americans will approve and that all self-governing nations of the earth will applaud.

As years went on in my Congressional career, fate finally placed me as Speaker of the great House of Representatives and it was during my term of office that the first bill containing an offer of independence was passed.

And then, strange as events will sometimes order, as Vice President of the United States the pleasure came to me of witnessing for the second time as a presiding officer the final accepted offer of independence.

On both occasions the offer of independence was accompanied by conditions and obligations which should first be accepted by your people.

Amongst these was the perpetual preservation of human and property rights, which rights it had taken our ancestry many hundreds of years to secure. These rights were fought for upon battlefields and in debates and finally found themselves in written form in our American Constitution in what lawyers and even our school boys to-day know as "Our Bill of Rights."

Your new Constitution was presented to President Roosevelt examined by himself and his advisers, and we find that it contains these essentials of self-government:

1. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.
2. Security against unreasonable search and seizure.
3. Religious liberty and its free exercise.
4. Freedom of speech, of the press, and the right of assembly and petition.
5. No involuntary servitude of any kind.
6. The privilege of the use of the writ of habeas corpus.

Joint special session of the Philippine Legislature. (November 12, 1935)

7. Due process of law in criminal offenses, the accused to be confronted with witnesses, and many other safeguards and protections for liberty, property, and orderly government.

It has been generally agreed by thinking men the world over that if liberty is to be preserved and the rights of property respected, these provisions are essential.

For some thirty-four years our public administrators in the Islands, our soldiers who were here when the war was over, and our school teachers who came later and for long over a decade taught the blessings to be secured by liberty, education, and religious freedom, are now all covered in your Constitution.

My friend, former Senator Hawes, a student of your country who has devoted years of his life toward promoting your aspirations for self-government, informs me that your people have paid all of its bills for education, bills for sanitation, the bills for public health, the bills for roads, and even the salaries of American administrators and their advisers, and that you enter upon your great experiment of freedom with probably the smallest national debt of any nation.

He advises me that in the 35 years of American sovereignty, with the exception of three million dollars provided for recuperation after the war, the entire cost of all civil administration has been provided by the revenues secured from the taxation of your own people.

Few nations have a record similar to this. The most of the world is not happy—it is in a state of much confusion and distress.

It speaks well for the character of your people and the temporary sovereignty of my people that an unequalled record of financial stability like this should exist.

Our trade relations have grown to such proportions that you have until recently ranked as our eighth best customer, and through the laws passed by our Congress, we have not only been your best customer, but practically your sole customer.

Trade relations of a beneficial character rest exclusively upon two things, the ability to sell, giving the ability to buy.

Our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in sending the last independence bill to Congress, accompanied it with a recommendation that where there were inequalities in our trade relations, that they should be adjusted by a Commission representing both peoples who could arrive at an equitable decision which would prove advantageous to our hundred and twenty million people and to your fourteen million people.

And this I hope, after thoughtful consideration and investigation, will be worked out to the mutual advantage of both nations.

May the new nation preserve the world's fine traditions of liberty and equality, a nation of Christian people, who by its careful and thoughtful consideration of all its people will prove an inspiration to the nations of the earth. Prosperity will not come to you without some trial and some sacrifice. Much will depend on the character of the men who administer your affairs.

You have sent to our country brilliant and able men as Commissioners to our House of Representatives. You have sent special commissions of studious patriotic men whose eloquence and logic have impressed the American Congress.

Among these, as one of your Commissioners many years ago, I met the Honorable Manuel Quezon. He possessed individuality, activity, intellect, and courtesy rarely combined in one man. We became personal friends. I found him fair and vigorous, always patriotic, and it is a pleasure for me to know that in your recent election he was chosen as the first President of your new Commonwealth by decisive majorities.

It is a great responsibility. It will call for a high character of statemanship. His term of office is limited to six years. He cannot succeed himself.

It would seem to me therefore to be the part of wisdom and patriotic thought for Filipinos to throw aside partisan and personal feeling and all unite in a coordinated support during these first trying years. Let all thoughtful men and women put aside ideas of change and surround him with loyal support from every quarter so that in the administration of his office he may pick the ablest advisers.

My thought goes back to the years in my country when Washington was its leader. At the birth of our nation when there were not two parties all factions supported the one party and the one administration, our first Washington administration.

Why cannot this happen under my friend, your President-elect Manuel Quezon?

There should be no quarrelling and discord or lack of harmony. You have in your Constitution set a limitation upon his term, and during that time, in the fateful years of your first President, it seems to me that he should be given united support.

After this first administration there may be divisions. There is always honest disagreement in a republic such as you are forming, but let the first administration be united.

Our Presidents have sent to you as Governors-General, men of ability, of sympathetic interest in promoting your welfare. The last of these is among the best, Governor Frank Murphy, who has won your confidence and esteem, has cooperated with your great leaders, Quezon and Osmeña, and received the applause of your people.

A consistent continued American policy of preparation and control, followed by what to me is of great historic significance, a redeemed national promise, with the well wishes of the nations of the earth, I came to this unusual historical spectacle with confidence in your future.

I shall watch your destiny with optimism and friendly interest.

You have the very best wishes of the people of the United States, and I am sure that prosperity will come, and with prosperity, happiness, and national progress.

I thank you in behalf of each member of the Congressional delegation for the invitation which brought us here and brought with us our wives, and I assure you that we are carrying back kindly feelings of confidence and interest.

Few people have had the privilege of witnessing the peaceful birth of a new nation that comes quietly into the world's sisterhood of states, with an orderly written government, with a well chosen leader, with all promise for happiness.

We are impressed, we return home inspired, with another great forward step in world progress.

Vice President Garner addressing the joint session of the Philippine Legislature

HON. JOSEPH W. BYRNS
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES
AT THE
JOINT SESSION OF THE PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE
ON NOVEMBER 12, 1935, AT 10 A. M.

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. SPEAKER, AND MEMBERS OF THE PHILIPPINE ASSEMBLY:

It is indeed a high honor to appear before you on this occasion in anticipation of the historic processes soon to be inaugurated as a preliminary to the birth of a new and independent nation. As a member of the party of United States Senators and Congressmen, who, with their wives and important members of the United States Press have come on your generous invitation from our homeland to extend our congratulations and cordial good will on this memorable occasion, I wish to join in the felicitations and good wishes so eloquently expressed by our able, distinguished, and much beloved Vice President, the second ranking officer of our government and who speaks as the leader of our delegation. I join in his expression of pride that this historic event has been made possible by the generous action of our great Republic in voluntarily surrendering its right of sovereignty and the interests which go with it in order that the people of the Philippine Islands may enjoy that sense of national freedom and independence which we have enjoyed for 150 years. So far as I know it is the first time that a great people have achieved independence without the necessity of securing it at the point of the sword. No real Republican form of government has ever existed as such for any great length of time which did not recognize the principles of democracy and the common good of the people as a whole. It is the practice of those fundamental ideals which has made our own country great and powerful and its people happy and contented during the past years.

May I say that it is for you gentlemen and other leaders in your nation to preserve and make lasting these principles so well expressed in the highly progressive Constitution which you have approved. We feel certain that this will be done by the incoming administration headed as it will be by your very able and devoted leader and President, Honorable Manuel Quezon. We look with confidence therefore to your development and "strike hands with you across the sea" in best wishes for your future endeavours along these lines.

In the House of Representatives we find that the following Congressmen and Senators in our party served in the same period that your President Manuel Quezon represented your country as the Philippine Commissioner in the House of Representatives: John N. Garner, Joseph T. Robinson, Mathew M. Neely, James F. Byrnes, Robert L. Doughton, Bertrand H. Snell, and Allen T. Treadway, all of whom have risen to places of influence and distinction in the Congress.

We found him to be a very able man, resourceful, considerate, and dependable. His contacts with these members of Congress, a few of whom I have mentioned, I know has given him not only a theoretical but a very practical knowledge of the workings of the American system of Government.

We have all come in contact with the many able Commissioners you have sent to Washington during past years and whose names I shall not have time to mention, and also with the able men who have come to Washington from time to time as members of various high Commissions. All of this has served to increase our confidence in your future for all were able and faithful representatives of your interests. Undoubtedly honest differences of political opinion will arise but these will be solved I am sure in a spirit of amity and good will.

In considering your new Constitution, I find first and foremost those declarations in the bill of rights to which the Vice President has referred.

Through his pleasant contact with the Congress, your new President-elect has acquired a practical viewpoint of other administration details for the interpretation in a fair and equitable way of the provisions of your Constitution.

I bespeak for him your united support, that you will give him generously of your advice and assistance that the way may be smoothed for the attainment of the high ideals he possesses.

He has had associated with him for the last few years as Governor-General of the Philippine Islands Governor Frank Murphy, an able and conscientious executive whose experiences as Mayor of one of our great cities, Detroit, has familiarized him with finance and orderly government. In his official contacts here we are pleased but not surprised to know that he has displayed tact and good judgment.

For the next ten years at least the American flag will fly over your Commonwealth and you will have with you an official representing the United States, who will have the title of High Commissioner. This official will be representative of the President of the United States when it is necessary for him to act.

His sympathetic cooperation during our continued sovereignty, subject to changes by Congress, will be the expression of the American people.

For ten years, unless there is a change, the stars and stripes, for which I know you have the greatest respect, will fly over the Commonwealth. The Philippine flag, red, white, and blue, with its three stars and its blazing sun, typifying the Tropics, will be carried on all standards. These sister flags will do much as they have in the past to strengthen the fine type of friendship which exists to-day.

When the time comes for the Republic to replace the Commonwealth, we believe that the conduct of its affairs during this period will so impress the nations of the world that the new Republic will begin its career with not only the old friendship of my country, but that all the enlightened nations of the earth will unite in its protection and in the preservation of its sovereignty.

The great American nation will watch your development with keen interest and wherever we may, will extend a helping hand.

You raise products which are not raised in the United States. We sell you manufactured articles which are not made in your country. We believe that the President's Commission will work out an equitable plan beneficial to both our nations, and that the result of its recommendations will strengthen the ties that will become stronger with the years.

The administration of President Quezon and Vice-President Osmeña is entitled to unified support. Your example of unity, patriotism, and self-sacrifice will have a most beneficial heartening effect on the people of my country, and make it more simple and easy to reconcile any inequalities that now exist or may occur.

A strong government administering your affairs under your progressive Constitution, which has been approved by our great President Franklin D. Roosevelt, will make for harmony, unity, and cooperation.

It was kind of the Philippine people to include in their invitation to Senators and Congressmen an invitation for their wives. They have enjoyed the visit. You have aroused their sympathy and interest as you have our own.

I have learned that the Filipino women are leaders in the matter of education. They are the household bankers. They have followed the teachings of our school teachers and our economists. They have many of the favorite American dishes in their kitchens. So on behalf of the ladies of the Senate and of the House of Representatives I thank you for the courtesy of the invitation, but I have the suspicion that back of it was the thought that our wives and daughters who have come with us will in the future help to tighten the bonds of friendship and goodwill between our nations.

I cannot close these remarks without referring briefly to my friend and your friend Hon. Harry B. Hawes. As United States Senator and since then he has been an earnest, devoted and able friend of the Philippine people. He merits your friendship and gratitude for his faithful and unselfish work in your behalf.

Let me again thank you for the high privilege that has been extended to us and to our wives to visit you and study first hand your conditions and your aspirations. Let me assure you that we are taking home with us the kindest thoughts of a pleasant and instructive visit.

To have even small part in the establishment of an independent republic in the great Orient, to know that the fine traditions of America will be preserved, is satisfaction enough for all right-thinking Americans.

LAST MESSAGE
GOVERNOR GENERAL
FRANK MURPHY
TO THE
TENTH PHILIPPINE LEGISLATURE

Delivered by His Excellency in its last session in the Hall of the House of Representatives on November 14, 1935

GENTLEMEN OF THE LEGISLATURE:

To-day we are completing another chapter in American-Filipino relations. Upon issuance by the President to-morrow of a proclamation announcing the results of the recent national election, in accordance with section four of the Tydings-McDuffie Act, the office of Governor-General of the Philippine Islands will come to an end. This legislative body likewise will pass into history. The charter of our authority known as the Jones Act, granted by the United States Congress in 1916, under whose liberal and beneficent provisions the Philippine people have governed and been governed for nearly two decades,—this great charter of liberal government will terminate. In its place a new charter of government, a constitution framed by the representatives of the Philippine people themselves in pursuance of authority granted by the United States Congress, and a new form of government constituted thereunder, will come into operation. At such a time it seems fitting for us to pause a few moments before final adjournment to consider the situation of our Government and review briefly the significant events and forces that have shaped our course until the present hour.

Under the auspices of the Spanish Empire of the sixteenth century, the foremost nation of Europe, rich, cultured, and powerful, western civilization was brought to the Philippines in the year 1564. During three centuries and a half that followed, the people of these Islands received the impress of a great Spanish culture and became indoctrinated with the Christian religion. Through devout Spanish church-men and administrators, the Filipino people became familiar with the institutions and customs and moral conceptions of the western world.

When American civil administrators came to the Islands in 1900 to assume the task that had been commenced by the Army forces, they found not only the beginnings of an American school system, with soldiers in the role of teachers. They found a people that was prepared to benefit by the privileges and advantages that were to be offered to them under the American system of government. They found a quality akin to their own. For here was a people that already had revolted against oppressive rule and attempted to set up an independent republic. The events that preceded the truce of Biac-na-bato help to explain the remarkable early success of the American experiments with democracy in these Islands beyond the distant seas.

While to many persons the odds seemed to be heavily against success of the venture, it was almost inevitable that a people nurtured as the American people were in the political philosophy that had produced the Declaration of Independence, with its emphasis on freedom and equality, and had evolved the American constitution based on the presumed right and capacity of the common people to govern themselves,—it was inevitable that such a people should seek to implant these doctrines and principles of government in the new territory that had been committed to their control. For democracy as conceived and expressed in these great documents and as the American people had received it from their fathers, was something more than a method of government. It was a passionate political faith. It was a faith in the natural capacities, and inherent possibilities of the common man, in his essential worth and dignity. In the scheme of democracy, as in the code of Christianity, all men were on a common level of dignity and importance. In this sense as stated by a great political philosopher of my own state, Christianity and democracy were twin born. They provide for the common men, without distinction of race or clime, a way of salvation from forces of oppression and greed and selfishness.

Having found democracy good for herself, America believed it was good for the people of the Philippines. With a faith and passion like that which enabled their Spanish predecessors to establish throughout the land the practice of the Christian religion, the early American administrators and their devoted co-workers in the field of education undertook to educate and train the people of these Islands in the principles and technique of self-government, taking for their keynote and guide the memorable instructions issued by President McKinley in April 1900.

EDUCATION

If with their simple and sincere faith in the principles by which they had won their own independence and founded their governments, the American people failed to realize fully the nature and difficulty of the mission they were undertaking, they understood clearly that for its successful practice and permanent enjoyment, democratic government required an educated and informed citizenry. This understanding and conviction were as strong as they had been one hundred years earlier, when the framers of the great Ordinance of 1787 enacted for the government of the so-called northwest territory, stated that "religion, morality, and knowledge being essential to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

In similar vein, President McKinley directed that the Commission "should regard as of first importance the extension of a system of primary education which shall be free to all, and which shall tend to fit the people for the duties of citizenship and for the ordinary avocations of a civilized community." In its first proclamation to the people of the Philippines in 1899, the First Philippine Commission declared the establishment of elementary schools and appropriate facilities for higher education to be of cardinal importance in the American program for the Islands.

No people ever accepted the blessings of education with more enthusiasm than the Filipinos. Like the Americans, they saw that the road to self-government lies through the schoolhouse. The United States Army began the establishment of modern schools in 1898, and within a year more than 4,500 primary pupils were enrolled in Manila alone. The foundations for the permanent educational system of the country were laid by the Philippine Commission in January, 1901. One of its first acts provided for the appointment of more than 1,000 American teachers. Some of the members of this original group of educational pioneers are still in the Philippines. The splendid and devoted work of these and thousands of others who followed them has been a credit to their country and of immeasurable value to the Filipino people.

Although a system of primary public schools was provided for by Royal Spanish decree in 1863, few Filipino children were being educated at public expense at the end of the Spanish régime. To-day about two-thirds of all Filipino children of primary school age (seven to ten) are enrolled in the first four grades of the public schools. Total public school enrollment in March, 1935, was 1,204,485 pupils. They are taught in 7,680 schools, staffed by 27,120 teachers and administrators. In 1934 total expenditure for public education amounted to nearly twenty-three million pesos. This included more than 20 per cent of the total expenditures of the central government for all purposes.

Although the burden of popular education in the Philippines, as elsewhere, has been borne mainly by the state, 97,500 pupils are enrolled in private educational institutions recognized by the Philippine Government and operated under Government supervision.

Those that meet certain definite standards are accredited by the state and are articulated with the public educational system. Among these are the oldest and some of the best institutions of learning in the Philippines.

No agency of the state has been more effective than the public schools in the creation of a strong consciousness of Philippine nationality and the development of a sense of civic responsibility. The English language is now spoken in every barrio in the Archipelago by people of all ranks of life. The schools have been an important factor and effective instrument in the improvement of the health of the people. The offices of the Government and of private business have been almost completely staffed with competent Filipinos trained in the public schools. The standards of efficiency in agriculture, commerce, and industry have been raised, and the wealth of the country increased by the efforts of vocationally trained citizens. Professional and technical education has been placed upon a high plane, and our own institutions of higher learning are now supplying the country with specially trained men capable of meeting its technical and scientific needs. The Bureau of Science, the University of the Philippines, and some of the older private institutions, besides providing opportunities for general and specialized high education, are making distinguished contributions to the common fund of human knowledge. Through the National Research Council, founded and supported as an agency of the State, the direct aid of the Government has been placed behind scientific research.

Further expansion of the school facilities of the Philippines is primarily a financial problem. Insular appropriation for school purposes probably cannot be greatly increased during the next few years, and in the present financial condition of the provinces and municipalities, no large increase in their school expenditures may be expected. Further substantial progress toward the goal of universal, free primary education apparently must depend upon and follow an increase in the taxable wealth of the country.

Within the limited financial resources of the country, however, the educational system that has been developed in the Philippines is suc-ceasingly serving the fundamental needs of the Nation. The schools, colleges and universities of the country have become effective means for the intellectual development and self-expression of the people,—in the extension of general culture, and in civic, vocational and professional education. The people of this country know that an educated citizenry is indispensable to the existence of a free, democratic, progressive state. I am confident that they will continue to press forward to the educational goals that were set a generation ago, and will not fail to support their schools to the limit of their resources as an indispensable instrument in their national development. This determination has been written into the Constitution they have adopted as the supreme law of the future Philippine nation.

PUBLIC WORKS

Important as education is however in building the structure of strong national life, other elements were needed. Roads and transportation facilities and public works were required to develop trade and commerce, and to promote understanding and cooperation between communities and groups. The revenues of the state have been liberally and profitably employed in this direction, bringing to isolated communities the advantages of easy communication and the conveniences of modern civilization.

When the Americans came nothing remained of the old Spanish road system but 990 miles of right of way impassable in the rainy season and available for travel in the dry season only to a very limited extent.

To-day the Philippines has 9,057.6 kilometers of first-class roads, 4,831.1 kilometers of second class, 2,009.4 kilometers of trails, or a total of 20,826 kilometers (12,912.12 miles) of roads and trails representing an investment of ₱240,000,000.

There were 2,600 bridges and culverts in existence when Civil Government under American sovereignty was started. Five thousand five hundred others have been added at an expenditure of ₱25,000,000, including such notable bridges as the Gilbert Bridge at Laoag, the Quirino Bridge spanning the Abra, the Plaridel Bridge in Pangasinan, and the General Luna Bridge at Cabanatuan.

With the advent of the American regime, there was inaugurated the construction of schools, hospitals, municipal buildings, and provincial capitols. In Manila we have the Legislative Building, Post Office, Executive Building, Philippine General Hospital, Bureau of Science, College of Medicine, Insular Psychopathic Hospital, Philippine Normal School and Dormitory, Pandacan Research Library, Ice Plant, and University of the Philippines. In the provinces the fine capitol buildings of Ilocos Sur, Ilocos Norte, Pangasinan, Batangas, Tayabas, Leyte, and Occidental Negros are worthy of special mention. From the beginning of the American régime to date ₱98,891,285 have been spent in the construction of public buildings.

During the Spanish régime the only important water supply system was the Carriedo System, now part of the Manila Metropolitan Water System. In the old days water for domestic use was secured by means of jars, buckets, and tin cans from shallow wells, springs, rivers, and lakes, and from impounded rainwater from roofs.

Up to 1911 the American Army had completed 13 water systems, which later were improved and are now furnishing water to the towns where the systems are located. Excluding the Metropolitan water system of Manila, there have been completed up to December 31, 1934, 288 municipal and provincial water-supply systems, 19 extensions and 10 improvements furnishing potable water to a population of 1,008,918, at a cost of ₱12,184,106.50.

The most important systems constructed are:

1. Metropolitan Water System of Manila, including filtration plant.
2. The Vigan (Singson) Waterworks, Ilocos Sur.
3. Ilocos Norte Metropolitan Waterworks.
4. Camarines Sur Metropolitan Waterworks.
5. Zamboanga Waterworks.
6. Cebu Metropolitan Waterworks.
7. Iloilo Metropolitan Waterworks.
8. Lucena-Pagbilao Waterworks in Tayabas.

Prior to 1898 and up to the early part of 1904, no artesian wells had been constructed in the Philippines. The first was drilled by the Bureau of Public Works at Engineer Island in December, 1904. From then until September 30, 1935, 2,390 successful artesian wells have been drilled in towns, barrios, and sitios throughout the Islands, at a total cost of ₱5,611,315.44, supplying approximately 3,000,000 people with pure water.

Irrigation was known in the Philippines even prior to 1521 as evidence by the wonderful rice terraces of Northern Luzon. Under the initiative of Spanish priests 27,700 hectares of rice land were placed under irrigation at an estimated cost of ₱6,000,000. To this the American regime has added irrigating systems for 83,200 hectares at a cost of ₱18,647,000. To these must be added private systems built during the past 25 years irrigating 604,000 additional hectares, and bringing the grand total of irrigated land up to 715,000 hectares, a great advance over the Spanish regime.

Of the port works in use to-day, only the old river walls and a very short part of the north breakwater at Manila were built prior to 1898. During the past thirty-five years ₱75,000,000 have been devoted to construction and improvement at nearly 100 ports throughout the Islands, ranging from the breakwater, sheltered harbor, and modern piers at Manila to simple landings for small coasters at isolated towns.

There is reflected in all this an earnestness of purpose in the American stewardship, and a capacity on the part of the Filipino people to build and enjoy better things. The Filipino people can continue to have them only if the tax burden is levied equitably, paid cheerfully, and spent wisely for the good of the people as a whole.

INTERISLAND SHIPPING

Before American occupation there was very little interisland shipping. Seven days after the fall of Manila the Manila Customhouse was established. It was apparent that there should be a larger number of ships in the coastwise service, to strengthen the newly established civil government and better conditions for farmers in all sections of the Islands. In March, 1902, 196 ports were opened to interisland traffic. There being no Government funds available for subsidies, and few capitalists and merchants willing to invest in shipping, Act 520 was passed in November, 1902, throwing open coastwise trade to foreign vessels without restriction until July, 1904. A growing tendency towards nationalization of the coastwise shipping industry culminated in Act 3084 passed in March, 1923, which provides that only vessels of domestic ownership may engage in the coastwise trade. Foreign firms which had engaged in the trade before 1904 were allowed to continue but were prohibited from adding any new ships.

Prior to December, 1927, interisland service was mediocre. Fixed schedules were not maintained and the service was uncertain and unsatisfactory. With the passage of Act No. 3418 the jurisdiction of the Public Utility Commission over routes was withdrawn. This led to free competition, acceleration of service, and the entry of new ships into the field. The commerce of the Islands has steadily increased from about ₱68,000,000 in 1899 to over ₱350,000,000 in 1934. Goods amounting to such a sum must be moved expeditiously.

An important factor in the development of this commerce has been the steady improvement of ports. Beginning with the construction of seawalls and small wooden docks in Manila, Iloilo, and Cebu, a program of port-works has received generous support from the Government. The result has been that all the important seaports from Aparri to Sulu have been improved, with Manila the outstanding example of what can be done in this line.

Between 1916 and 1926 there were many losses due to shipwrecks, etc. An annual inspection by the Bureau of Customs was instituted, improving the seaworthiness of the ships. The development of the interisland shipping to its present level of efficiency is a notable and vital achievement for a people largely dependent upon the sea for their channels of trade.

The most populous sections of the Philippines, Central Luzon and Cebu, have been given the advantage of efficient railroad facilities for a number of years, and commercial automobile traffic has closely followed the improvement in highways.

AVIATION MAKES AUSPICIOUS START

Very recently the first chapters of Philippine aviation history have been written. Private enterprise has pioneered and has demonstrated the practicability of air communication. A country of more than 7,000 islands offers a great field for this most modern development in transportation, and the past several years have shown results which hold great promise for the future.

Thousands of miles have been flown commercially, on regular schedules, north to Baguio, and south to Iloilo and Cebu, and only the other day regular service was extended to Davao in Mindanao.

At present there are some forty landing fields throughout the Islands, twenty of which have been constructed by the Philippine Government. This work is progressing as rapidly as possible so that within a year every town of the Philippines will be within a day's trip from Manila. Great credit is due to the Air Corps of the United States Army and in particular to the enthusiastic interest and support of Major General Frank Parker for the recent acquisition and construction of landing fields at strategic points. In addition, the Air Corps has made exhaustive surveys and has drawn up plans for a system of air routes covering the entire Archipelago.

Within a few days we shall hail the first trans-Pacific flight by the Pan-American Airways, which will mark the beginning of a new epoch of travel and communication between the Philippines and the rest of the world.

PHILIPPINE CONSTABULARY

In recent months reforms have been inaugurated in the Philippine Constabulary, bringing the organization to a high state of efficiency. With the cooperation of the Legislature, which appropriated the necessary funds, the force has been increased from 400 officers and 5,047 men to its present strength of 549 officers and 8,512 enlisted men. Two signal companies, two chemical warfare companies, and one howitzer company have been organized. Twelve machine guns and several Thompson submachine guns have been acquired. At the same time it has been put upon a solid basis of promotions and rewards on merit only. The Filipino people and their American sponsors have every reason to feel pride and confidence in the Philippine Constabulary as it exists to-day. It is not an arm of war, but an agency of law and order, and our goal during the past two years and a half has been to make it a unit reasonably adequate to the needs of peace in the Islands. This, I am firmly convinced, has been achieved and my only injunction in this connection is that this goal be kept clearly and steadfastly in mind.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Economic progress in the Philippines has justified the hopes of those who set out 35 years ago to train a people for nationhood on the principles enunciated by the farseeing revolutionaries of 1776. Building on a foundation of enlightened altruism, America has consummated an achievement without parallel in the annals of colonial administration.

The early American Government found the Philippines with a meager and inadequate economy. The total of foreign trade was less than $100,000,000 a year. Imports exceeded exports and the balance of trade, both visible and invisible, was seriously against the Islands. Internal trade was seriously restricted and the Philippine economy was essentially that of the village. The country was almost wholly agricultural. Industrial development and improvement were negligible. Even in the field of agriculture, the necessity of importing a considerable fraction of the principal item of diet, consisting of rice, attested the inadequacy of the national economy. It is estimated that probably less than 5 per cent of the land area was under any form of cultivation.

By successive steps the Government proceeded to build a larger and surer economy and obtain a wider distribution of the growing wealth. In 1902 a discount of 25 per cent from the regular United States tariff rates was granted. In 1909 free trade was set up with mild restrictions. In 1913 unlimited free trade was established. In the years that followed, American import duties on foreign goods competing with Philippine goods were successively raised.

To-day at the end of thirty-five years of economic growth, the foreign trade of the Philippines is running approximately ₱400,000,000 annually—more than fourfold as compared with trade in 1901. Even the invisible items of trade have turned in favor of the Islands. Trade with America has acquired so favorable a position that it has offset for many years with a favorable balance the negative balances with all oriental and most European countries with which the Philippines trade.

The population has more than doubled. Land under cultivation has increased nearly threefold. The rice problem has been solved and during the past few years the Islands have been all but self-sufficient in cereal requirements. Should necessity arise the cattle-raising industry has made it possible to supply all of our meat. The production of abaca and tobacco has more than doubled. Corn has increased fourfold, rice fivefold, lumber and forest products sixfold, sugar sixfold. Copra production has increased ninefold, and mineral production has risen from a negligible position to one that is commanding the respect of the world.

Formerly all our products left our shores in raw state, or as nearly so as conditions of transport allowed. To-day nearly half our copra is converted into oil; practically all our sugar is carried to 96 degrees or more; our tobacco goes forth as cigars; and a respectable fraction of our abaca leaves as rope. The sound first steps of industrial development have been taken in the form of maximum elaboration of our agriculture products.

This economic advance has not been made on the basis of exploitation. A share of the profit has been passed all the way down the line, resulting in the highest labor wage in the Orient. Philippine labor has been preserved, guided and trained to a degree of competence of which we are proud. The public domain has not been exploited. Large estate grants—a sore spot in other days—have not been tolerated. The natural inheritance of the Filipino as the owner of his fatherland has not been violated. The Filipino has been encouraged to enter the professions. No door has been closed, no reasonable want has been denied him.

But what does it signify, this gaining of a better economy, if the chief aim of government is the well-being of the people generally? It is merely crass materialism, or has it improved and enriched the life and spirit of the generality of men and women? The public benefits that have accrued from the wealth created during the last thirty-five years are too numerous to catalog fully. A few may be sketched:

1. Higher standards of diet, clothing, and housing have lifted the Filipino laborer far above the level on which he formerly lived.
2. State funds have been provided out of which railroads, highways, bridges, and ports have been brought into useful being.
3. State payrolls make possible the highest average salary for Government employees and the largest number per capita to be found in the Orient or Tropics.
4. Private capital is available for investment in sugar mills, oil mills, store and offices, land and houses; capital that has been used to modernize the old industries and create new ones.
5. Less tangible but equally important, are the acquirement of better health, wider education, and higher scientific and artistic culture, and all the chain of advancing social standards, which come with an expanding and diffused economy.

GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED COMPANIES GAIN

All Government-owned companies showed decided gains during the past two years with the exception of the Manila Railroad Company, which has suffered loss due to optional currency clauses in its 4 per cent Southern Lines bonds and the reduction of freight volume. The Manila Hotel Company showed a net profit of ₱122,652.89 for the year 1934 as against a nominal profit of only ₱500.19 for the preceding year. The Cebu Portland Cement Company continued its profitable operation with a net profit of ₱432,510.68 as compared with ₱268,483.73 for the year 1933.

The Philippine National Bank had a profit of ₱2,931,266.90 as compared with ₱3,153,759.21 in 1933. This favorable showing has been continued in 1935, the first nine months of which show a profit of ₱3,060,244.07. These profits include recoveries of charge-off items, and have been accomplished despite the lowering of interest rates on all classes of paper.

The profits of the Philippine National Bank are not the true measure of its service to the people of these Islands. It provides service in many ways. As a depository of the Government it serves the country as a whole. The facilities of the Bank have been extended to the remote districts and at all of these places it provides facilities for a safe depository for funds, for exchanging checks for cash, for sending drafts for collection, and extending loans to small farmers and merchants.

PUBLIC HEALTH AND WELFARE

The Philippines has led during the American occupation all other oriental countries in progress made in health and welfare. Epidemics are controlled; pandemics are definitely of the past; commerce is no longer impeded by quarantine and other restrictions necessary to prevent the spread of disease; new measures have been inaugurated by the Government to improve the living conditions of the poor and to protect those economically distressed from the ravages of disease.

As a typical example, I refer particularly to the construction during the past two years of a modern water filtration plant for the City of Manila. It is significant of the progress which had been made that Manila, a tropical city, is thus provided with a water supply which is not excelled in purity by that of any other city in the world. The prevalence of water-borne diseases in the City of Manila has already been reduced and there is no doubt that the pure water now available for the inhabitants of Manila will be an important factor in the continued improvement in the public health of the city.

To-day the Insular Government operates 80 hospitals having 4,402 beds, and more than 2,000 dispensaries. During the past two years special attention has been devoted to the care of the insane and the mentally defective. Government facilities for the institutional treatment of insane patients have been doubled and many of the unfortunates who formerly wandered at large or were confined in jails now receive proper care. During the past year we have revised the standard of care of the insane and perfected our administrative methods to conform to the best practices in this field. Also, during the past year we have set up a school for mentally defective children at Welfareville where they can be trained, guided, and given the opportunity to become useful citizens.

Within the last two years we have developed a new approach to health and social work in the Philippines. The modern conception of Government supervision of all matters relating to the welfare of the public has been put into actual practice, and the Philippine Government has assumed full and complete responsibility for the relief of public distress due to any cause, whether it be social maladjustment, economic conditions, disaster or sickness.

The problem of providing medical care for the people of the barrios and the congested districts of the cities and towns is being met by a public health nursing service which is being extended to the more remote communities. Only within the last year we have placed two hundred and fifty additional nurses in this work. Traveling clinics, which are in fact mobile hospitals, are now being employed to reach the isolated villages of the Mountain Province.

In the overcrowded areas and slum districts of Manila and the larger towns we have established social services for the poor, the distressed, and the underprivileged. Greatly increased protection for the health and the welfare of children and the mothers of the slums has been thus provided. Methods of improving the housing of the poor have been adopted on a basis which will permit of continued progress.

Since 1933 the best the western world has to offer in public welfare service has been inaugurated here and been eagerly adopted by the Filipino people. A well grounded, long-time program of health and social services, has been established. If persistently developed over a period of years it will be an important factor in the success of the Commonwealth Government. A widespread social consciousness has been aroused among the officials and the people of the towns and barrios. I cannot overemphasize the importance of sustaining this social consciousness through the years to come. I trust that all of us who have been responsible and will make continued efforts along these lines and will consider ourselves to be trustees charged with preserving these services and making them more and more progressive and with seeing that there is no stagnation and, above all, no backward movement.

The present Government of the Philippine Islands may take just pride in its adoption of the humanitarian principles of government responsibility to ameliorate distress among our helpless people due to any cause, whether it be social maladjustment, economic conditions, disaster, or sickness.

BUREAU OF SCIENCE

The Bureau of Science, organized in 1901 as the Bureau of Government Laboratories, and taking its present name in 1905, has been of inestimable assistance in the progress achieved here. At first concerned almost wholly in protection against disease, it did magnificent work and for many years there has been no possibility of such major disasters as the outbreak of cholera that occurred in 1902, continuing for two years and taking the lives of nearly 100,000 people. In fact it can be said that cholera, bubonic plague, dysentery, and malaria are under control.

The Bureau is tireless in its efforts to assist in improving the general health of the people, in its researches to develop natural resources and in its cooperation with and helpfulness toward industry.

Thanks to the Bureau, copra production has become doubly profitable through elimination of wasteful methods, and similar assistance to the sugar industry has produced additional millions. The Bureau has assisted factories making paints, varnishes, cement and other industrial products from local raw materials; it has conducted experiments in the field of ceramics; aided materially in conservation of fish and game; in development of the mineral resources of the Islands; in improvement of crops, forestry, and tropical plants; and in general has made a place for itself in the very heart and marrow of the economic life of the people.

The Bureau is a research institute of extreme value. Its international reputation is deserved and it is one of the greatest legacies that the new Philippine Commonwealth will inherit from the American régime.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

In the administration of justice, there are outstanding milestones erected by the joint efforts of Americans and Filipinos, that reflect the genius of American institutions and the capacity of the Filipino people to absorb and apply democratic principles of government.

Before the galleons of Magellan touched these shores, the native laws were mostly based on usages and ancestral customs. The penalties for violations of penal laws were severe and cruel.

Spain did much to modernize the administration of justice in the Islands. The Spanish Penal Code was implanted here. A Supreme Court, courts of first instance in the provinces, and justice of the peace courts in the municipalities were established. Individual liberty, however, was hemmed in by a multitude of restrictions which resulted in many injustices especially to the common people.

One of the first acts of American rule was the organization of a judicial system, and in the Philippine Bill of 1902, Congress implanted in these Islands the same guaranties of constitutional and individual liberty that are found in the United States constitution with the exception of the right to keep and bear arms and the system of trial by jury. A reorganization of the courts was effected and orderly procedure was provided for the trial cases. In all criminal prosecutions, a speedy and public trial was guaranteed to the accused; his right to bail, to compulsory process of obtaining witnesses in his favor, to be assisted by counsel, and not to be compelled to be a witness against himself, were expressly recognized.

To-day we have a modern system of courts and judicial procedure. Conscientious efforts have been exerted during the last thirty-five years to guarantee to the people of these Islands a fair and impartial administration of justice. In line with this policy, there has been introduced recently a far-reaching innovation in the selection of judges. I refer to the organization of the Judicial Council, which has been functioning satisfactorily. Properly guided and directed, this Judicial Council should insure to the people of these Islands the appointment of competent judges selected primarily on merit.

In the field of penology, there have been introduced changes intended to aid the accused and to ameliorate the condition of those convicted by the courts of justice. I refer to the law providing for public defenders, the Indeterminate Sentence Law, and the law creating the probation office which is now being organized.

Since the Indeterminate Sentence Law went into effect in January, 1934, there has been marked improvement in the behavior and morale of prisoners. During the twenty-two months of its effectiveness 645 prisoners have been given parole. Of these only 3 have violated their parole. The probation system, which will soon be in operation, will complement the Indeterminate Sentence Law. We have every reason to expect that these two institutions will be found eminently suited to the social conditions of these Islands, because the spiritual side of the Filipino character is especially receptive to the benign idea of reform.

CULTURAL DESTINIES

The cultural prospects of the Filipino people are full of promise. The racial and cultural differences of the Philippine population have been unduly exaggerated. Evidence is strong that there is building up in these Islands a true general Philippine culture around which future development will revolve. A blending of diverse elements in the population has been going on continuously for 2,000 years, and has been especially rapid during the Spanish and American periods due to the greater peace and order and freer communication.

The increasing homogeneity in the population is not a mere altruistic hope. There is strong scientific basis for holding that seemingly discordant and nonfusible elements not only can be but are being fused. From the time of Dr. Jose Rizal down to the present the opinion has been held by many American and Filipino authorities that among the non-Christian population are elements that constitute a strong asset for the future Philippines.

The Pagan, Moro and other non-Christian peoples possess essentially the same racial traits and innate psychology as the majority of the inhabitants of the Christian provinces. Investigations of Professor Beyer and others show that the Filipino blend type is developing steadily in all parts of the Islands—regardless of linguistic, religious, and cultural differences. Such studies forecast the steady growth of an harmonious and blended Filipino race that will one day be characteristic throughout the Islands.

On the cultural side, there will be need for much patient and tolerant consideration in dealing with the pagan and non-Christian groups. A policy of gradual education and improvement of economic conditions, however, will eventually bring about cultural amalgamation and develop a strong and unified Philippine population.

GOVERNMENTAL FINANCE

This gratifying and remarkable expansion in the natural economy is reflected also in the parallel story of governmental finances. Let us look at a few figures. Excluding bond issues, the total revenues in all funds of the central government in 1901 amounted to ₱21,532,490. They rose to a high peak of ₱92,783,173.70 in the boom year of 1929. In the last fiscal year (1934) they totalled ₱78,674,751.33.

Provincial revenues increased during the same period from ₱2,410,437.16 to ₱24,285,978.07 in 1934, reaching an all-time high of ₱30,889,071.38 in 1930.

In municipal and city governments, revenues increased from ₱10,059,546.58 in 1906 to ₱36,509,794.48 in 1934, with a high figure in 1929 of ₱44,881,945.92.

With the two chartered cities included total public revenues in the islands grew from ₱48,772,193.21 in 1910 to ₱119,792,900.38 in 1934.

These large levies on the public and their industries have in large measures been returned to them or preserved in the form of increasing public services and valuable fixed properties owned by the Government. The permanent investments of the central government alone in real property and equipment and other forms have a cost value of ₱267,800,493.23 as of December 31, 1934.

Interesting as they are, these matters are perhaps of less immediate importance and concern to us at the present moment than the current financial condition of the Government. In all funds of the central government on December 31, 1934, there was a surplus of more than seventy-five million pesos (₱75,179,189.42), as compared with less than nine and one-half million pesos (₱9,331,582.85) on June 30, 1901. In the general fund alone there was a current surplus of approximately thirty-seven million pesos (₱36,900,492.19) on December 31, 1934. Of this amount a substantial portion was cash in the governmental depositories. The excess of cash over recorded obligations and liabilities was almost seventeen million pesos (₱16,881,497.41) as of December 31, 1934. In addition to this approximately ₱30,000,000 awaits clearance in Washington and will soon be paid into the Philippine Treasury from excise taxes levied and collected on coconut oil under a recent Act of Congress, which will leave our general fund in the strongest position of our history.

The bonded debt of the central government and its subdivisions is not excessive. At the end of 1934 it stood at slightly more than one hundred and sixty million pesos (₱160,364,700), but with sinking funds totalling more than sixty millions (₱60,895,286.55), the net bonded indebtedness is slightly less than one hundred million pesos (₱99,469,413.45). The Manila Railroad Company, whose stock is wholly owned by the Government, also has a net bonded debt after sinking fund of ₱48,856,424.14. Interest on bonds of the Philippine Railway Company, amounting to ₱17,098,000, is guaranteed by the central government until July 1937.

Philippine public finances are sound. In some respects they might well excite the envy of many of the large nations of the world today. In the central government for the past two and three-quarter years, expenditures from all funds have been considerably less than the current revenues accruing to those funds. Our budget is balanced, in fact as well as in form.

The surplus of the central government should be jealously guarded. It may be difficult to borrow externally at advantageous rates of interest. Lack of large local capital accumulations limits the possibilities of internal loans. While the governmental bonded debt is not excessive and is being properly serviced, major financial problems exist in the bonded indebtedness of our railroads, and in the pension funds of the Government wherein liabilities are steadily accruing without adequate provision to meet them. These pension funds at present are not actuarially sound and a Government policy for their rehabilitation should be instituted without delay. Several provinces are financially weak. Ordinary and recurring normal expenditures for the national defense will tax Government resources severely. Continuing demands may be expected for concessions to delinquent taxpayers, and the prospects of increasing revenues are not favorable without extreme measures that might curtail business and investment activities.

It would seem wise, therefore, to keep the present surplus intact as the proper reserve for a government of the position and size of the Philippine Government. Extraordinary and nonrecurring accretions should be recognized and treated as windfalls that will not be repeated. Let us look well to cut within our financial cloth. In our present economy and environment, the safe course for this Government is to keep its budget in balance and its current expenditures within current income. Without a sound financial position and a program of sound public finance, the most essential and fundamental functions of government are handicapped and may be completely paralyzed. No governmental activity comes ahead of an orderly financial program.

In closing this subject I should like to repeat the exhortation contained in my first address to the Philippine people:

The first duty of such a government (this Government), in order of statement if not of importance, is to conduct its own busness on a sound and orderly basis, efficiently and economically, giving a peso in actual service for every peso of income. It must carefully budget its expenditures so that they will not exceed its revenue or dissipate the public resources in unnecessary services or activities. For the time being we must have recourse to uncompromising economy in spending. The public debt also must be kept within proper and conservative limits. This result will be assured by the preparation of a careful program and strict and rigid adherence to it by all the departments of the Government. A budget is valuable only if, and when, expenditures are kept within it. Together we will make a stubborn stand against the unwholesome practice of allowing deficits to creep into our balance sheets.

The present sound and satisfactory state of governmental finances, with budgets balanced and substantial reserves at hand, is clear indication that an honest effort has been made to practice what we have preached.

POLITICAL PROGRESS

With the development we have been tracing in the fields of economics and finance, communication and education, science and hygiene, political development has kept pace. The Philippine public gradually attained an understanding of the theory and processes of popular government, and acquired experience in its practice. This was according to the plans conceived and formulated by the first American administrators. Small beginnings had been made in Spanish times, with a limited right of suffrage and the privilege of electing municipal and barrio officials. Municipalities became autonomous in 1901. Provincial boards came under popular control in 1905. Two years later the first national legislative assembly was inaugurated. Filipinos were taking rapidly to the ways and methods of American democracy.

The next step was the Jones Act in 1916, under which we have operated until to-day. Within the short space of sixteen years, the Filipino people had qualified themselves to the satisfaction of the American Congress for exclusive control of the legislative branch of their Government. In large measure they had justified the great American faith in the inherent capacity of people to govern themselves, given equal advantages of education and training. The administration of justice also was gradually placed in the hands of the Filipinos. Although the executive branch until now has been under American direction and control, actual administration during recent years has been largely in Philippine hands. The recent extension of equal suffrage to women was a notable contribution by the Philippine Legislature to democratic progress.

In this steady advance in the art of democratic and constitutional government toward the ultimate goal of complete independence, the crowning event has been the framing and adoption by the Philippine people, under the terms of the Tydings-McDuffie Act, of a permanent constitution for their government. This admirable document, with its guarantees of representative government and freedom for the individual citizen, is eloquent proof of the success of our policies and the soundness of our political faith.

Under the stipulation of the Tydings-McDuffie Act, by voting the adoption of this constitution, the Filipino people themselves definitely and freely decided the matter of independence. This Act was fundamentally a product of the political idealism and unselfishness of the American people. It was the generous act of a generous people. If some adjustments should appear desirable to alleviate unnecessary hardships, we may be confident that the American Congress will not refuse to consider them. With full warning, however, and understanding of the inconvenience and risk and hardship that may be entailed by their separation from the United States, the Filipino people have definitely and gladly assumed the conditions and responsibilities and have adhered to the course that leads ultimately to full sovereignty and independence.

America has kept faith with her political principles and has been true to her origins. Putting aside considerations of empire and self-interest, with deep understanding of the strong yearning of a people for political freedom, acknowledging the right of a people to self-determination when supported by demon-trated understanding of constitutional self-government and evidence of capacity to sustain it, the United States has accepted the decision that has been made here, and is prepared to surrender its trusteeship. In good time this will be done.

Material progress is dearly bought and of little worth when obtained at the price of exploitation and suppression of a people's patrimony and liberty and their individual initiative. The record of America cannot be told merely in terms of public revenues and economic production. Things more precious in the life of a people are the preservation of racial integrity and culture, the enlargement of human liberty, the cultivation of a spirit of adventure and initiative. Those priceless qualities, so essential in the building of a nation, have been permitted to grow and flourish by the liberal and farseeing policies that have guided the administration of Philippine affairs by American authorities. With these elements of characters and mutual toleration of differences in religious faith, aided by a favorable geographical grouping and freedom from deep racial conflicts, the Philippines, under wise and patient and just leadership, may become a strong and united nation.

So we have come to this present hour. Through the idealistic policies of her statesmen, McKinley, Root and Taft, and Wilson and Roosevelt, supplemented by the conscientious and devoted service of her representatives in these Islands, and the strong friendship and sympathy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the political faith of America has flowered and is nearing fruition. Free education, constitutional principles, freedom of conscience and opinion, material progress, economic development, stable finances, responsible government,—these essentials of a sound and enduring democracy have been established in the land.

A splendid chapter in Philippine history, in which this body under able leaders has played a distinguished part, is now coming to a close. With a large and growing population, expanding industry and agriculture, easy communication and increasing wealth, a government financially stable and sound, an enlightened press, and an informed and patriotic citizenry, the sinews of statehood and the elements of a strong national life have been provided. We place in the hands of our successors a rich estate, a high trust, and a glorious privilege to preserve and administer this Government that we have built together upon the faith and confidence of the American people.

Another chapter remains to be written before the record is complete and the mission accomplished. To assure its success a further period of adjustment has been provided, under the protection and guidance of the United States authority. Retaining full rights of sovereignty, with appropriate functions and authority vested in the President and other agencies for the protection of its legitimate interests under the Independence Act, the United States Government is now entrusting direct management of domestic affairs to the newly elected representatives of the Philippine people,—the President and members of the National Assembly.

Their success and the success of the Commonwealth will rest not upon the fine hopes and enthusiasm of this moment. It will require deep and abiding loyalty to the principles of sound finance and social justice, freedom from measures that are selfish and oppressive, steadfast devotion to the ideals and principles of democracy. The personal aspect of government must be minimized. All officials should be humble before the majesty of the law. Above personal success and personal loyalty, the good citizen and true patriot will place the supremacy of the law, duty to the State, and devotion to the public good and welfare.

This great and happy venture of the American and Filipino people is not yet ended. With an altered framework and broader autonomy, the Philippine Government goes on under the American flag, with the full confidence and support of the people and Government of the United States. As in all good books of high adventure and romance, we close this chapter anticipating the next, confident that the Divine Author will bring the story to a fair ending in accordance with the faith and high purpose of its beginning.

A CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF EVENTS LEADING TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES

August 12, 1898 (August 13, 5:30 a. m., Manila time). — A protocol of peace between the United States and Spain was signed, authorizing the United States to occupy and hold the City, bay, and harbor of Manila, pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace which shall determine the control, disposition, and government of the Philippines.

August 26, 1898.—General Merritt assumed the duties of Military Governor and issued a proclamation assuming the administration of civil affairs of the country; provost marshal and other courts were organized, and the divisions of the Spanish administration were continued in existence and reorganized with American army officers in charge.

December 10, 1898.—Treaty of Peace ending the Spanish-American War was signed.

January 18, 1899.—The civilian members of the First Philippine Commission assembled at Washington to receive the President's instructions, among which, using the words of the President of the Commission, "To aid the Government at Washington in shaping that policy (the consummation of the treaty of peace and the necessity of extending the actual occupation throughout the Islands), and to cooperate with the naval and military authorities at Manila in the effective extension of American Sovereignty over the Archipelago."

April 11, 1899.—Ratifications were exchanged by the two countries—Spain and the United States and on the same day the Treaty of Paris was publicly proclaimed by the President of the United States wherein it is stipulated that Spain cedes to the United States the Archipelago known as the Philippine Islands.

September, 1899.—The First Philippine Commission was recalled.

November 2, 1899.—Preliminary report of the First Philippine Commission was submitted.

- January 31, 1900.*—Final report of 4 volumes was submitted and transmitted by the President to Congress, recommending a territorial form of government, following the Jeffersonian scheme of government for Louisiana with an elected lower house and an upper house half elected and half nominated.
- March 16, 1900.*—The Second Philippine Commission was appointed with William H. Taft as President and Dean C. Worcester, Luke E. Wright, Henry C. Ide, and Bernard Moses, members, all civilian, and in contrast with the First Philippine Commission not an advisory body, but a civil agency with ample powers.
- April 17, 1900.*—The President issued instructions to the Second Philippine Commission, which instructions oftentimes are referred to as "The Magna Charta of the Philippines."
- September 1, 1900 to July 4, 1901.*—The Commanding General of the Army remained as Civil Executive.
- March 2, 1901.*—The Spooner Amendment was approved, which marks the change of the Philippine Islands from military (President, as commander in Chief) to Civil (Congressional) government.
- July 21, 1901.*—First Civil Governor was appointed—William H. Taft—and inducted into office on the fourth of July following. Thereafter, the Commission became the sole legislative body for the Islands until the inauguration of the Philippine Assembly on October 16, 1907, when it shared with the latter legislative functions over the Christian provinces.
- September 1, 1901.*—By the President's orders, the four members of the Commission were made Heads of the Executive Departments.
- October 29, 1901.*—One of the Heads of the Department was designated Vice Governor.
- July 1, 1902.*—The Philippine Bill was approved—Act of Congress of July 1, 1902.
- July 3, 1902.*—The President terminated the office of Military Governor.
- February 6, 1905.*—The title of Civil Governor was changed to Governor-General by Act of Congress.
- October 16, 1907.*—Inauguration of the First Philippine Assembly.
- October, 1913.*—President Wilson appointed Filipino majority membership in the Philippine Commission.
- August 29, 1916.*—The Philippine Autonomy Act or "Jones Law" was approved, providing for two most important matters—present autonomy for the Filipino people and future independence for them.
- March 24, 1934.*—Public Act No. 127 of the Congress of the United States otherwise known as the "Tydings-McDuffie Act" was approved.
- May 1, 1934.*—The Tydings-McDuffie Act was accepted by the Philippine Legislature.
- July 10, 1934.*—Election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention.
- July 30, 1934.*—Constitutional Convention was convened.
- February 8, 1935.*—The Constitution of the Philippine was adopted by the Constitutional Convention.
- March 23, 1935.*—The President certified that the Constitution of the Philippines was in substantial conformity with the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act.
- May 14, 1935.*—The Constitution was ratified by the people of the Philippine Islands.
- September 17, 1935.*—Election of officials of the Commonwealth.
- October 12, 1935.*—The Legislature met in joint session and publicly counted the votes cast for President and Vice President of the Philippines and determined the result thereof and certified to the Governor-General.
- November 15, 1935.*—The President and Vice President of the Philippines and Members of the National Assembly assumed office.

THE LEGISLATIVE BUILDING

WHERE THE CONSTITUTION OF THE PHILIPPINES WAS FRAMED AND DRAFTED, AND WHERE THE INAUGURATION OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES TOOK PLACE ON NOVEMBER 15, 1935.

CHAPTER V

THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES

BENEATH A SKY OF TROPICAL BLUE radiantly reflecting the rays of a bright autumnal sun, more than a half million persons assembled in Manila at the Legislative Building early on the morning of November 15, 1935, to witness and to participate in the establishment of a new government for this country, the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

A bugle call announced the processional march of officials and distinguished guests at 7:45 a.m. As they descended the center aisle of the huge ceremonial stand erected upon the steps of the main entrance to the Legislative Building, the great audience repeatedly applauded until, following the entrance of the Honorable George H. Dern, Secretary of War of the United States, the National Colors of the United States and the Philippine Islands were borne to the rostrum. A deep hush fell then upon the vast assemblage, and His Grace, the Archbishop of Cebu, pronounced the Invocation opening the Inaugural Ceremonies.

"To the King of ages, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory for ever and ever, Amen.

"We thank Thee for this day so longed for by the Filipino people, dawning with bright hopes for the fulfillment of our cherished and legitimate aspirations

"Deign, O Lord, to bless America and Spain, and deign to complete Thy work in us.

"We pray Thee, O God of Wisdom and Justice, from whom all authority comes, to assist with Thy light and power the authorities who have been elected by the will of their brethren . . . the President and the Vice President. . . .

"Let Thy divine wisdom enlighten the deliberations of the National Assembly Bless our industries and commerce. Preserve union and peace, liberty and equality amongst Thy beloved people. . . ."

Then, at the conclusion of the Invocation, the last Governor-General of the Philippines, Frank Murphy, now High Commissioner, by virtue of the oath of office he had taken at Malacañan on the preceding day, introduced the Secretary of War, Honorable George H. Dern, who delivered his Inaugural Address and then called upon the High Commissioner to read the proclamation of President Roosevelt, announcing the results of the general election on September 17, 1935. This was done, and thus was completed the first part of the inaugural Ceremonies.

A thrill of expectancy, electric in its intensity, now swept through the vast audience as the President-elect rose to take his oath of office. Slowly and distinctly the Honorable Ramon Avanceña, Chief Justice of the Philippine Supreme Court, pronounced the solemn words, and, as he concluded, the President-elect repeated them after him, into the waiting microphone eager to convey them to every corner of the civilized world. Followed then the booming of the gun salutes, the ruffles and flourishes, and the playing of the National Anthem proclaiming that on this day, November 15 of the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-five, there had been inducted into office the first President of the Philippines, Manuel L. Quezon.

After the administration of the oath of office to Vice President-elect Osmeña and to the newly elected members of the National Assembly, President Quezon began his Inaugural Address, with the words:

"Fellow-Countrymen:

"In the exercise of your constitutional prerogative you have elected me to the presidency of the Commonwealth. I am profoundly grateful for this new expression of your confidence, and God helping me I shall not fail you."

And in conclusion said:

"I face the future with hope and fortitude, certain that God never abandons a people who ever follow His unerring and guiding hand. May He give me light, strength, and courage evermore that I may not falter in the hour of service to my people."

At exactly two minutes before nine, the Secretary of War of the United States proclaimed:

"I do hereby announce that the heretofore existing Government of the Philippines is now terminated, and that the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines is entering upon its rights, privileges, powers, and duties...."

A new government for this country had been established. A new era for the Philippines had been begun.

INTRODUCTION
OF THE
SECRETARY OF WAR GEORGE H. DERN OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

By
HON. FRANK MURPHY
GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

FRIENDS: For this great and inspiring occasion, we make grateful acknowledgment to the steadfast faith of the American people and the Congress of the United States and to the encouragement and assistance of that great friend of the Philippine people, the President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

As further evidence of his deep interest and friendship, President Roosevelt has requested and designated another true friend of Philippine liberty to represent him on this occasion—a former Governor of one of the sovereign American States and a distinguished administrator of one of the great departments of the American Government, that Department which under his guidance has specially guarded and protected the interests of the Philippine Government and has supervised the administration of its affairs. The Philippine people and all who share official responsibility for their welfare and Government rejoice in the presence here today of Hon. George H. Dern, Secretary of War, whom I now have the honor to present to you.

HON. GEORGE H. DERN
SECRETARY OF WAR OF THE UNITED STATES
AT THE
INAUGURATION OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE PHILIPPINES
AT MANILA, NOVEMBER 15, 1935.

CITIZENS OF THE PHILIPPINES:

I have the distinguished honor to come to you as the representative of the President of the United States, to participate in the ceremonies of this momentous occasion. We are about to establish and put into operation the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, as ordained by the Congress of the United States. This event is another landmark in your steady progress toward the fulfillment of your aspirations to be a completely independent sovereign nation—ultimately to be realized through the practical, cooperative efforts of two peoples imbued with the same ideals of liberty and self-government.

President Roosevelt asked me to say that his heart is with you on this historic day. A radiogram just received from him asks me to give the following message to the Filipino people:

"Please convey to President Quezon and the Filipino people on the occasion of the birth of the Commonwealth of the Philippines my sincere congratulations on this great forward step in the establishment of popular self-government, and express to them my confidence in their ability to carry out successfully the final step in the accomplishment of their complete independence."

Thirty-seven years ago, through the fortunes of war, the Philippine Islands came under the flag of the United States. It was no premeditated aggression, and there was no thought of territorial aggrandizement.

Even before American occupation the Filipino people had started their struggle for freedom, with which Americans instinctively sym-pathized. What, then, was to be the attitude of the United States toward a dependency which it had so accidentally acquired? A policy of colonial expansion and exploitation was a departure from our national ideals, and therefore did not commend itself to the American people.

Our decision was soon made. Less than two years after American occupation President McKinley's letter of instructions to the first Philippine Commission laid down these basic principles:

"In all the forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe, the commission should bear in mind that the government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction, or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands. * * *

Later he declared:

"It is our purpose to establish in the Philippines a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants and to prepare them for self-government and to give them self-government when they are ready for it and as rapidly as they are ready for it."

That promise was made in good faith. In order that it might be creditably carried out, it implied a period of training and preparation. Greedy exploitation was repugnant to our minds. We declared that the good of the dependency—not our own good—must be the first consideration—a new idea, perhaps, in colonial administration. We harked back to the spirit of 1776 and we conceded that the Filipinos had the same rights as we claimed when we were colonists of Great Britain. The question is sometimes asked: "Why does the United States give up so valuable a territorial possession as the Philippine Islands?" The answer is that the value of the Islands to the United States does not enter into the calculation. We have proceeded in accordance with the American conception of the fundamental right of peoples to govern themselves.

Having declared this unprecedented colonial policy, there arose the practical question of how and when it should be carried out. Through no fault of their own the people of the Philippines had not been trained in the difficult art of self-government and had never been given an opportunity to demonstrate their capacity to rule themselves. We had no means of knowing whether they had been disciplined, as Anglo-Saxons had been disciplined for centuries, to abide by the expressed will of the majority, however obnoxious that will might be to the minority. Stable popular government is impossible without majority rule. Moreover, it was difficult for us to comprehend how popular government could be successful without popular education, which we Americans regard as the keystone of the arch of democracy. And so one of the first things we did was to send school teachers over here in large numbers to establish a progressive educational system. And today universal education is the Philippine ideal as it is the American ideal.

Popular government was begun promptly and developed steadily. The election of municipal and provincial officials was the first step, soon to be followed by an elective lower house of the legislature, and somewhat later by a completely elective legislature. And now we are taking the last step.

I need not trace the history of independence legislation. The Tydings-McDuffie Act, passed in 1934, and accepted by the Philippine Legislature, is the result of an earnest effort on the part of the Congress to meet the aims and aspirations of the Filipino people, so far as was consistent with harmonizing the various interests affected thereby. Its enactment is an expression of confidence of the Congress of the United States in the capacity of the Filipino people to carry out successfully the next and final steps in the program for the establishment of an independent Filipino nation.

The prescribed transition period of ten years before complete independence becomes an accomplished fact seemed advisable and prudent in order to launch the Philippine Republic under the most favorable auspices. It provides adequate safeguards for the interests of both the American and the Filipino peoples. The problems that must be worked out in this period are vital and must be given the most careful and thorough consideration.

President Roosevelt, in his message to the Congress on March 2, 1934, said:

"May I emphasize that while we desire to grant complete independence at the earliest proper moment to effect this result without allowing sufficient time for necessary political and economic adjustments would be a definite injustice to the people of the Philippine Islands themselves little short of a denial of independence itself."

The Independence Act is a broad grant to the Filipino people of local government. The enlarged powers granted under this act reside essentially in the people. The Commonwealth Government is being organized in accordance with the provisions of your own Constitution, which goes into effect today and which was formulated and drafted by delegates of your own selection. It is an enlightened, democratic document, and does great credit to the Filipino people. It contains a bill of rights expressing what the American people believe to be the basic principles of free government. Perhaps the greatest heritage that the United States has bequeathed to you is the bill of rights included in both the first and second organic acts of the Congress, and carried over into your Constitution.

You are about to witness the inauguration of the Chief Executive whom you have elected by popular vote; and all the agencies of local government will soon be functioning under the provisions of your Constitution. Your President and Vice President, the members of your Supreme Court, and the other Islands officials heretofore appointed by the President of the United States, will take office under the provisions of your own Constitution and the laws of your own National Assembly. Thus your local affairs pass to your own control, and you have the full responsibility of citizens of the Philippines, upon whose shoulders rest the mantle of government.

I may be pardoned an expression of pride and pleasure in the privilege of witnessing an event resulting from the cooperative efforts of two peoples situated on opposite sides of the globe, but laboring together to establish ultimately a new member of the family of independent nations. There is something unique and inspiring in the spectacle of two peoples voluntarily agreeing to dissolve the bands which unite them, and to go their separate ways and yet that is the event to which we now eagerly look forward as the final consummation of the program for Philippine Independence.

It is a source of satisfaction to the American people to know that the fiscal affairs of your government are at this time, perhaps, at the best level in its history. Your finances are in excellent condition. Income for the past year exceeded expenditures. There is but a small public debt. Your governmental structure is supported by a prosperous and increasing commerce and by a thriving industry, backed by agricultural, mineral, and forest resources adequate for the maintenance of a high standard of living for all the people.

During my present visit I have been astonished by the fertility of your soil, the diversity and abundance of your crops, the wealth of your mines, the vastness of your forests, the excellence of your harbors, and, greater than all of these, the industry and virtue of your people. With such resources, and with good government, you should succeed.

With the present change in your government, the office of Governor-General is abolished. This exalted office has been filled by a long line of distinguished Americans, beginning with that illustrious statesman, William H. Taft, and ending with the able, efficient, and warm-hearted man who has served you during the past two and one-half years, the Honorable Frank Murphy. In the discharge of his duties, Governor-General Murphy has made a record of which his fellow-citizens at home are justly proud, and I know that you people of the Philippines honor and love him. I have no doubt that it is great satisfaction to you that he now becomes the first United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, and as such he will be the representative of American sovereignty and authority in your country.

While the American record in the Philippines is not ended, it is drawing to a close. As Secretary Root on one occasion said: "The country which exercises control over a colony is always itself on trial in the public opinion of mankind." We hope, of course, that the world will say of us that our work here has been well done. But especially, we hope that you, the people of these Islands, may continue to look with grateful appreciation upon the day that set this beautiful land under the sovereignty of the United States, and to feel that our sojourn here has been a benediction to you. And I hope, too, that the people of the United States may forever feel a just pride and satisfaction in the monument thus built in your hearts. We shall continue to be united by the bands of comradeship and mutual good will.

I trust that the people of the United States will not forget to be grateful to the men and women who have reflected credit upon their native land by giving their talents, their energies, and their years to the service of their country and yours in this far-away territory.

I should be most unfair, people of the Philippines, if I did not point out that the main credit for the rapid evolution of your popular government is due to yourselves. You have been tried and not found wanting. You have had a passion for independence for many years, and with each new opportunity you have, in the most convincing manner, demonstrated your capacity to perform the varied and intricate tasks of government. In legislation you have shown vision, wisdom, fairness, and restraint, with a statesmanlike grasp of your problems. In administration the Governor-General gives unstinted praise to his Filipino associates for their ability and integrity. In drafting your Constitution you have shown a profound understanding of the fundamental principles of democracy, and you have produced a document remarkable for its impartial provisions in behalf of all the people. In the judiciary I wish to pay tribute to those distinguished Filipino jurists who, in cooperation with their American colleagues, have made your Supreme Court an everlasting credit to both the American and the Filipino people.

As Americans, therefore, we do not boast of what we have done here. Rather, we are gratified at having been given the rare privilege of cooperating with you in establishing a new democratic member of the family of nations in the Western Pacific.

Mr. President, as generally affecting the affairs of the Filipino people, I feel that you have an exceptional opportunity to carry out the next steps of this vital program. The responsibility for the happiness and well-being of this people is entrusted to the new government under your leadership. President Roosevelt has faith in your devotion to democratic principles and in your ability and that of your colleagues to carry the program through in a manner well calculated to serve the interests of your people. I most cordially wish you every success in the administration of your high office.

And so, citizens of the Philippines, I congratulate you with all my heart upon the consummation of your desires. May your self-rule always be characterized by that enlightened justice which alone can make you a great nation. And may you always have reason to feel that the United States is interested in your welfare and is your true friend.

HIS EXCELLENCY
MANUEL L. QUEZON
President of the Philippines

(Delivered November 15, 1935, at the Legislative Building, Manila, Philippines)

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN:

In the exercise of your constitutional prerogative you have elected me to the presidency of the Commonwealth. I am profoundly grateful for this new expression of your confidence, and God helping me I shall not fail you.

The event which is now taking place in our midst transcends in importance the mere induction into office of your Chief Executive. We are bringing into being a new nation. We are inaugurating its government. We are seeing the fruition of our age-old striving for liberty. We are witnessing the final stage in the fulfillment of the noblest undertaking ever attempted by any nation in its dealing with a subject people. And how well this task has been performed is attested to by the blessings which from fourteen million people go to America in this solemn hour. President McKinley's cherished hope has been fulfilled—the Filipinos look back with gratitude to the day when Destiny placed their land under the beneficent guidance of the people of the United States.

It is fitting that high dignitaries of the American Government should attend these ceremonies. We are thankful to them for their presence here. The President of the United States, His Excellency, Franklin D. Roosevelt, ever solicitous of our freedom and welfare, has sent to us, as his personal representative, the Secretary of War, Honorable George H. Dern, whose friendship for our people has proven most valuable in the past. Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns, distinguished members of the Senate with their floor leader, Senator Robinson, and no less distinguished members of the House of Representatives have traveled ten thousand miles to witness this historic event. I feel that by their presence the whole American Nation is here to-day to rejoice with us in the fulfillment of America's pledge generously given that the Filipino people is to become free and independent. It is my hope that the ties of friendship and affection which bind the Philippines to America will remain unbroken and grow stronger after the severance of our political relations with her.

In behalf of the Filipino people, I express deep appreciation to Honorable Frank Murphy, our last Governor-General, for his just and efficient administration and for the wholehearted assistance he has rendered us in the difficult task of laying the constitutional foundations of our new government.

As we enter upon the threshold of independent nationhood, let us pause for a moment to pay tribute to the memory of Rizal and Bonifacio and all the heroes of our sacred cause in grateful acknowledgment of their patriotic devotion and supreme sacrifice.

Fellow countrymen: The government which we are inaugurating to-day is only a means to an end. It is an instrumentality placed in our hands to prepare ourselves fully for the responsibilities of complete independence. It is essential that this last step be taken with full consciousness of its significance and the great opportunities that it affords to us.

Under the Commonwealth, our life may not be one of ease and comfort, but rather of hardship and sacrifice. We shall face the problems which lie in our path, sparing neither time nor effort in solving them. We shall build a government that will be just, honest, efficient and strong so that the foundations of the coming Republic may be firm and enduring—a government, indeed, that must satisfy not only the passing needs of the hour but also the exacting demands of the future. We do not have to tear down the existing institutions in order to give way to a statelier structure. There will be no violent changes from the established order of things, except such as may be absolutely necessary to carry into effect the innovations contemplated by the Constitution. A new edifice shall arise, not out of the ashes of the past, but out of the standing materials of the living present.

Reverence for law as the expression of the popular will is the starting point in a democracy. The maintenance of peace and public order is the joint obligation of the government and the citizen. I have an abiding faith in the good sense of the people and in their respect for law and the constituted authority. Widespread public disorder and lawlessness may cause the downfall of constitutional government and lead to American intervention. Even after independence, if we should prove ourselves incapable of protecting life, liberty, and property of nationals and foreigners, we shall be exposed to the danger of intervention by foreign powers. No one need have any misgivings as to the attitude of the Government toward lawless individuals or subversive movements. They shall be dealt with firmly. Sufficient armed forces will be maintained at all times to quell and suppress any rebellion against the authority of this Government or the sovereignty of the United States.

President Quezon stressing a point.

There can be no progress except under the auspices of peace. Without peace and public order it will be impossible to promote education, improve the condition of the masses, protect the poor and ignorant against exploitation, and otherwise insure the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property. I appeal, therefore, to every Filipino to give the Government his loyal support so that tranquility may reign supreme in our beloved land.

Our Constitution establishes an independent judiciary by providing for security of tenure and compensation of our judges. But independence is not the only objective of a good judiciary. Equally, if not more important, is its integrity which will depend upon the judicious selection of its members. The administration of justice cannot be expected to rise higher than the moral and intellectual standards of the men who dispense it. To bulwark the fortification of an orderly and just government, it shall be my task to appoint to the bench only men of proven honesty, character, learning, and ability, so that every one may feel when he appears before the courts of justice that he will be protected in his rights, and that no man in this country from the Chief Executive to the last citizen is above the law.

We are living to-day amidst the storm and stress of one of the most tragic epochs of history. Acute unemployment and economic distress threaten the stability of governments the world over. The very foundations of civilized society are shaken. The common man alone can save humanity from disaster. It is our duty to prove to him that under a republican system of government he can have every opportunity to attain his happiness and that of his family. Protection to labor, especially to working women and minors, just regulation of the relations between labor and capital in industry and agriculture, solicitous regard on the part of the government for the well-being of the masses are the means to bring about the needed economic and social equilibrium between the component elements of society.

A government draws the breath of life from its finances, and it must balance its income and expenditures as any other going business concern if it expects to survive. It is my duty, then, to see that the Government of the Commonwealth live within its means and that it stand four-square on a well balanced budget.

The larger expenditures which the grave responsibilities ahead of us will entail, including national defense, must be borne by taxation. So long as we are able to meet those responsibilities from our present income, we shall not impose new taxes. But we are among the least taxed people in the world and, therefore, when necessity arises, we should be willing to accept the burden of increased taxation. Liberty and independence can be possessed only by those who are ready to pay the price in life or fortune.

To enable us more adequately to meet the new responsibilities of the Commonwealth and to raise the living conditions of our people, we must increase the wealth of the Nation by giving greater impetus to economic development, improving our methods of agriculture, diversifying our crops, creating new industries, and fostering our domestic and foreign commerce. I trust that the forthcoming trade conference between representatives of the United States and the Philippines will result in a more just and beneficial commercial relation between the two countries.

The establishment of an economical, simple, and efficient government; the maintenance of an independent civil service; the implantation of an adequate system of public instruction to develop moral character, personal discipline, civic conscience, and vocational efficiency; the safeguarding of the health and vigor of the race; the conservation and development of our natural resources—these and other matters of equal import are couched upon at length in the platform of the Coalition and in my speech of acceptance of my nomination, and it is unnecessary for me to reiterate my views regarding them. Having been elected on the virtuality of that platform and the policies enunciated by me in the course of the presidential campaign, I renew my pledge faithfully to carry them into execution.

Good will toward all nations shall be the golden rule of my administration. The peoples of the earth are interdependent and their prosperity and happiness are inseparably linked with each other. International brotherhood and cooperation are therefore necessary. Amity and friendship, fairness and square deal in our relations with other nations and their citizens or subjects, protection in their legitimate investments and pursuits, in return for their temporary allegiance to our institutions and laws, are the assurances I make on behalf of the new Government to Americans and foreigners who may desire to live, trade, and otherwise associate with us in the Philippines.

In the enormous task of fully preparing ourselves for independence we shall be beset with serious difficulties, but we will resolutely march forward. I appeal to your patriotism and summon your nobility of heart so that we may, united in the common endeavor, once more dedicate ourselves to the realization of our national destiny. I face the future with hope and fortitude, certain that God never abandons a people who ever follow His unerring and guiding Hand. May He give me light, strength, and courage evermore that I may not falter in the hour of service to my people!

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE INAUGURAL AUDITORIUM.

Manuel L. Quezon

A CROSS THE FORBIDDING Sierra Madre Mountains lay, in 1889, forty miles of tortuous trails between the obscure village of Baler, Tayabas, and the nearest road to Manila. Along these, sometimes on horseback and sometimes on foot, struggled a boy of eleven years and his father, Lucio Quezon. The purpose of their journey was to enter young Manuel in the College of San Juan de Letran, situated in the capital city.

Symbolic of the seemingly insurmountable obstacles which he has since then overcome must be, in the mind of Manuel L. Quezon to-day, that first momentous journey of his childhood. His was a heritage of poverty and constant struggle, but also of inflexible purpose, a brilliant mind, and dauntless courage. He graduated from the College of San Juan de Letran and from the University of Santo Tomas with highest honors. As an officer in the Filipino Army during the Filipino-American War, he rose swiftly from lieutenant of infantry to major. In the three years between 1903 and 1906 his ability and force of character carried him from the level of an almost unknown lawyer to the governorship of Tayabas, one of the richest provinces of the Archipelago.

Election to the first Philippine Assembly in 1907 was the next logical step in his career, to be followed, in 1909, by his selection as one of the two Resident Commissioners to the Congress of the United States, where he succeeded in obtaining for his country three vitally important concessions: in 1913, a Filipino majority in the Philippine Commission; in 1916, the surrender of all legislative rights to Filipinos by the establishment of the Philippine Senate, of which he became the president; and the solemn pledge of independence for the Philippines from the Congress of the United States.

The independence of the Philippines, possibly within the lifetime of Manuel L. Quezon, was now clearly assured as the result of the unceasing efforts which he had made toward this great national aspiration during those eight years in Washington. On May 1, 1934, the valiant battle which he had waged for nearly thirty years was crowned with glorious success when the Philippine Legislature accepted the Tydings-McDuffie Law, granting the Islands complete liberty ten years hence.

Then, on September 17, 1935, the Filipino people bestowed upon him their greatest gift in electing him first President of the Philippines. From the obscurity of humble circumstances which attended his birth on August 19, 1878, he had risen, in 57 years, to a preeminence immortal in the hearts of his countrymen.

PRESIDENT MANUEL L. QUEZON

Sergio Osmeña

TO THE SERVICE of his country Sergio Osmeña has brought two sterling gifts of the pioneer—breadth and nobility of vision and steadfast, indomitable courage.

In 1900, before his admission to the bar, he was editor of the newspaper Nuevo Dia. New day! Hay prophetic of the future and symbolic of his vision were those words!

His brilliant personality and outstanding ability as a constructive, sagacious leader early attracted the favorable attention of American administrators, and, in 1904, Luke E. Wright appointed him governor of his home province, Cebu. Two years later, in 1906, he was designated fiscal for Cebu and Negros Oriental, and in the same year was elected Governor of Cebu. In October, 1906, although the youngest of all provincial executives in the Archipelago, he presided over the assembly of provincial governors held in Manila, and was elected chairman of that body.

For a young man scarcely 28 years of age these were indeed distinctive achievements. Nevertheless, his public career had only just begun, for, in 1907, he was elected Delegate to the first Philippine Assembly, and it was in the Assembly, as Speaker from 1907 until 1916, that he performed, perhaps, his greatest patriotic service in so conducting this legislative body as to make good the claim of the Filipino people to self-government.

After the creation of the Philippine Senate in 1916 Sergio Osmeña was urged by his friends to seek election as Senator but this he could not bring himself to do until six years later, so great was his interest in the work of the Lower House and his loyalty to it, which he regarded in the light of a continuation, practically at least, of the Philippine Assembly. In 1922, however, after remaining continuously in the House of Representatives as Speaker, he was elected Senator from the Tenth District, and has consistently served in this capacity until the present date, November 15, 1935.

To-day he enters in his 57th year, upon a new career of service to his country as Vice President of the Philippines, his early vision of the future of this nation almost realized, and the courage and faith that have sustained him throughout the long struggle toward national self-determination rewarded.

MANUEL L. QUEZON
PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES
TO THE
FIRST NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Delivered November 25, 1935, at the Inaugural Session of the National Assembly at the Legislative Building, Manila

MR. SPEAKER, GENTLEMEN OF THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY:

As I appear before you for the first time, allow me to extend to you my cordial greetings and congratulations upon your election to this august body. It is your unique privilege to serve our country at the most critical period of its existence—at a time when the course of its destiny will be charted.

The framers of our Constitution conferred upon our government all the power and authority needed to meet the demands of a progressive and enlightened epoch so that it may be able to promote the welfare and happiness of our people and safeguard their liberty.

I know you are well aware of the share of responsibility in the task of government which belongs to you. Unlike the Legislature that preceded you, which had two Houses, this National Assembly is by itself the whole Legislative Department of the government. When you take final action on a measure, there is no other legislative branch that will pass upon and give it further consideration. The measure as you pass it goes directly to the Chief Executive, who is devoid of any power to alter it in any way and has no alternative except that of giving it his express or implied approval, or of vetoing it.

In my opinion, the main responsibility for legislative action is yours. It will be my policy as Chief Executive to give you, in every case, the benefit of doubt. You may therefore rest assured that, if ever, I shall exercise my veto power with reluctance, and only when I am strongly convinced that it is my plain and unavoidable duty to do so in the interest of the common weal.

Article VII, section 11, (5) of the Constitution directs the President to present to the National Assembly, from time to time, information on the state of the Nation, and to recommend to its consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.

In the fulfillment of this duty, I am addressing the National Assembly today on the fundamental responsibility of a state—on a question involving our very existence when we become a free member of the family of nations. This question is that of assuring the future safety of our beloved country.

Self-defense is the supreme right of mankind, no more sacred to the individual than to the nation, the interests of which are immeasurably of greater significance and extent. A threat against the nation involves not alone the life of one individual, but of millions; not the welfare and fortune of a single family, but of all. And above everything else, depending upon the exercise of the right of national self-defense is freedom itself, the most precious reward from Heaven to the worthy. This immutable principle is firmly incorporated in our Constitution—the Magna Charta of Philippine Liberty.

We, the citizens of these Islands, are now fairly started upon the final stretch of the long road we have so patiently and persistently followed toward the goal of independence. Up to here the trail has been a tortuous one. But the difficulties we have encountered and the frustrations we have endured have not deterred us from our purpose. They have served only to spur us onward — to increase the intensity of our undying devotion to the cause for which no cost could be too great, no sacrifice too bitter. And now at last, with success so plainly in our sight, our love of liberty and the voice of reason alike urge us to guard and cherish the prize that has been so hardly won.

I would be recreant to my duty did I not come to you, in my first appearance before the National Assembly, to ask your ungrudging support for the establishment of a sound system of National Defense. This is our first and most urgent need.

As we commit ourselves to this important task we realize that a war-weary world groans under a burden of armaments. Every accretion to the accumulated total is invariably subjected to careful and even suspicious scrutiny. But the world must be well aware that in the present state of our development, the establishment within these Islands of an aggressive force capable of threatening the security of any other nation would be fantastic. Consequently, without fear that any act of ours may be misunderstood or resented by others, we are free to undertake every preparatory measure of defense that the circumstances of our situation may require.

Nevertheless, it is well that we now announce, through clear delineation of our objective, definite limits upon the efforts we shall make in this direction. That objective is a single one — peace — permanent peace! This objective is proclaimed in our own Constitution and no Filipino dares to challenge it. No purpose of our own, no conceivable temptation or manipulation from abroad, can ever lead us into war save in defense of our own rights, waged within the limits of our own territory. Our full desire is to insure domestic tranquility and to guarantee to our citizens the opportunity to pursue, without external molestation, prosperity and happiness under a stable government, devised, developed and maintained by the people themselves.

In furtherance of this purpose I shall submit to you a comprehensive plan for national defense. In my opinion the plan reflects the lessons of history, the conclusions of acknowledged masters of warfare and of statesmanship, and the sentiments and aspirations of the Filipino people. It is founded upon enduring principles that are fundamental to any plan applicable to our needs.

The first of these principles is that every citizen is obligated to the nation's defense. All the individual and national resources may be used by the State in the interest of self-preservation. No man has the inalienable right to enjoy the privileges and opportunities conferred upon him by free institutions unless he simultaneously acknowledges his duty to defend with his life and with his property the government through which he acquires these opportunities and these privileges. To deny this individual responsibility is to reject the whole theory of democratic government.

This principle knows no limitation of time or condition. It is effective in war, in peace, and for as long as the nation shall endure. Impelled by cogent reasons I propose its specific application to our peace-time task of preparation, by requiring every citizen of suitable age and physique to undergo military training as an obligation to the State.

The ultimate bulwark of liberty is the readiness of free citizens to sacrifice themselves in defense of that boon. Where this spirit has been inculcated through generations and has become firmly embedded in the public consciousness, nations have been strong, virile, prosperous and stable. Where citizens have grown neglectful of this individual obligation, especially where they have sought to deny its validity, the result has been decadence, weakness, poverty and destruction.

To foster national pride and patriotism nothing is more effective than to participate actively in the processes of maintaining the national defense. Military training and service build up the spirit of duty and love of country. They nurture patriotism, loyalty, courage and discipline. A nation of trained men ready to defend their country has the lasting respect of itself and of the world. A nation of helpless citizens can expect nothing but slavery at home, and contempt abroad. If we are wise, if we are mindful of the lessons history teaches, we will provide a military education for our entire manhood.

beginning from early adolescence. To accomplish this purpose a utilization of the public-school system immediately suggests itself. By inculcating in rising generations the soldierly virtues, by preparing our people spiritually and physically to serve the State, our schools will be building upon solid foundations not only national consciousness and solidarity but also boldness of spirit which are indispensable to the free and uninterrupted development of this nation.

The second basic principle is that our national defense system must provide actual security. Indeed, an insufficient defense is almost a contradiction in terms. A dam that crumbles under the rising flood is nothing more than a desolate monument to the wasted effort and lack of vision of its builders. In this one function of government there can be no compromise with minimum requirements. Our program of national defense must serve notice upon the world that the citizens of these Islands are not to be subjugated; that conquest of this nation cannot be accomplished short of its utter destruction, and that that destruction would involve such staggering cost to an aggressor, both in blood and gold, that even the boldest and the strongest will unerringly mark the folly of such an undertaking.

The next principle to which I hold is the insistent need for current and future economy. Although there are no costs of peace comparable to those that would surely follow defeat in war, it is nevertheless incumbent upon the government to avoid every unnecessary expenditure. During the three centuries of Philippine history as a dependency, there have been largely lifted from our shoulders the burdens incident to sovereignty, particularly those of providing for our own protection. These burdens our people now gladly accept. They stand ready to pay the cost, whatever it may be, of assuring the permanent security and integrity of the homeland. But for us in the government, to permit this cost to exceed the minimum demanded by the purpose that we seek, would be an inexcusable blunder and a betrayal of the trust reposed in us.

The need for minimizing expense not only requires the utmost efficiency in details, it clearly indicates the basic character of the defensive establishment we must devise.

Specifically, it precludes, for the present at least, the development of a battle fleet. Naval strength is expressed principally in terms of fighting ships, each of which, even in the small and auxiliary categories, can be produced only at tremendous cost. It is manifestly impossible, in the current state of our economic development, to acquire a fleet that could offer even partially effective resistance to any existing navy worthy of the name.

One desirable effect of a decision to forego the construction of a battle fleet will be to emphasize the passively defensive character of our military establishment. Tactically a fleet cannot operate as a purely defensive force and is useless unless it can proceed to sea and engage its enemy beyond the limits of its own bases. Moreover the existence of a powerful navy inherently implies a possibility of aggressive intent, since only with strong naval support could an army hope to invade the territory of an overseas enemy. Consequently, as an island nation our lack of sea power will confirm before the world our earnest intent to develop an army solely for defensive purposes.

Another fundamental premise is the necessity for a gradual rather than sudden growth of the required defense establishment. Both economy and efficiency demand no immediate and complete organization of a force of the necessary eventual strength. A modern army is a complex organism, and its defensive power is not measured solely by the number of its soldiers. Suitable armament, proper organization, professional technique and skill, applicable tactical doctrine and, above all, trained leadership are the very soul of an army's combat efficiency. However lavish may be the expenditure, these things cannot be instantly acquired. They are brought about only through thoughtful, painstaking and persistent effort, intelligently directed. Progress in these fields will determine the rate at which the whole development, including increases in personnel strength, may logically and efficiently proceed.

Nevertheless, it is imperative that our plans reach fruition by the time the beneficent protection of the United States shall have been finally withdrawn. We have ten years, and only ten, in which to initiate and complete the development of our defensive structure, the creation of which, because of the conditions of our past existence, must now begin at the very foundations. Not a moment is to be lost. Starting immediately, we must build economically and gradually, but steadily and surely, so as to attain within the time permitted us the highest possible efficiency at the lowest possible cost.

Finally, I must emphasize the need for logical governmental procedure in this development—a procedure calculated to minimize error and to avoid loss of time, waste of resources, and unnecessary exposure of the country to the risks of unpreparedness. Since our security arrangements must be carefully moulded to fit the special and particular needs of our country, there exists nowhere in the world a model upon which our own defenses may be blindly patterned. Step by step we must design a new organism, and in doing so we must advance progressively from the general to the specific; from the explored to the unexplored. A continuous adjustment of essential details to constantly evolving requirements will be mandatory. Such a procedure will be possible only through the exercise of administrative authority, taking advantage of the highest professional and technical advice. But since under our form of government, administrative authority is limited to the task of execution, it is highly important that initial legislation for the erection of the nation's defenses should confer upon the President as Commander-in-Chief, a very considerable latitude in carrying out the express purposes of the National Assembly. Any attempt, at the outset of this undertaking, to formulate a plan that would prescribe in concrete and inflexible language every detail of the complete development could not fail to result in added cost and slow progress.

The essential elements of our defensive system will in time become more clearly crystallized and definitely moulded to the needs of the nation. Then, it will be time for the National Assembly to enact legislation with such details as it may deem desirable.

But though details of design in the superstructure of defense should, at least for the present, be charged to the Chief Executive, the Assembly must retain the responsibility of assuring the soundness of its foundations. It is not only the prerogative but the duty of the Legislative Department to evolve and to prescribe the broad policies that are to control progress in this critically important task. Likewise it is a function of the Legislative body to bestow specific authorization and to provide the funds essential to the purpose it seeks. Supported by such authority and guided by these policies, the Chief Executive will be enabled to proceed confidently and expeditiously toward the accomplishment of the legislative intent.

The central feature of the defensive system I propose is a trained and organized force, normally engaged in the pursuits of peace, and ready for effective employment whenever the interests of the nation so demand. Service in this force is to be rendered as a patriotic obligation to the State. Upon reaching maturity, each able-bodied male citizen will automatically become liable for a period of intensive military training. From the number annually attaining this age, a training quota of the required size will be selected by lot. Moreover, so far as the capacity of the Army will permit, volunteers from among those not so selected, or from older age groups, will be incorporated into the training cadres. Upon completion of his training period, each citizen will return to civil life, but as a member of an Army reserve unit. Thus the burden of defense will be widely distributed, and each citizen will devote to exclusive military activity only an insignificant portion of his time.

The regular element of the Army, composed of volunteers from every geographical area of the Islands, will eventually attain a maximum strength of 1,500 officers and 19,000 enlisted men, including the existing Constabulary. Its officers and men will pursue the military profession as a life's career and devote themselves exclusively to the nation's defense. The Regular Army must become a model of efficiency—the energizing element and, professionally, the directing head of the whole establishment. Its missions will comprehend the maintenance of permanent overhead for the entire force, including such essential services as procurement, storage, transportation, communication and sanitation; the prosecution of research and experimentation to keep the Army abreast of latest developments in every branch of the military profession; and instruction of the reserve.

In organizational and operational outline the proposed system is the essence of simplicity. Under its provisions the Chief of Staff of the Army is selected by and is directly responsible to the President, and will have the rank of a Secretary of Department. Under him will be a Department of National Defense comprising the several staff sections required for general supervision of the whole military establishment and for the control of administration, training, maintenance and other essential functions.

The reserve units will be dispersed through all the Islands, approximately according to population. The national territory will be divided into military districts and subdistricts, in each of which will be maintained a small professional cadre for the training of the annual quota locally called to the colors. Training periods except for trainees selected to serve with the Regular Force will normally extend over a period of five and a half months. Thereafter, for ten years, each trainee will be required to undergo annually sufficient training to preserve individual and collective efficiency. From that time onward his training will grow progressively less.

Under this system we will have, within ten years, hundreds of thousands of trained individuals, and eventually practically the entire male population will have had military training. The younger men of this group will be constantly organized into tactical formations. Supporting these units will be a pool of trained individuals, generally in higher age groups, but available in emergency for replacements in line organizations or for employment in staff services. Equipment and supplies for reserve organizations will be locally stored and maintained, under the control of professional trained cadres.

Supplementing the training given in the Army will be the military instructional system in schools and colleges. Every educational institution wholly or partially supported at public expense is to serve, under the plan, as an agency for inculcating patriotism and for assisting in the important work of instructing our people in the essentials of the military profession. Starting with students aged ten, intensive courses in citizenship, sanitation and physical development will be progressively widened in scope during the period of adolescence until at the age of eighteen every able-bodied male student will have pursued a thorough course in elementary military practices and methods. As a consequence, even though quotas annually trained in the Army will comprise only a portion of the young men attaining the age of twenty-one, we will eventually acquaint our entire male population with the essential requirements of military service.

The plan provides a comprehensive system for the emergency mobilization of the reserves so as to insure rapid, concerted, and efficient action in the face of emergency. It proposes yearly objectives in the procurement of armaments and equipment. All these things and many others, I have developed in as exhaustive detail as is now possible, to the end that my proposals to the National Assembly might comprise concrete rather than theoretical recommendations.

Although, in broad outline, the proposed system of defense may be thus briefly and accurately described, the governmental problems involved in transforming plans into actual accomplishment will be almost baffling in their intricacy and difficulty. Preliminary to undertaking actual development, necessary laws must be formulated and approved, and initial selections of higher military officials accomplished. Thereafter, and in full accord with the provisions of these legislative enactments, the professional and technical phases of the task will begin. Merely to name the more important of them is to indicate clearly the involved character of the project.

Organization of the Department of National Defense must aim at efficient functioning, but must avoid extravagance entailed by the maintenance of unnecessary overhead. Its membership must possess the qualifications required by the purpose of each essential bureau, including those, for example, pertaining to armament, administration, supply, sanitation and legal affairs.

An efficient officer corps is the very soul of an army. To produce one of the requisite size and qualifications we must first provide for its gradual accumulation, so that future turn-over will involve only a small annual increment. We must evolve policies governing appointments, promotion, pay, assignments and retirements, and must provide for the thorough military education of its members. Technical schools must be established, and for these the faculties must first be organized and thoroughly indoctrinated.

Suitable tactical organization of the Army, accurately adjusted to the necessities of Philippine conditions, must be developed. Applicable doctrine and method must be evolved. A skeletonized organization for registration of citizens subject to military training, and for receiving, caring for and training annual quotas must be established. Necessary programs pertaining to munitions, including such technical items as airplanes, rifles, cannon, machine guns, ammunition, signal equipment, bridging material and a host of other matters must be formulated in accordance with our minimum needs. Inspection, accounting, and other phases of administration must be established and maintained. All these constitute immediate problems for which solutions must develop side by side, each fully articulated and synchronized with all others.

This necessary control, direction and coordination of a myriad of essential details represents one of the most difficult and critical problems of the entire project. In its importance to progress, it will, for some years to come, overshadow all others. For its successful solution there is immediately demanded, not only a technical ability that extends to every phase of the military profession, but a broad and thorough experience in the field of higher administration, organization and leadership. Unless these qualifications can be made constantly available to the Commonwealth we will pay for their lack in millions of squandered pesos, years of wasted time, and in confusion of effort and added risks to our nation's security.

Unfortunately it is this type of ability and experience that, as yet, there has been little opportunity to develop among our own people. We have produced, both in the Constabulary and in the Philippine Scouts, officers of outstanding worth in particular lines of military endeavor from among whom we confidently expect to obtain initially the senior officers of the new Army. But due to the conditions of our past existence we have had no War Department, no complete defense force, no balanced army, no exclusive responsibility for protection and, consequently, no experience in the functions that now assume for us a transcendent importance.

In this situation we have no alternative but to obtain this experience, this ability, and this skill from other sources, and in my anxiety on this score I earnestly considered all upon which we might logically depend.

Every consideration of friendship and association supported the hope that this source might be the United States. Consequently, I presented to the President of that country the essentials of this problem and explained our dire need for help. More specifically I earnestly requested the detail of General Douglas MacArthur, then Chief of Staff of the United States Army, as the one soldier whose opinion on every question of military organization would command the respect of all our people. The President's response was immediate, sympathetic and definite.

At a very real sacrifice to the American Army this officer, who since 1930 had served continuously at its Chief of Staff, has been made available to the Commonwealth Government as Military Adviser. His record in peace and war requires no eulogy from me. His qualifications for the important post in which he will serve are as clearly appreciated among our own people as they are in Washington. Because of this, and because also of his own known devotion to the Philippines and to the Filipino people, the wisdom of his choice will be universally recognized. I request authority to confer upon General MacArthur and his assistants the rank and emoluments that I deem in keeping with their important duties and the dignity of this Nation.

The several provisions of law fundamental to the development of Philippine defense are outlined in a draft of a bill which I shall presently furnish you. It depicts, in much greater detail than I have attempted here the defense plan I propose for adoption. It represents the essence of the authorizations, directives and general policies necessary to insure initiation of the project.

Again, I emphasize the need for prompt and positive action in initiating this great project. In every other line of human endeavor we have built, not only the foundations, but the framework and, in certain cases, even the edifice itself. But here, except for necessary law enforcement elements, not a stone has been laid.

The refusal to grant us immediate and complete independence has been due, in large measure, to our present inability to cope with a general revolt or to offer any kind of resistance to an invading force. Your swift action on the defense measures I am proposing will prove the earnestness of our determination to be, and forever to remain, free and independent. What, I ask, would be the use of seeing our country free one day, with its own flag standing alone and flying against the sky, only to see ourselves the subjects of another power the following day, with its flag the sovereign in and of our country? What would be the purpose of educating our young men and women concerning their rights and privileges as free citizens, if tomorrow they are to be subjects of a foreign foe? Why build up the wealth of the Nation only to swell up the coffers of another? If that be our preordained fate, why seek a new master when the Stars and Stripes has given us not only justice and fair treatment, welfare and prosperity, but also ever increasing political liberties including Independence?

National freedom now stands before us as a shining light—the freedom that for many years gleamed only as a fitful candle in the distant dark. We shall make ourselves ready to grasp the torch, so that no predatory force may ever strike it from our hands!

MILITARY ADVISER TO THE COMMONWEALTH

MAJOR-GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR, U.S.A.

SECURITIES ACT

FIRST NATIONAL ASSEMBLY }
First Session }

B. No. 2329

[COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 83]

AN ACT TO REGULATE THE SALE OF SECURITIES, TO CREATE A SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION TO ENFORCE THE PROVISIONS OF THE SAME, AND TO APPROPRIATE FUNDS THEREFOR.

Be it enacted by the National Assembly of the Philippines:

CHAPTER I.—Short Title and Definitions

SECTION 1. Short title.—This Act may be cited as "Securities Act."

SEC. 2. Definitions.—When used in this Act, the following terms shall, unless the context otherwise indicates, have the following respective meanings:

(a) "Securities" shall include stock certificates, treasury stock certificates, bonds, debentures; certificates of participation in, or right to subscribe to, any of the foregoing; certificates of participation, collateral trust certificates, investment contracts, voting trust certificates, certificates of deposit for a security, premium or gift sharing certificates or tickets, pre-organization certificates or subscriptions; certificates evidencing shares of, or interest in, trust estates or associations; certificates of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement or in an agreement to incorporate or to form an association or in mutual incorporation or association contracts involving more than fifteen proposed incorporators or associates; any certificate, contract, or instrument whatsoever representing or constituting evidence of, or secured by, title to, or interest in, or any lien or charge upon, the capital or any property or assets of the issuer thereof, or in any oil, gas or mining lease and/or holding; and interest, units or shares in any such lease or leases and/or holdings or in an association, partnership, corporation, or combination of persons having interest in such lease or leases and/or holdings; contracts or bonds for the sale and conveyance of land on deferred payments or installment plan, or other instruments in the nature thereof by whatsoever name they may be known or called; promissory notes of any individual, firm, partnership, corporation, or association of any kind, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used in capitalizing, furthering or promoting any manufacturing, selling, distributing, industrial, mercantile, mining, drilling for oil or gas, or development enterprise of any kind or nature whatsoever, where said promissory notes are accompanied by any oral or written promise or representation that the purchasers of said promissory note shall share in any of the profits of said enterprise, or benefit from the success of said enterprise either directly or indirectly; and, in general, certificates or instruments evidencing beneficial interest in title to property, profits, or earnings, or any other instrument commonly known as a security; including an interim or temporary bond, debenture, note certificate, or receipt for a security or for subscription to a security.

(b) "Speculative securities" shall mean and include:

1. All securities to promote or induce the sale of which profit, gain, or advantage unusual in the ordinary course of legitimate business is in any way advertised or promised;

2. All securities the value of which materially depends upon proposed or promised future promotion or development rather than on present tangible assets and conditions;

3. All securities for promoting the sale of which a commission of more than five per centum is offered or paid;

4. All securities into the value of which the elements of chance or hazard or speculative profit or possible loss equals or predominates over the elements of reasonable certainty or safety of investment;

5. The securities of any enterprise or corporation which has included, or proposes to include, in its assets, as a material part thereof, patents, formulae, good-will, promotion or other intangible assets, or which has issued or proposes to issue a material part of its securities in payment for patents, formulae, good-will, promotion or other intangible assets; and

6. The securities of any enterprise engaged in the business of promoting, exploring, developing, exploiting or operating mineral properties and/or mineral rights: Provided, however, That the following class of securities shall not be deemed to be speculative securities:

(1) Securities issued by a person owning a property, business or industry which has been in continuous operation not less than three years and which has shown during a period of not less than two years next prior to the close of its last fiscal year preceding the offering of such securities, average annual net earnings, after deducting all prior charges not including the charges upon securities to be retired out of the proceeds of sale, as follows:

(a) In the case of interest-bearing securities, not less than one and one-half times the annual interest charged thereon and upon all other outstanding interest-bearing obligations of equal rank;

(b) In the case of preferred stock, not less than one and one-half times the annual dividend requirements on such preferred stock and on all other outstanding stock of equal rank;

(c) In the case of common stock, not less than five per centum upon all outstanding common stock of equal rank together with the amount of common stock then offered for sale reckoned upon the price at which such stock is then offered for sale or sold.

The ownership by a person of more than fifty per centum of the outstanding voting stock of a corporation shall be construed as the proportionate ownership of the property, business or industry of such corporation, and shall permit the inclusion of the earnings of such corporation applicable to the payment of dividends upon the stock so owned in the earnings of the person issuing the securities sought to be registered.

(d) "Person" shall mean and include a natural person, firm, corporation, copartnership, limited partnership, sociedad anónima, joint stock company, syndicate, unincorporated organization or association, trust and trustee of a trust, excepting a trust created or a trustee designated by law or by a last will or by judicial authority, or any public charitable trust; or a government or political subdivision thereof. As used herein, the term "trust" shall include only a trust where the interest or interests of the beneficiary or beneficiaries are evidenced by a security.

(e) "Sale" or "sell" shall include every disposition, or attempt to dispose of a security or interest in a security for value. Any security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing, shall be conclusively presumed to constitute a part of the subject of such purchase and to have been sold for value. "Sale" and "sell" shall also include a contract to sell, an exchange, an attempt to sell, an option of sale, a solicitation of a sale, a subscription or an offer to sell, directly or by an agent, or by a circular, letter, advertisement or otherwise: Provided, That a privilege pertaining to a security giving the holder the privilege to convert such security into another security of the same issuer shall not be deemed a sale of such other security within the meaning of this definition, and such privilege shall not be construed as affecting the status of the security to which such privilege pertains with respect to exemption or registration or licensing under the provisions of this Act, but when such privilege of conversion shall be exercised, such conversion shall be subject to the limitations hereinafter provided in subsection (g) of section six of Chapter III hereof: And provided, further, That the issue or transfer of a right pertaining to a security and entitling the holder of such right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer, when such right is issued or transferred with the security to which it pertains, shall not be deemed a sale of such other security within the meaning of this definition and such right shall not be construed as affecting the status of the security to which such right pertains with respect to exemption or registration or licensing under the provisions of this Act; but the sale of such other security upon the exercise of such right shall be subject to the provisions of this Act.

(f) The terms "buy" and "purchase" shall include any contract to buy, purchase, or otherwise acquire.

(g) "Dealer" shall include every person other than a salesman who engages either for all or part of his time, directly or through an agent, in the business of selling any securities issued by another person or purchasing or otherwise acquiring such securities from another for the purpose of reselling them or of offering them for sale to the public, or offering, buying, selling or otherwise dealing or trading in securities for a profit, or who deals in futures or differences in market quotations of price or values of any securities, or accepts margins on purchases or sales or pretended purchases or sales of securities; Provided, That the word "dealer" shall not include a person having no place of business for the purpose, who sells or offers to sell securities exclusively to brokers or dealers actually engaged in buying and selling securities as a business.

(h) "Issuer" means every person who issues or proposes to issue any security; except that with respect to certificates of deposit, voting trust certificates, or collateral-trust certificates, or with respect to certificates of interest or shares in an unincorporated investment trust not having a board of directors (or persons performing similar functions), or of the fixed restricted management, or unit type, the term "issuer" means the person or persons performing the acts and assuming the duties of depositor or manager pursuant to the provisions of the trust or other agreement or instrument under which such securities are issued; except that in the case of an unincorporated association which provides by its articles for limited liability of any or all of its members, or in the case of a trust, committee or other legal entity, the trustees or members thereof shall not be individually liable as issuers of any security issued by the association, trust, committee, or other legal entity; and except that with respect to fractional undivided rights in oil, gas, or other mineral rights, or claims or properties, the term "issuer" means the owner of any such right or property or of any interest therein (whether whole or fractional) who creates fractional interests therein for the purpose of public offering.

(i) "Salesman" shall include every natural person, other than a dealer, employed or appointed or authorized by a dealer or issuer, to sell securities in any manner. The partners of a partnership and the executive officers of a corporation or other association registered as a dealer shall not be salesmen within the meaning of this definition.

(j) "Broker" means any person engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities for the account of others, but does not include a bank.

(k) "Exchange" means any organization, association, or group of persons, whether incorporated or unincorporated, which constitutes, maintains, or provides a market place or facilities for bringing together purchasers and sellers of securities or for otherwise performing with respect to securities the functions commonly performed by a stock exchange as that term is generally understood, and includes the market place and the market facilities maintained by such exchange.

(l) "Facility," when used with respect to an exchange, includes its premises, tangible or intangible property whether on the premises or not, any right to the use of such premises or property or any service thereof for the purpose of effecting or reporting a transaction on an exchange (including, among other things, any system of communication to or from the exchange, by ticker or otherwise, maintained by or with the consent of the exchange), and any right of the exchange to the use of any property or service.

(m) "Member," when used with respect to an exchange, means any person who is permitted either to effect transactions on the exchange without the services of another person acting as broker, or to make use of the facilities of an exchange for transactions thereon without payment of a commission or fee or with the payment of a commission or fee which is less than that charged the general public, and includes any firm transacting * business as broker or dealer of which a member is a partner, and any partner of any such firm.

(n) "Bank" means (1) a banking or trust institution organized under the laws of the Philippines or of the United States, or any state, territory or possession thereof, or of a foreign country, whether incorporated or not, doing business in the Philippines, a substantial portion of the business of which consists of receiving deposits or exercising fiduciary powers, and which is not operated for the purpose of evading the provisions of this Act, and (2) a receiver, or other liquidating agent of any banking or trust institution.

(o) "Director" means any director of a corporation or any person performing similar functions with respect to any organization, whether incorporated or unincorporated.

(p) "Commission" means the Securities and Exchange Commission established by this Act.

(q) The Commission hereby established shall have power, by rules and regulations, to define any technical, trade or accounting term used in this Act in so far as such definitions are not inconsistent with the provisions hereof.

CHAPTER II.—Securities and Exchange Commission

SEC. 3. Securities and Exchange Commission.—(a) There is hereby established a Securities and Exchange Commission (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission") to be under the direction of a commissioner to be appointed by the President with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly. The commissioner shall not engage in any other business, vocation, or employment than that of serving as commissioner, nor shall he participate, directly or indirectly, in any stock market operations or transactions of a character subject to regulation by the Commission pursuant to this Act. The commissioner shall receive a salary at the rate of ten thousand pesos a year and shall hold office during good behavior. The Commission shall be under the executive supervision of the Department of Justice.

(b) The Commission is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such officers, attorneys, examiners, engineers, and other technical staff as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this Act, and may, subject to the Civil Service laws, appoint such employees as are likewise necessary in the execution of its functions and fix their salaries, with the approval of the Secretary of Justice. Such officers, attorneys, examiners, engineers, employees and technical staff shall not participate directly or indirectly in any stock market operations or transactions of a character subject to regulation by the Commission pursuant to this Act. The President of the Philippines may transfer to the Commission all or some of the personnel of the various bureaus and offices of the Government who are now engaged in the enforcement of laws regulating securities and exchanges, together with such corresponding appropriations, records, equipment and other properties as may be necessary or convenient to carry out the provisions of this Act.

(c) The Commission shall report to the President annually or oftener as he may require. The report shall contain an account of the work of the Commission during the period covered and such further data and information as may be deemed necessary or appropriate or may be called for by the President.

CHAPTER III.—Registration of Securities

SEC. 4. Sale and registration of securities.—No securities except of a class exempt under any of the provisions of section five hereof or unless sold in any transaction exempt under any of the provisions of section six hereof shall be sold within the Philippines unless such securities shall have been registered and/or licensed as hereinafter provided. Registration of stock shall be deemed to include the registration of rights to subscribe to such stock if the registration statement filed pursuant to section seven of this Act includes a statement that such rights are to be issued. A record of the registration of securities shall be kept in a Register of Securities to be kept in the office of the Commission, in which Register of Securities shall also be recorded any orders entered by the Commission with respect to such securities. Such register, and all information with respect to the securities registered therein, shall be open to public inspection.

SEC. 5. Exempt securities.—(a) Except as hereinafter expressly provided, the provisions of this Act shall not apply to any of the following classes of securities:

1. Any security which, prior to the taking effect of this Act, has been sold or disposed of by the issuer or bona fide offered to the public.

2. Any security issued or guaranteed by the Government of the Philippines, or by the United States or any territory thereof, or by any political subdivision or agency of said Government, or by any of their public instrumentalities, or by any person controlled or supervised by, and acting as an instrumentality of, those Governments, or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing; or any security issued or guaranteed by any banking institution authorized to do business in the Philippines, the business of which is substantially confined to banking, and is supervised by the Bureau of Banking.

3. Any security issued or guaranteed by any foreign government with which the United States is, at the time of the sale or offer of sale thereof, maintaining diplomatic relations, or by any state, province or political subdivision thereof having the power of taxation or assessment, which security is recognized at the time it is offered for sale in the Philippines as a valid obligation by such foreign government or by such state, province or political subdivision thereof issuing the same.

4. Any security issued or guaranteed either as to principal, interest or dividend by a corporation owning or operating public service, whose financial transactions, including the issue and guaranteeing of securities, are subject to regulation and supervision by the Public Service Commission or by a board or officer of the Government of the Philippines.

5. Any security issued by a building and loan association, savings and loan association, or similar institution, substantially all the business of which is confined to the making of loans to members (but the foregoing exemption shall not apply with respect to any such security where the issuer takes from the total amount paid or deposited by the purchaser, by way of any fee, cash value or other device whatsoever, either upon termination of the investment at maturity or before maturity, an aggregate amount in excess of 3 per centum of the face value of such security), or any security issued by rural credit associations or by cooperative marketing associations.

6. Certificates issued by a receiver or by a trustee in bankruptcy, with the approval of the court.

7. Any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or optional annuity contract, issued by a corporation subject to the supervision of the Insurance Commissioner.

8. Any security exchanged by the issuer with its existing security holders exclusively, where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting such exchange.

(b) The Commission may, from time to time, by its rules and regulations and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed therein, add any class of securities to the securities exempted as provided in this section, if it finds that the enforcement of this Act with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors by reason of the small amount involved or the limited character of the public offering; but no issue of securities shall be exempted under this sub-section where the aggregate amount at which such issue is offered to the public exceeds two hundred thousand pesos.

SEC. 6. Exempt transactions.—The provisions of this Act shall not apply to the sale of any security in any of the following transactions:

(a) At any judicial, executor's, administrator's, guardian's or at any sale by a receiver or trustee in insolvency or bankruptcy.

(b) By or for the account of a pledge holder or mortgagee, selling or offering for sale or delivery in the ordinary course of business and not for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of this Act, to liquidate a bona fide debt, a security pledged in good faith as security for such debt.

(c) An isolated transaction in which any security is sold, offered for sale, subscription or delivery by the owner thereof, or by his representative for the owner's account, such sale or offer for sale, subscription or delivery not being made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a like character by such owner, or on his account by such representative, and such owner or representative not being the underwriter of such security.

(d) The distribution by a corporation, actively engaged in the business authorized by its charter, of securities to its stockholders or other security holders as a stock dividend or other distribution out of earnings, or surplus; or the issuance of securities to the security holders or other creditors of a corporation in the process of a bona fide reorganization of such corporation made in good faith and not for the purpose of avoiding the provisions of this Act, either in exchange for the securities of such security holders or claims of such creditors or partly for cash and partly in exchange for the securities or claims of such security holders or creditors; or the issuance of additional capital stock of a corporation sold or distributed by it among its own stockholders exclusively, where no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly in connection with the sale or distribution of such increased capital stock.

(e) The transfer or exchange by one corporation to another corporation of their own securities in connection with a consolidation or merger of such corporations.

(f) Bonds or notes secured by mortgage upon real estate or tangible personal property, where the entire mortgage together with all of the bonds or notes secured thereby are sold to a single purchaser at a single sale.

(g) The issue and delivery of any security in exchange for any other security of the same issuer pursuant to a right of conversion entitling the holder of the security surrendered in exchange to make such conversion, provided that the security so surrendered has been registered or its sale licensed under this Act or was, when sold, exempt from the provisions of this Act, and that the security issued and delivered in exchange, if sold at the conversion price, would at the time of such conversion fall within the class of securities entitled to registration and licensing under this Act.

Upon such conversion, the par value of the security surrendered in such exchange shall be deemed the price at which the securities issued and delivered in such exchange are sold.

(h) The sale, transfer or delivery of any securities to any bank, savings institution, trust company, insurance company or to any corporation or to any broker or dealer; provided, that such broker or dealer is actually engaged in buying and selling securities as a business.

(i) Brokers' transactions, executed upon customers' orders on any exchange or in the open or counter market, but not the solicitation of such orders.

(j) Subscriptions for shares of the capital stock of a corporation prior to the incorporation thereof under the general Corporation Law, when no expense is incurred, or no commission, compensation or remuneration is paid or given in connection with the sale or disposition of such securities, and only when the purpose for soliciting, giving or taking, of such subscriptions is to comply with the requirements of such law as to the percentage of the capital stock of a proposed corporation which should be subscribed before it can be registered and duly incorporated, and only to such extent.

SEC. 7. Procedure for registration.—(a) All securities shall be registered through the filing by the issuer or by any dealer interested in the sale thereof, in the office of the Commission, of a sworn registration statement with respect to such securities containing or having attached thereto, the following:

(1) Name of issuer and, if incorporated, place of incorporation.

(2) The location of the issuer's principal business office, and if such issuer is a non-resident or its place of office is outside of the Philippines, the name and address of its agent in the Philippines authorized to receive notice.

(3) The names and addresses of the directors or persons performing similar functions, and the chief executive, financial and accounting officers, chosen or to be chosen, if the issuer be a corporation, association, trust, or other entity; of all the partners, if the issuer be a partnership; and of the issuer, if the issuer be an individual; and of the promoters in the case of a business to be formed.

(4) The names and addresses of the underwriters.

(5) The general character of the business actually transacted or to be transacted by the issuer.

(6) A statement of the capitalization of the issuer, including the authorized and outstanding amounts of its capital stock and the proportion thereof paid up; the number and classes of shares in which such capital stock is divided; par value thereof, or if it has no par value, the stated or assigned value thereof; a description of the respective voting rights, preferences, conversion and exchange rights, rights to dividends, profits or capital of each class, with respect to each other class, including the retirement and liquidation rights or values thereof.

(7) A copy of the security for the registration of which application is made.

(8) A copy of any circular, prospectus, advertisement, letter, or communication to be used for the public offering of the security.

(9) The specific purposes in detail and the approximate amounts to be devoted to such purposes, so far as determinable, for which the security to be offered is to supply funds, and if the funds are to be raised in part from other sources, the amounts thereof and the sources thereof shall be stated.

(10) A statement of the amount of the issuer's income, expenses, and fix charges during the last fiscal year or if in actual business less than one year, then for such time as the issuer has been in actual business.

(11) A balance sheet showing the amount and general character of its assets and liabilities on a day not more than sixty days prior to the date of such balance sheet.

(12) The remuneration, paid or estimated to be paid, by the issuer or its predecessor, directly or indirectly, during the past year and ensuing year to (a) the directors or persons performing similar functions, and (b) its officers and other persons, naming them wherever such remuneration exceeded six thousand pesos during any such year.

(13) The amount of issue of the security to be offered.

(14) The estimated net proceeds to be derived from the security to be offered.

(15) A statement showing the price at which such security is proposed to be sold, together with the maximum amount of commission or other form of remuneration to be paid in cash or otherwise, directly or indirectly, for or in connection with the sale or offering for sale of such security.

(16) The amount or estimated amounts, itemized in reasonable detail, of expenses, other than commissions specified in the next preceding paragraph, incurred or to be borne by or for the account of the issuer in connection with the sale of the security to be offered or properly chargeable thereto, including legal, engineering, certification, authentication, and other charges.

(17) A detailed statement showing the items of cash, property, services, patents, good-will, and any other consideration for which securities have been or are to be issued in payment.

(18) The amount of cash to be paid as promotion fees, or of capital stock which is to be set aside and disposed of as promotion stock, and a statement of all stock issued from time to time as promotion stock.

(19) In connection with speculative securities issued by a person engaged in the business of developing, exploiting or operating mineral claims, a sworn statement of a mining engineer stating the ore possibilities of the mine and such other information in connection therewith as the Commission may, by regulations, require, which will show the quality of the ore in such claim, and the unit cost of extracting it.

(20) Unless previously filed and registered under the provisions of this Act, and brought up to date (a) a copy of its articles of incorporation, with all amendments thereof and its existing by-laws or instruments corresponding thereto, whatever the name, if the issuer be a corporation; (b) copy of all instruments by which the trust is created or declared and in which is accepted and ac-known, if the issuer is a trust; (c) a copy of its articles of partnership or association and all the papers pertaining to its organization, if the issuer is a partnership, unincorporated association, joint-stock company, syndicate, or any other form of organization.

(b) In case of certificates of deposit, voting trust certificates, collateral trust certificates, certificates of interest or shares unincorporated investment trusts, equipment trust certificates, interim or other receipts for certificates, and like securities, the Commission shall establish rules and regulations requiring the submission of information of a like character applicable to such cases together with such other information as it may deem appropriate and necessary regarding the character, financial or otherwise, of the actual issuer of the securities and/or the person performing the acts and assuming the duties of depositor or manager.

(c) However, the Commission may by rules or regulations provide that any of the above information or document need not be included in respect of any class of issuer of securities, if it finds that the requirement of such information or document is inapplicable to such class and that disclosure fully adequate for the protection of investors is otherwise included in a registration statement filed in accordance with such rules.

Upon filing of such registration statement, the issuer or dealer shall pay to the Treasury of the Philippines a fee of one-tenth of one per centum of the maximum aggregate price at which such securities are proposed to be offered, but in no case shall such fee be less than fifty pesos or more than one thousand pesos; and the fact of such filing shall be immediately published by the Commission, at the expense of the issuer or dealer, in two newspapers of general circulation in the Philippines, one published in English and another, in Spanish, once a week for two consecutive weeks, reciting that a registration statement for the sale of such security has been filed with it, and that the aforesaid registration statement, as well as the papers attached thereto, are open to inspection during business hours, by interested parties, under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe; and copies thereof, photostatic or otherwise, shall be furnished to every applicant at such reasonable charge as the Commission may prescribe.

The filing of such statement in the office of the Commission, the payment of the fee hereinabove prescribed, and the publication made as above stated, shall constitute the registration of such security, and seven days after the expiration of the period for publication above referred to, the registration shall take effect, and the security, if not a speculative security, may be sold in the Philippines, subject, however, to the further orders of the Commission as hereinafter provided. The Commission shall, upon the filing of the registration statement above referred to, determine, by order, whether or not the security sought to be registered is speculative within the meaning of this Act, and shall forthwith advise the issuer or dealer.

SEC. 8. Suspension of registration.—If, at any time, in the opinion of the Commission, the information contained in the statement filed is or has become misleading, incorrect, inadequate or incomplete, or the sale or offering for sale of the security may work or tend to work a fraud, the Commission may require from the person filing such statement such further information as may in its judgment be necessary to enable the Commission to ascertain whether the registration of such security should be revoked on any ground specified in section twelve, and the Commission may also suspend the right to sell such security pending further investigation, by entering an order specifying the grounds for such action, and by notifying by mail, or personally, or by telephone confirmed in writing, or by telegraph, the person filing such statement and every dealer who shall have notified the Commission of an intention to sell such security. The refusal to furnish information required by the Commission within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Commission, may be a proper ground for the entry of such order of suspension. Upon the entry of any such order of suspension, no further sales of such security shall be made until the further order of the Commission.

In the event of the entry of such order of suspension, the Commission shall give a prompt hearing to the parties interested. If upon such hearing, the Commission shall determine that the sale of any such security should be revoked on any ground specified in section twelve, it shall enter a final order prohibiting sales of such security, with its findings with respect thereto. Until the entry of such final order, the suspension of the right to sell, though binding upon the persons notified thereof, shall be deemed confidential, and shall not be published, unless it shall appear that the order of suspension has been violated after notice. Appeals from such final order may be taken to the President of the Philippines, within the period of thirty days from the date of notification of such order. If, however, upon such hearing the Commission shall find that the sale of the security will neither be fraudulent nor result in fraud, it shall forthwith enter an order revoking such order of suspension, and such security shall be restored to its status as a security registered under this Act, as of the date of such order of suspension.

SEC. 9. License to sell speculative securities.—With respect to speculative securities, if the Commission shall find after an examination of the registration statement filed by the issuer or dealer, together with all the other papers and documents attached thereto, that the issuer is of good repute, and that the sale of the security would not be fraudulent and would not work or tend to work a fraud upon the purchaser, and that the enterprise or business of the issuer is not based upon unsound business principles, it shall record the registration of such security in the Register of Securities, and, after the effective date of such registration as above stated, it shall issue to the issuer or dealer a license to sell those securities in the Philippines, and shall issue to such issuer a certificate of permit reciting that such person, its brokers or agents, are entitled to offer the securities named in said certificate for sale in the Philippines. Every permit shall recite in bold type that the issuance thereof is permissive only and does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement of the securities permitted to be issued.

With respect to speculative securities, the Commission shall, by order duly recorded, fix the amount of commission or other form of remuneration to be paid in cash or otherwise, directly or indirectly, for or in connection with the sale or offering for sale of such securities in the Philippines in no case to exceed ten per centum of the value of the securities sold; and shall fix the maximum amount of compensation which the issuer shall pay for mining claims and/or mineral rights for which provision is made by the issuer for payment in cash or securities. It may issue the permit subject to other conditions, to the end that this power may become effective. The amount of compensation which shall be paid the owner and/or holder of such mining claims and/or mineral rights shall be a fair valuation thereof, as may be fixed by the Commission, after consultation with the Bureau of Mines, and after receiving such technical information as the issuer or dealer and/or the owner or owners of such claims may care to submit in the premises.

SEC. 10. Consent to service.—Upon any application for registration, whether made by an issuer or registered dealer, where the issuer is not domiciled in the Philippines, there shall be filed with such application the irrevocable written consent of the issuer that in suits, proceedings and actions growing out of the violation of any provision of this Act, the service on the Commission of any notice, process, or pleading therein, authorized by the laws of the Philippines, shall be as valid and binding as if due service had been made on the issuer. Any such action shall be brought either in the province of the plaintiff's residence or in the City of Manila. Said written consent shall be authenticated by the seal of issuer, if it has a seal, and by the acknowledged signature of a member of the copartnership or company, or by the acknowledged signature of any officer of the incorporated or unincorporated association, if it be an incorporated or unincorporated association, duly authorized by resolution of the board of directors, trustees or managers of the corporation or association, and shall in such case be accompanied by a duly certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors, trustees or managers of the corporation or association, authorizing the officers to execute the same. In case any process or pleadings mentioned in this Act are served upon the Commission, it shall be duplicate copies, one of which shall be filed in the office of the Commission and another immediately forwarded by the Commission by registered mail to the principal office of the issuer against which said process or pleadings are directed.

SEC. 11. Financial statements, circular, and so forth, filing of.—While any person, whose securities have been sold pursuant to registration and/or permit issued hereunder, is engaged in business in the Philippines, such person shall file with the Commission not later than February fifteen of each year, a statement under oath of assets and liabilities as of December thirty-first of the last previous year. Provided, That at the request of such person or his duly authorized agent or of a member or duly authorized officer or agent of such person, the Commission may grant an extension of time not to exceed thirty days within which such statement shall be submitted to it. Such person shall also file with the Commission, before or at the time of their issuance for publication, copies of all circulars, prospectuses and other advertising matter to be issued from time to time by or on behalf of such person.

SEC. 12. Revocation of registration of securities and of license to sell.—The Commission may revoke the registration of any security and the license to sell a speculative security by entering an order to this effect with its findings in respect thereto, if upon examination into the affairs of the issuer of such security, it shall appear that the issuer:

- (a) Is insolvent; or
- (b) Has violated any of the provisions of this Act or any order of the Commission of which the issuer has notice; or
- (c) Has been or is engaged or is about to engage in fraudulent transactions; or
- (d) Is in any other way dishonest or has made any fraudulent representations in any prospectus or in any circular or other literature that has been distributed concerning the issuer or its securities; or

- (e) Is of bad business repute; or
- (f) Does not conduct its business in accordance with law; or
- (g) Has its affairs in an unsound condition; or
- (h) Has his enterprise or business based upon unsound business principles.

In making such examination, the Commission shall have access to and may compel the production of all the books and papers of such issuer, and may administer oaths to, and examine the officers of, such issuer or any other person connected therewith as to its business and affairs, and may also require a balance sheet exhibiting the assets and liabilities of any such issuer or his income statement, or both, to be certified to by a certified public accountant.

Whenever the Commission may deem it necessary, it may also require such balance sheet or income statement, or both, to be made more specific in such particulars as the Commission shall point out or to be brought down to the latest practicable date.

If any issuer shall refuse to permit an examination to be made by the Commission, it shall be proper ground for revocation of registration and license.

If the Commission shall deem it necessary it may enter an order suspending the right to sell securities pending any investigation, provided that the order shall state the grounds for taking such action, but such order of suspension, although binding upon the persons notified thereof, shall be deemed confidential, and shall not be published. Upon the entry of such order of suspension, no further sale of such security shall be made until further order of the Commission.

Notice of the entry of such order shall be given by mail, or personally, or by telephone, confirmed in writing, or by telegraph, to the issuer and every dealer who shall have notified the Commission of an intention to sell such security.

Before such order is made final, the issuer or dealer shall be entitled to a hearing; and such order may, within thirty days after notification thereof to the issuer and/or dealer, be appealed to the President of the Philippines.

SEC. 13. Promotion fees.—If the statement containing information as to securities to be registered, as provided for in section seven of this Act, shall disclose that any such securities or any securities senior thereto shall have been or shall be intended to be issued for good-will, or for organization or promotion fees or expenses, or that payment in cash shall have been or will be made for organization or promotion fees or expenses or for good-will, the amount and nature thereof shall be fully set forth in the notification published by the Commission as required in section seven of this Act, and in all prospectuses, circulars, or other advertisements of the issuer, and should also appear upon the face or on the back of the security itself.

CHAPTER IV.—Brokers, Dealers, and Salesmen

SEC. 14. Registration of brokers, dealers, and salesmen.—No broker, dealer, or salesman shall engage in business in the Philippines as such broker, dealer or salesman or sell any securities, including securities exempted in section five of this Act, except in transaction exempt under section six of this Act, unless he has been registered as a broker, dealer or salesman in the office of the Commission pursuant to the provisions of this section.

An application for registration in writing shall be filed in the office of the Commission in such form as the Commission may prescribe, duly verified by oath, which shall state the principal office of the applicant, wherever situated, and the location of its principal office and all branch offices in the Philippines, if any; the name or style of doing business, the names, residence and business addresses of all persons interested in the business as principals, copartners, officers and directors, specifying as to each his capacity and title; the general plan and character of business and the length of time the dealer has been engaged in business. The Commission may also require such additional information as to applicant's previous history, record and association, as it may deem necessary to establish the good repute in business of the applicant.

There shall be filed with such application an irrevocable written consent to the service of process upon the Commission in actions against such broker or dealer in manner and form as hereinabove provided in section ten.

If the Commission shall find that the applicant is of good repute and has complied with the provisions of this section, including the payment of the fee hereinafter provided, he shall register such applicant as a broker or dealer upon his filing a bond or other security in lieu thereof, in such sum as may be fixed by the Commission based upon its judgment as to the amount required for the due protection of the public, running to the Government of the Philippines, and conditioned upon the faithful compliance with the provisions of this Act by said broker or dealer and by all salesmen registered by the latter while acting for him. Such bond shall be executed by a surety company authorized to do business in the Philippines. In lieu of such bond, he may file bonds of the Government of the Philippines or of the United States, or other security acceptable to the Commission. If a bond is filed, any person damaged by the failure of such broker or dealer or of any salesman registered by the latter while acting for him, to comply with the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to sue the sureties under such bond and to recover the damages so suffered thereunder. If other securities are filed in lieu thereof, such person may subject such securities to the payment of such damage.

Upon the written application of a registered dealer or broker and general satisfactory showing as to good character and the payment of the fee prescribed in this Act, the Commission shall register as salesmen of such dealer or broker such natural persons as the dealer or broker may request. Such registration shall cease upon the termination of the employment of such salesmen by such dealer or broker.

The names and addresses of all persons approved for registration as brokers, dealers or salesmen and all orders with respect thereto shall be recorded in a Register of Brokers, Dealers and Salesmen kept in the office of the Commission which shall be open to public inspection. Every registration under this section shall expire on the thirty-first day of December in each year, but new registration for the succeeding year shall be issued upon written application and upon payment of the fee as hereinafter provided, without filing of further statements or furnishing any further information unless specifically required by the Commission. Application for renewals must be made not less than thirty nor more than sixty days before the first day of the ensuing year, otherwise they shall be treated as original applications. The fee for such registration and for each annual renewal shall be fifty pesos in the case of brokers, fifty pesos in the case of dealers and ten pesos in the case of salesmen.

Changes in registration occasioned by changes in the personnel of a partnership or in the principals, copartners, officers or directors of any broker or dealer may be made from time to time by written application setting forth the facts with respect to such change.

Every registered broker or dealer who intends to offer any security for sale shall notify the Commission in writing of his intention so to do. The notice shall contain the name of the broker or dealer and shall state the name of the security to be offered for sale, and whenever a broker or dealer shall have prepared such notice and shall have forwarded the same by registered mail, postage prepaid and properly addressed to the Commission, such dealer or broker, as to the contents of such notice and the filing thereof, shall be deemed to have complied with the requirements of this paragraph. Any issuer of a security required to be registered under the provisions of this Act, selling such securities except in exempt transactions as defined in section six hereof, shall be deemed a dealer within the meaning of this section and required to comply with all the provisions hereof.

SEC. 15. Revocation of brokers', dealers' and salesmen's registration.—Registration under section fourteen may be refused or any registration granted may be revoked by the Commission if, after a reasonable notice and a hearing, the Commission determines that such applicant or registrant so registered:

(1) Has violated any provision of this Act or any regulation made hereunder; or

(2) Has made a material false statement in the application for registration; or

(3) Has been guilty of a fraudulent act in connection with any sale of securities, or has been or is engaged or is about to engage in making fictitious or pretended sales or purchases of any of such securities or has been or is engaged or is about to engage in any practice or sale of securities which is fraudulent or in violation of the law; or

(4) Has demonstrated his unworthiness to transact the business of broker, dealer or salesman.

In cases of charges against a salesman, notice thereof shall also be given the broker or dealer employing such salesman.

Pending the hearing, the Commission shall have the power to order the suspension of such broker's, dealer's or salesman's registration; provided, that such order shall state the cause for such suspension.

Until the entry of a final order, the suspension of such broker's or dealer's registration, though binding upon the persons notified thereof, shall be deemed confidential, and shall not be published, unless it shall appear that the order of suspension has been violated after notice.

In the event the Commission determines to refuse or revoke a registration as hereinabove provided, he shall enter a final order with his findings on the Register of Brokers, Dealers and Salesmen; and suspension or revocation of the registration of a dealer or broker shall also suspend or revoke the registration of all his salesmen.

It shall be sufficient cause for refusal or cancellation of registration in case of a partnership or corporation or any unincorporated association, if any member of a partnership or any officer or director of the corporation or association has been guilty of any act or omission which would be cause for refusing or revoking the registration of an individual dealer, broker or salesman.

CHAPTER V.—Registration of Exchanges

SEC. 16. Use of facilities of unregistered exchanges prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any broker, dealer, salesman or exchange, directly or indirectly, to make use of any facility of an exchange in the Philippines to effect any transaction in a security or to report such transaction, unless such exchange is registered as a securities exchange under section seventeen of this Act, or is exempted from such registration upon application by the exchange because, in the opinion of the Commission, by reason of the limited volume of transactions effected on such exchange, it is not practicable and not necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors to require such registration.

SEC. 17. Registration of exchanges.—(a) Any exchange may be registered with the Commission as a securities exchange under the terms and conditions hereinafter provided in this section, by filing a registration statement in such form as the Commission may prescribe, containing the agreements, setting forth the information, and accompanied by the documents below specified:

(1) An agreement (which shall not be construed as a waiver of any constitutional right or any right to contest the validity of any rule or regulation) to comply, and to enforce, so far as is within its powers, compliance by its members, with the provisions of this Act, and any amendment thereto, and any rule or regulation made or to be made thereunder;

(2) Such data as to its organization, rules of procedure, and membership, and such other information as the Commission may by rules and regulations require as being necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors;

(3) Copies of its constitution, articles of incorporation with all amendments thereto, and of its existing by-laws or rules or instruments corresponding thereto, whatever the name, which are hereinafter collectively referred to as the "rules of the exchange;" and

(4) An agreement to furnish to the Commission copies of any amendments to the rules of the exchange forthwith upon their adoption.

(b) No registration of an exchange shall be granted or remain in force unless the rules thereof include provisions for the expulsion, suspension, or disciplining of a member for conduct or proceeding inconsistent with just and equitable principles of fair trade, and declare that the willful violation of any provision of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder shall be considered conduct or proceeding inconsistent with just and equitable principles of fair trade.

(c) Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent any exchange from adopting and enforcing any rule not inconsistent with this Act and with the rules and regulations thereunder, or with any other law.

(d) If it appears to the Commission that the exchange applying for registration is so organized as to be able to comply with the provisions of this Act and the rules and regulations thereunder, and that the rules of the exchange are just and adequate to insure fair dealing and to protect investors, the Commission shall cause such exchange to be registered as a securities exchange.

(e) Within thirty days after the filing of the application, the Commission shall enter an order either granting or, after appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, denying registration as a securities exchange, unless the exchange applying for registration shall withdraw its application or shall consent to the Commission's deferring action on its application for a stated longer period after the date of filing. The filing with the Commission of an application for registration by an exchange shall be deemed to have taken place upon the receipt thereof. Amendments to an application may be made upon such terms as the Commission may prescribe.

(f) Upon the registration of a securities exchange pursuant to the provisions of this Act, it shall pay a registration fee of one thousand pesos.

(g) An exchange may, upon appropriate application in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Commission and upon such terms as the Commission may deem necessary for the protection of investors withdraw its registration.

SEC. 18. Margin requirements.—(a) For the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities, the Commission shall prescribe rules and regulations with respect to the amount of credit that may be initially extended and subsequently maintained on any security (other than an exempt security) registered on a securities exchange.

For the initial extension of credit, such rules and regulations shall be based upon the following standard:

An amount not greater than whichever is the higher of—

(1) Fifty per centum of the current market price of the security, or

(2) One hundred per centum of the lowest market price of the security during the preceding thirty-six calendar months, but not more than sixty-five per centum of the current market price.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any member of a securities exchange or any broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member, directly or indirectly to extend or maintain credit or arrange for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for any customer—

(1) On any security (other than an exempted security) registered on a securities exchange in contravention of the rules and regulations which the Commission shall prescribe under the provisions of this section.

(c) This section and the rules and regulations thereunder shall not apply (A) to a loan made by a person not in the ordinary course of his business, (B) to a loan on an exempted security, (C) to a loan to a dealer to aid in the financing of the distribution of securities to customers not through the medium of a securities exchange, (D) to a loan by a bank on a security, or (E) to such other loans as the Commission shall, by such rules and regulations as it may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, exempt, either unconditionally or upon specified terms and conditions, or for stated periods, from the operation of this section and the rules and regulations thereunder.

(d) The provisions of this section or the rules and regulations thereunder shall not apply to any loan or extension of credit made prior to the effective date of this Act.

Sec. 19. Restriction on borrowing by mem- bers, brokers, and dealers.—It shall be unlawful for any member of a securities exchange, or any broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member, directly or indirectly—

(a) To permit in the ordinary course of business as a broker his aggregate indebtedness to all persons, including customers' credit balances (but excluding indebtedness secured by exempted securities), to exceed such percentage of the net capital (exclusive of fixed assets and value of exchange membership) employed in the business, but not exceeding in any case two thousand per centum, as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(b) In contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission shall prescribe for the protection of investors, to hypothecate or arrange for the hypothecation of any security carried for the account of any customer under circumstances—

(1) That will permit the commingling of his securities, without his written consent, with the securities of any other customer;

(2) That will permit such securities to be commingled with the securities of any person other than a bona fide customer; or

(3) That will permit such securities to be hypothecated or subjected to any lien or claim of the pledge, or for a sum in excess of the aggregate indebtedness of such customers in respect of such securities.

(c) To lend or arrange for the lending of any security carried for the account of any customer without the written consent of such customer.

SEC. 20. Manipulation of security prices.—

(a) It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly—

(1) For the purpose of creating a false or misleading appearance of active trading in any security registered on a securities exchange, or a false or misleading appearance with respect to the market of any such security;

(A) To effect any transaction in such security which involves no change in the beneficial ownership thereof, or

(B) To enter an order or orders for the purchase of such security with the knowledge that an order or orders of substantially the same size, at substantially the same time, and at substantially the same price, for the sale of any such security, has been or will be entered by or for the same or different parties, or

(C) To enter any order or orders for the sale of any such security with the knowledge that an order or orders of substantially the same size, at substantially the same time, and at substantially the same price, for the purchase of such security, has been or will be entered by or for the same or different parties.

(2) To effect, alone or with one or more other persons, a series of transactions in any security registered on a securities exchange creating actual or apparent active trading in such security or raising or depressing the price of such security, for the purpose of inducing the purchase or sale of such security by others.

(3) If a dealer or broker, or other person selling or offering for sale, or purchasing or offering to purchase, the security, to induce the purchase or sale of any security registered on a securities exchange by the circulation or dissemination in the ordinary course of business of information to the effect that the price of any such security will or is likely to rise or fall because of market operations of any one or more persons, conducted for the purpose of raising or depressing the prices of such security.

(4) If a dealer or broker or other person selling or offering for sale or purchasing or offering to purchase the security, to make, regarding any such security, for the purpose of inducing the purchase or sale thereof, any statement which was at the time and in the light of the circumstances under which it was made, false or misleading with respect to any material fact, and which he knew or had reasonable ground to believe was so false or misleading.

(5) For a consideration received directly or indirectly from a dealer or broker or other person selling or offering for sale or purchasing or offering to purchase the security, to induce the purchase or sale of such security by the circulation or dissemination of information to the effect that the price of any such security will or is likely to rise or fall because of the market operations of any one or more persons conducted for the purpose of raising or depressing the price of such security.

(6) To effect, either alone or with one or more other persons, any series of transactions for the purchase or sale of any security registered on a securities exchange for the purpose of pegging, fixing or stabilizing the price of such security in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person to effect, by the use of any facility of a securities exchange, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors—

(1) Any transaction in connection with any security whereby any party to such transaction acquires any put, call, straddle, or other option or privilege of buying the security from or selling the security to another without being bound to do so; or

(2) Any transaction in connection with any security with relation to which he has, directly or indirectly, any interest in any such put, call, straddle, option or privilege; or

(3) Any transaction in any security for the account of any person who he has reason to believe has, and who actually has, directly or indirectly, any interest in any such put, call, straddle, option, or privilege with relation to such security.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any member of a securities exchange directly or indirectly, to endorse or guarantee the performance of any put, call, straddle, option or privilege in relation to any security registered on a securities exchange, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(d) The terms "put," "call," "straddle," "option," or "privilege" as used in this section shall not include any registered warrant, right or convertible security.

(e) Any person who willfully participates in any act or transaction in violation of subsection (a), (b) or (c) of this section shall be liable to any person who shall purchase or sell any security at a price which was affected by such act or transaction, and the person so injured may sue in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the damages sustained as a result of any such act or transaction. In any such suit, the court may assess reasonable costs, including reasonable attorney's fees, against either party litigant. Every person who becomes liable to make payment under this subsection may recover contribution as in cases of contract from any person who, if joined in the original suit, would have been liable to make the same payment. No action shall be maintained to enforce any liability created under this section, unless brought within one year after the discovery of the facts constituting the violation and within three years after such violation.

(f) The provisions of this section shall not apply to an exempted security.

SEC. 21. Manipulative and deceptive devices.—It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any facility of any securities exchange—

(a) To effect a short sale, or to use or employ any stop-loss order in connection with the purchase or sale of any security registered on a securities exchange, in contravention of such rules and regulation as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(b) To use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

SEC. 22. Segregation and limitation of functions of members, brokers, and dealers.—

rectly or indirectly for their own account or for discretionary accounts, and (2) to prevent such excessive trading on the exchange but off the floor by members, directly or indirectly for their own account, as the Commission may deem detrimental to the maintenance of a fair and orderly market. It shall be unlawful for a member to effect any transaction in a security in contravention of such rules and regulations, but such rules and regulations may make such exemptions for arbitrage transactions, for transactions in exempted securities, and, within the limitations of subsection (b) of this section, for transactions by odd-lot dealers and specialists, as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(b) When not in contravention of such rules and regulations as it deems necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors (1) to regulate floor trading by members of securities exchanges directly or indirectly for their own account or for discretionary accounts, and (2) to prevent such excessive trading on the exchange but off the floor by members, directly or indirectly for their own account, as the Commission may deem detrimental to the maintenance of a fair and orderly market. It shall be unlawful for a member to effect any transaction in a security in contravention of such rules and regulations, but such rules and regulations may make such exemptions for arbitrage transactions, for transactions in exempted securities, and, within the limitations of subsection (b) of this section, for transactions by odd-lot dealers and specialists, as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

(c) When not in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, the rules of a securities exchange may permit—

(1) A member to be registered as an odd-lot dealer and as such to buy and sell for his own account so far as may be reasonably necessary to carry on such odd-lot transactions, or

(2) A member to be registered as specialist. If under the rules and regulations of the Commission, a specialist is permitted to act as a dealer, or is limited to acting as a dealer, such rules and regulations shall restrict his dealings so far as practicable to those reasonably necessary to permit him to maintain a fair and orderly market, or to those necessary to permit him to act as an odd-lot dealer. It shall be unlawful for a specialist or an official of the exchange to disclose information in regard to orders placed with such specialist which is not available to all members of the exchange, to any person other than an official of the exchange, a representative of the Commission, or a specialist who may be acting for such specialist; but the Commission shall have power to require disclosure to all members of the exchange of all orders placed with specialists, under such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors. It shall also be unlawful for a specialist acting as a broker to effect on the exchange any transaction except upon a market or limited price order.

(d) If because of the limited volume of transactions effected on an exchange, it is, in the opinion of the Commission, impracticable and not necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors to apply any of the foregoing provisions of this section or the rules and regulations thereunder, the Commission shall have power, upon application of the exchange and on a showing that the rules of such exchange are otherwise adequate for the protection of investors, to exempt such exchange and its members from any such provision or rules and regulations.

(e) It shall be unlawful for a member of a securities exchange who is both a dealer and a broker, or for any person who both as a broker and a dealer transacts a business in securities through the medium of a member or otherwise, to effect through, the use of any facility of a securities exchange, or otherwise, in the case of a member—

(1) Any transaction in connection with which, directly or indirectly, he extends or maintains or arranges for the extension or maintenance of credit to or for a customer on any security (other than an exempted security) which was a part of a new issue in the distribution of which he participated as a member of a selling syndicate or group within six months prior to such transaction; Provided, That credit shall not be deemed extended by reason of a bona fide delayed delivery of any such security against full payment of the entire purchase price thereof upon such delivery within thirty-five days after such purchase, or

(2) Any transaction with respect to any security other (than an exempted security) unless, if the transaction is with a customer, he discloses to such customer in writing at or before the completion of the transaction whether he is acting as a dealer for his own account, as a broker for such customer, or as a broker for some other person.

SEC. 23. Transactions in unregistered securities on securities exchange prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any member, broker or dealer to effect any transaction in any security (other than an exempted security) on a securities exchange unless a registration is effective as to such security in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the rules and regulations thereunder.

SEC. 24. Proxies.—It shall be unlawful for any member of a securities exchange or any broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member, to give a proxy, consent or authorization in respect of any security carried for the account of a customer in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

SEC. 25. Over-the-counter markets.—It shall be unlawful, in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or to insure to investors protection comparable to that provided by and under authority of this Act in the case of securities exchanges—

(1) For any broker or dealer, singly or with any other person or persons, to make or create, or enable another to make or create, a market, otherwise than on a securities exchange, for both the purchase and sale of any security, other than an exempted security or commercial paper, bankers' acceptances, or commercial bills, or securities which have not previously been registered or listed with an exchange, or

(2) For any broker or dealer to use any facility of any such market.

Such rules and regulations may provide for the regulation of all transactions by brokers and dealers on any such market, for the registration with the Commission of dealers or brokers making or creating such a market, and for the registration of the securities for which they make or create a market, and may make special provision with respect to securities or specified classes thereof listed, or entitled to unlisted trading privileges, upon any exchange on the effective date of this Act, which securities are not registered under the provisions hereof.

SEC. 26. Directors, officers, and principal stockholders.—(a) Every person who is directly or indirectly the beneficial owner of more than ten per centum of any class of security (other than an exempted security), or who is a director or an officer of the issuer of such security, shall file, at the time of the registration of such security or within ten days after he becomes such beneficial owner, director, or officer, a statement with the exchange (and a duplicate original thereof with the Commission) of the amount of all securities of such issuer of which he is the beneficial owner, and within ten days after the close of each calendar month thereafter, if there has been any change in such ownership during such month, shall file with the exchange a statement (and a duplicate original thereof with the Commission) indicating his ownership at the close of the calendar month and such changes in his ownership as have occurred during such calendar month.

(b) Any profit realized by a beneficial owner, director, or officer, through the unfair use of information received as such, from any purchase and sale, or any sale and purchase, of any security of such issuer (other than an exempted security), within any period of less than six months of the issue thereof, unless such security was acquired in good faith in connection with a debt previously contracted, shall inure to and be recoverable by the issuer.

SEC. 27. Account and records, reports, examinations of exchanges, members, and others.

—(a) Every securities exchange, every member thereof, every broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member, shall make, keep and preserve for such periods, such accounts, correspondence, memoranda, papers, books and other records, and make such reports as the Commission by its rules and regulations may prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors. Such accounts, correspondence, memoranda, papers, books, and other records shall be subject at any time or from time to time to such reasonable, periodic, special or other examinations by examiners or other representatives of the Commission as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, provided that the Commission give notice of the purpose of such examination, and if such examination is for the purpose of investigating any complaint filed with the Commission, or any information received by the Commission, that a copy of such complaint or a statement of such information be furnished by the Commission to such exchange, member, broker or dealer at least five days prior to the commencement of such examination.

(b) Any broker, dealer or other person extending credit who is subject to the rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission pursuant to this Act, shall make such reports to the Commission as may be necessary or appropriate to enable it to perform the functions conferred upon it by this Act.

SEC. 28. Powers with respect to exchanges and securities.—(a) The Commission is authorized, if in its opinion such action is necessary or appropriate for the protection of investors:

(1) After appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, by order, to suspend for a period not exceeding twelve months or to withdraw the registration of a securities exchange, if the Commission finds that such exchange has willfully violated any provision of this Act or of the rules and regulations thereunder, or has willfully failed to enforce, so far as is within its power, compliance therewith by a member or by an issuer of a security registered thereon.

(2) After appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, by order, to suspend for a period not exceeding twelve months or to expel from a securities exchange any member or officer thereof whom the Commission finds has willfully violated any provision of this Act or the rules and regulations thereunder, or has effected any transaction for any person who, he has reason to believe, is violating in respect of such transaction any provision of this Act or the rules and regulations thereunder.

(3) And if in its opinion the public interest so requires, summarily to suspend trading in any registered security on any securities exchange for a period not exceeding ten days or, with the approval of the President, summarily to suspend all trading on any securities exchange for a period not exceeding ninety days.

(b) The Commission is further authorized, if after making appropriate request in writing to a securities exchange that such exchange effect on its own behalf specified changes in its rules and practices and, after appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, the Commission determines that such exchange has not made the changes so requested, and that such changes are necessary or appropriate for the protection of investors or to insure fair dealing in securities traded in upon such exchange or to insure fair administration of such exchange, by rules or regulations or by order, to alter or supplement the rules of such exchange (insofar as necessary or appropriate to effect such changes) in respect of such matters as—

(1) Safeguards in respect of the financial responsibility of members and adequate provision against the evasion of financial respensibility through the use of corporate forms or special partnerships;

(2) The limitation or prohibition of the registration or trading in any security within a specified period after the issuance or primary distribution thereof;

(3) The listing or striking from listing of any security;

(4) Hours of trading;

(5) The manner, method, and place of soliciting business;

(6) Fictitious accounts;

(7) The time and method of making settlements, payments, and deliveries, and of closing accounts;

(8) The reporting of transactions on the exchange and upon tickers maintained by or with the consent of the exchange, including the method of reporting short sales, stopped sales, sales of securities of issuers in default, bankruptcy or receivership, and sales involving other special circumstances;

(9) The fixing of reasonable rates of commission, interest, listing, and other charges;

(10) Minimum units of trading;

(11) Odd-lot purchases and sales; and

(12) Minimum deposits on margin accounts.

CHAPTER VI.—General

SEC. 29. Liabilities of controlling persons.

(a) Every person who, directly or indirectly, controls any person liable under any provision of this Act or of any rule or regulation thereunder shall also be liable jointly and severally with and to the same extent as such controlled person to any person to whom such controlled person is liable, unless the controlling person acted in good faith and did not directly or indirectly induce the act or acts constituting the violation or cause of action.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, to do any act or thing which it would be unlawful for such person to do under the provisions of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder through or by means of any other person.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any director or officer of, or any owner of any of the securities issued by, any issuer of any security registered in accordance with this Act, without just cause, to hinder, delay, or obstruct the making or filing of any document, report, or information required to be filed under this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder.

SEC. 30. Remedies.—(a) Every sale made in violation of any of the provisions of this Act or wherein the purchaser shall have relied upon any statement which was at the time and in the light of the circumstances under which it was made false and misleading with respect to any material fact contained in any application, report, or document filed pursuant to this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder, shall be voidable at the election of the purchaser; and the person making such sale and every director, officer or agent of or for such seller, if such director, officer or agent shall have personally participated or aided in any way in making such sale, shall be jointly and severally liable to such purchaser in an action in any court of competent jurisdiction upon tender of the securities sold or of the contract made for the full amount paid by such purchaser, with interest, together with all taxable court costs and reasonable attorney's fees: Provided, That no action shall be brought for the recovery of the purchase price after two years from the date of such sale: And provided, further, That no purchaser otherwise entitled shall claim or have the benefit of this section who shall have refused or failed within thirty days from the date thereof to accept an offer in writing of the seller to take back the security in question and to refund the full amount paid by such purchaser, together with interest on such amount for the period from the date of payment by such purchaser down to the date of repayment, such interest to be computed:

(1) In case such securities consist of interest-bearing obligations, at the same rate as provided in such obligations; and

(2) In case such securities consist of other than interest-bearing obligations, at the rate of six per centum per annum; less, in every case, the amount of any income from said securities that may have been received by such purchaser.

(b) Any person having a right of action against a dealer, broker or salesman under this section shall have a right of action under the bond provided in section fourteen.

SEC. 31. Investigations, injunctions and prosecution of offense.—(a) The Commission may, in its discretion, make such investigations as it deems necessary to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder, and may require or permit any person to file with it a statement in writing, under oath or otherwise as the Commission shall determine, as to all the facts and circumstances concerning the matter to be investigated. The Commission is authorized, in its discretion, to publish information concerning any such violations, and to investigate any fact, condition, practice, or matter which it may deem necessary or proper to aid in the enforcement of the provisions of this Act, in the prescribing of rules and regulations thereunder, or in securing information to serve as a basis for recommending further legislation concerning the matters to which this Act relates: Provided, however, That no such investigation shall be conducted unless the person investigated is furnished with a copy of any complaint which may have been the cause of the initiation of the investigation or is notified in writing of the purpose of such investigation.

(b) For the purpose of any such investigation, or any other proceeding under this Act, the Commission or any officer designated by it is empowered to administer oaths and affirmations, subpoena witnesses, compel attendance, take evidence, and require the production of any book, paper, correspondence, memorandum, or other record which the Commission deems relevant or material to the inquiry. Any person who shall, without just cause, fail or refuse to attend and testify or to answer any lawful inquiry or to produce books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, and other records, if in his power so to do, in obedience to the subpoena of the Commission, shall be guilty of an offense and, upon conviction, shall be subject to discipline as in case of contempt of court and, upon application of the Commission, shall be dealt with by the Court of First Instance where such person resides in the manner provided by law.

(c) No persons shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, contracts, agreements and other records and documents before the Commission or in obedience to the subpoena of the Commission or any officer designated by it, or in any cause or proceeding instituted by the Commission, on the ground that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no individual shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is compelled, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, except that such individual so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

(d) Whenever it shall appear to the Commission that any person is engaged or about to engage in any act or practice which constitutes or will constitute a violation of the provisions of this Act, or of any rule or regulation thereunder, it may in its discretion bring an action in the Court of First Instance of Manila to enjoin such acts or practices, and upon a proper showing, a permanent or temporary injunction or restraining order shall be granted without bond. The Commission may transmit such evidence as may be available concerning such acts or practices to the Secretary of Justice, who may, in his discretion, order or institute the necessary proceedings, criminal or civil, under this Act.

(e) Upon application of the Commission, the Court of First Instance of Manila shall also have jurisdiction to issue mandatory injunctions commanding any person to comply with the provisions of this Act or any order of the Commission made in pursuance thereof.

SEC. 32. Hearing by Commission.—Hearings may lie and may be held before the Commission, or any officer or officers of the Commission designated by it, and appropriate records thereof shall be kept.

SEC. 33. Rules and regulations.—The Commission shall have power to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the execution of the functions vested in it by this Act.

SEC. 34. Revelation of information filed with the Commission.—(a) Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require, or to authorize the Commission to require, the revealing of trade secrets or processes in any application, report, or document filed with the Commission.

(b) Any person filing any such application, report or document may make written objection to the public disclosure of information contained therein, stating the grounds for such objections and the Commission is authorized to hear objections in any such case as it deems advisable. The Commission may, in such cases, make available to the public the information contained in any such application, report, or document only when a disclosure of such information is required in the public interest or for the protection of investors; and copies of information so made available may be furnished to any person having a legitimate interest therein at such reasonable charge and under such reasonable limitations as the Commission may prescribe.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any member, officer, or employee of the Commission to disclose to any person other than a member, officer, or employee of the Commission, or to use for personal benefit, any information contained in any application, report, or document filed with the Commission which is not made available to the public pursuant to subsection (b) of this section.

SEC. 35. Court review of orders.—(a) Any person aggrieved by an order issued by the Commission in a proceeding under this Act to which such person is a party or who may be affected thereby may obtain a review of such order in the Supreme Court of the Philippines by filing in such court, within sixty days after the entry of such order, a written petition praying that the order of the Commission be modified or set aside in whole or in part. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the Commission, and thereupon the Commission shall certify and file in the court a transcript of the record upon which the order complained of was entered. Upon the filing of such transcript, such court shall have exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, modify, and enforce or set aside such order, in whole or in part. No objection to the order of the Commission shall be considered unless such objection shall have been urged before the Commission, provided that opportunity therefor has been afforded. The finding of the Commission as to the facts shall be conclusive. If either party shall apply to the court for leave to adduce additional evidence and shall show to the satisfaction of the court that such additional evidence is material and that there were reasonable grounds for failure to adduce such evidence in the hearing before the Commission, the court may order such additional evidence to be taken before the Commission and to be adduced upon the hearing in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as to the court may seem proper. The Commission may modify its findings as to the facts, by reason of the additional evidence so taken, and it shall file such modified or new findings, which shall be conclusive, and its recommendation, if any, for the modification or setting aside of the original order.

The judgment and decree of the court, affirming, modifying, and enforcing or setting aside, in whole or in part, any such order of the Commission, shall be final, subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States in cases where and upon the grounds by which a petition for a writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of the Philippines may be presented in the Supreme Court of the United States.

(b) The commencement of proceedings under subsection (a) hereof shall not operate as a stay of the Commission's order unless specifically ordered by the Court.

SEC. 36. Effect of action of Commission and unlawful representations with respect thereto.—No action or failure to act by the Commission in the administration of this Act shall be construed to mean that the Commission has in any way passed upon the merits of or given approval to any security or any transaction or transactions therein, nor shall such action or failure to act with regard to any statement or report filed with or examined by the Commission pursuant to this Act or the rules and regulations thereunder be deemed a finding by the Commission that such statement or report is true and accurate on its face or that it is not false or misleading. It shall be unlawful to make, or cause to be made, to any prospective purchaser or seller of a security any representation that any such action or failure to act by the Commission is to be so construed or has such effect.

SEC. 37. Effect on existing law.—The rights and remedies provided by this Act shall be in addition to any and all other rights and remedies that may now exist, but no person permitted to maintain a suit for damages under the provisions of this Act shall recover, through satisfaction of judgment in one or more actions, a total amount in excess of his actual damages on account of the act complained of.

SEC. 38. Validity of contracts.—(a) Any condition, stipulation, or provision binding any person to waive compliance with any provision of this Act or of any rule or regulation thereunder, or of any rule of an exchange required thereby, shall be void.

(b) Every contract made in violation of any provision of this Act or of any rule or regulation thereunder, in every contract (including any contract for listing a security on an exchange) heretofore or hereafter made, the performance of which involves the violation of, or the continuance of any relationship or practice in violation of, any provision of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder, shall be void.

(1) As regards the rights of any person who, in violation of any such provision, rule or regulation, shall have made or engaged in the performance of any such contract and

(2) As regards the rights of any person who, not being a party to such contract, shall have acquired any right thereunder with actual knowledge of the facts by reason of which the making or performance of such contract was in violation of any such provision, rule or regulation.

(c) Nothing in this Act shall be construed—

(1) To affect the validity of any loan or extension of credit made or of any lien created prior or subsequent to the effectiveness of this Act, unless at the time of the making of such loan or extension of credit or the creating of such lien, the person making such loan or extension of credit or acquiring such lien shall have actual knowledge of the facts by reason of which the making of such loan or extension of credit or the acquisition of such lien is a violation of the provisions of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder, or

(2) To afford a defense to the collection of any debt, obligation or the enforcement of any lien by any person who shall have acquired such debt, obligation, or lien in good faith for value and without actual knowledge of the violation of any provision of this Act or any rule or regulation thereunder affecting the legality of such debt, obligation or lien.

SEC. 39. Additional fee of stock exchanges.—In addition to the registration fee prescribed in section seventeen of this Act, every securities exchange shall pay to the Treasurer of the Philippines, on or before March fifteen of each calendar year, a fee in an amount equal to one five-hundredth of one per centum of the aggregate amount of the sales of securities transacted on such securities exchange during the preceding calendar year, for the privilege of doing business as a securities exchange, during the preceding calendar year or any part thereof.

SEC. 40. Penalties.—Any person who willfully violates any provision of this Act, or any lawful rule or regulation thereunder, the violation of which is made unlawful or the observance of which is required under the terms of this Act, or any person who willfully and knowingly makes, or causes to be made, any statement in any application, report, or document required to be filed under this Act, or any lawful rule or regulation thereunder, which statement is false or misleading with respect to any material fact, shall, upon conviction, be sentenced to suffer imprisonment for a period not exceeding two years, or a fine not exceeding twenty thousand pesos, or both, in the discretion of the court, except that when such person is an exchange, the penalty shall be a fine which shall not exceed one hundred thousand pesos.

SEC. 41. Separability of provisions.—If any provision of this Act shall be held invalid, the remainder of the Act shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 42. Repealing clause.—All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 43. Appropriation.—The sum of fifty thousand pesos, together with all the collections under the provisions of this Act, or so much thereof as may be necessary, are hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Philippine Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be disbursed upon order of the Department Head, for the payment of salaries and travel expenses of the officers and personnel of the Commission, for the purchase of equipment and supplies, and for such other incidental expenses as may necessarily be incurred to carry into effect the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 44. Effective date.—Chapters I, II, and III of this Act, and so much of Chapter VI thereof as are necessary to carry into effect the provisions of Chapter III, shall take effect on the date of the approval of this Act; all the other Chapters and provisions shall take effect on January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-seven.

Approved, October 26, 1936.

THE MINING ACT

FIRST NATIONAL ASSEMBLY
First Session

B. No. 2290

[COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 137]

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR THE CONSERVATION, DISPOSITION, AND DEVELOPMENT OF MINERAL LANDS AND MINERALS.

Be it enacted by the National Assembly of the Philippines:

CHAPTER I.—Title of Act

SECTION 1. The short title of this Act shall be "The Mining Act."

CHAPTER II.—Definitions

SEC. 2. The terms "person," "holder," "occupant," "locator," "licensee," "lessee," "permittee," "owner," whenever used in this Act, shall include an individual, a corporation, a sociedad anónima, a limited partnership and an unincorporated association, and words in the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa. The term "ton" as used in this Act shall mean a short ton of nine hundred seven and two tenths (907.2) kilograms.

CHAPTER III.—Ownership of Minerals and Mineral Lands

SEC. 3. All mineral lands of the public domain and minerals belong to the State, and their disposition, exploitation, development, or utilization, shall be limited to citizens of the Philippines, or to corporations, or associations, at least sixty per centum of the capital of which is owned by such citizens, subject to any existing right, grant, lease, or concession at the time of the inauguration of the Government established under the Constitution.

SEC. 4. The ownership and the right to the use of land for agricultural, industrial, commercial, residential, or for any purpose other than mining does not include the ownership of, nor the right to extract or utilize, the minerals which may be found on or under the surface.

SEC. 5. The ownership of, and the right to extract and utilize, the mineral included within all areas for which public agricultural land patents are granted are excluded and excepted from all such patents.

SEC. 6. The ownership of, and the right to extract and utilize, the minerals included within all areas for which Torrens titles are granted are excluded and excepted from all such titles.

SEC. 7. With the exception of the soil which supports organic life, and of ordinary earth, gravel, sand, and stone which are used for building or construction purposes, the disposition of which is governed by Act Numbered Three thousand seventy-seven, as amended by Act Numbered Three thousand eight hundred and fifty-two of the Philippine Legislature, all inorganic substances found in nature in solid, liquid, gaseous, or any intermediate state are minerals within the purview of this Act.

SEC. 8. Mineral lands are those in which minerals exist in sufficient quantity or quality to justify the necessary expenditures to be incurred in extracting and utilizing such minerals.

SEC. 9. The exploitation of public and private lands for mining purposes shall be governed by existing laws, rules and regulations which may be promulgated thereunder.

SEC. 10. Subject to any existing rights, all valuable mineral deposits in public or in private land not closed to mining location, and the land in which they are found, excepting coal, petroleum, and other mineral oils and gas, which are now governed by special laws, shall be free and open to exploration, occupation, location, and lease, by citizens of the Philippines of legal age, or by associations, or by corporations organized and constituted under the laws of the Philippines: Provided, That at least sixty per centum of the capital of such associations or corporations shall at all times be owned and held by citizens of the Philippines.

SEC. 11. Upon the recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, the President may set apart mineral land reservations, and he shall by proclamation declare the establishment of such reservations, and the boundaries thereof, and thereafter such reservations shall be closed or open to mining location or lease as the President may deem wise and may so provide in the proclamation. The President may, with the concurrence of the National Assembly, by proclamation alter or modify the boundaries of any mineral reserve from time to time or revoke any such proclamation, and upon such revocation, such reserve shall be and become part of the public domain as though no such proclamation had ever been made: Provided, however, That the President is hereby authorized to declare by proclamation any mineral reserve, closed to mining location: Provided, further, That all mineral reservations set aside by the Chief Executive prior to the approval of this Act shall remain in full force and effect and shall be administered and disposed of in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 12. From and after the date of proclamation of a mineral reserve, if the same has not been proclaimed closed to mining location, the lands thereby may be disposed of only for mining purposes as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 13. Whenever lands are reserved for purposes other than for mining, the holders of mining locations or leases within any such new reserve, at the time the reservation is made, shall continue to enjoy all rights accorded them under existing law with respect to such locations or leases as if such reservation had never been made.

SEC. 14. Lands within reservations for purposes other than mining, which, after such reservation is made, are found to be more valuable for their mineral contents than for the purpose for which the reservation was made, may be withdrawn from such reservations by the President with the concurrence of the National Assembly, and thereupon such lands shall revert to the public domain and be subject to disposition under the provisions of his Act.

SEC. 15. Lands leased for mining purposes shall be classified as follows:

First group—Metals or metalliferous ores.

Second group—Precious stones.

Third group—Fuels.

Fourth group—Salines and mineral waters.

Fifth group—Building stone in place, clays, fertilizers, and other nonmetals.

SEC. 16. Lands of the first group shall be those which contain any of the metallic elements or minerals, or their combinations, such as gold, silver, platinum, tin, chromium, iron, manganese, copper, nickel, lead, zinc, cinnabar, tungsten, and the like.

SEC. 17. Lands of the second group shall be those which contain minerals mainly used for ornamental purposes such as diamond, ruby, emerald, sapphire, topaz, amethyst, zircon, aquamarine, opal, jade, agate, tourmaline, beryl, garnet, turquoise, and the like.

SEC. 18. Lands of the third group shall be those which contain combustible substances in solid, liquid, gaseous form, such as peat, coal, mineral oils, natural gas, oil shales, asphalt, and the like, but not the recent products of organic life.

SEC. 19. Lands of the fourth group shall be those which contain surface or subterranean soluble substances or waters which by their mineral contents are classified as mineral waters, such as salt, nitrates, sulphurated, carbonated, sodic, calcic, and other waters.

SEC. 20. Lands of the fifth group shall be those which contain nonmetallic substances, such as:

(a) Those used for building or construction purposes, such as marble, granite, clay, and the like;

(b) Asbestos, feldspar, lime, mica, guano, phosphate, potash, saltpeter, niter, and the like;

(c) Other substances used in the manufacture of paints, ceramics and fertilizers and for other industrial purposes.

SEC. 21. Aerolites or other bodies coming from sidereal space are minerals within the meaning of this Act, the disposition of which shall be determined by regulations.

SEC. 22. Mineral lands may be classified under more than one group, depending upon the nature and uses of the minerals contained therein.

SEC. 23. The minerals which are not specially mentioned in this Act, and new ones which may be discovered in the future, shall be classified under their proper groups, whenever necessary, and shall be included therein by law or regulations.

CHAPTER IV.—Exploration and Prospecting for Mineral Deposits

SEC. 24. Prospectors may prospect for themselves, or for other persons, associations, corporations, or other entities, qualified to locate mining claims and to acquire leases of mineral lands under the provisions of this Act. A proper power of attorney in writing shall in each case be given by the employer to his prospector, which power of attorney shall be duly acknowledged and shall be recorded in the office of the mining recorder concerned coincident with the recording of a declaration of location. Regardless of the number of claims located by the prospector for the same principal in the same province or mining district, he shall be required to record but one power of attorney in any such province or district.

SEC. 25. Officers and employees of the executive or any other branch of the Government whose duties are related to the administration or disposition of mineral resources shall not be allowed to prospect, locate, lease, or hold, directly or indirectly, mineral lands in the Philippines.

SEC. 26. Prospecting may be carried on within public lands and private lands in accordance with the provisions of this Act: Provided, however, That in the case of private lands no prospecting shall be allowed except by the owner thereof during the period of one year from and after the effective date of this Act.

SEC. 27. Before entering private lands the prospector shall first apply in writing for written permission of the private owner, claimant, or holder thereof, and in case of refusal by such private owner, claimant, or holder to grant such permission, or in case of disagreement as to the amount of compensation to be paid for such privilege of prospecting therein, the amount of such compensation shall be fixed by agreement among the prospector, the Director of the Bureau of Mines and the surface owner, and in case of their failure to unanimously agree as to the amount of compensation, all questions at issue shall be determined by the Court of First Instance of the province in which said lands are situated in an action instituted for the purpose by the prospector, or his principal: Provided, however, That the prospector, or his principal, upon depositing with the court the sum considered jointly by him and the Director of the Bureau of Mines or by the court to be just compensation for the damages resulting from such prospecting, shall be permitted to enter upon, and locate the said land without such written permission pending final adjudication of the amount of such compensation; and in such case the prospector, or his principal, shall have a prior right as against the world, from the date of his application. The court in its final judgment, besides determining the corresponding compensation for the damages which may be caused by the prospecting, shall make a pronouncement as to the value of the land and the reasonable rental for the occupation and utilization thereof for mining purposes in case the prospector decides to locate and exploit the minerals found therein:

SEC. 28. No prospecting shall be allowed:

(a) In a mineral reserve which has been proclaimed closed to mining locations.

(b) In lands covered by patented mining claims.

(c) In lands in which minerals have been discovered prior to the effective date of this Act and are claimed by the discoverer or his successors in interest.

(d) In lands which have been located for mining leases by other prospectors under the provisions of this Act.

(e) Near or under buildings, cemeteries, bridges, highways, waterways, railroads, reservoirs, dams, or any other public or private works.

The regulations to be promulgated under this Act shall prescribe in detail the various restrictions under this section.

CHAPTER V.—Discovery of Mineral Deposits and Location of Mining Claims

SEC. 29. The right to locate a mining claim shall in all cases be based upon the discovery of mineral therein.

SEC. 30. The finding of mineral or minerals in place or position where originally formed in the rock, whether assaying high or low, shall constitute a valid discovery for the location of a lode mineral claim. The finding of mineral or minerals in loose, fragmentary or broken rocks, boulders, floats, beds or deposits whether in greater or lesser quantities, or the finding of the same in forms other than those above described for lode mineral claims, shall constitute a valid discovery for the location of a placer mining claim.

SEC. 31. A lode mineral claim is a parcel of mineral land containing a vein, lode, ledge, lens, or mass of ore in place which has been located in accordance with law. A placer claim is that which does not come under the definition of lode mineral claim.

SEC. 32. In case of conflicting locations, priority of discovery, followed by continuous occupation and prospecting of the land, shall determine the right to lease the claims, subject to any question as to the validity of the location and record of the claim and subject to the holder's having complied with all the requirements of the law: Provided, however, That actual discovery of minerals made prior to the effective date of this Act, before or after the enforcement of the Constitution, shall constitute a valid discovery, and the persons making such discovery shall have the preferential right to locate and lease the mining claims covering the minerals discovered, subject to the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 33. Immediately upon the discovery of mineral or as soon as possible thereafter, but not more than thirty days after the date of the said discovery, the discoverer or locator may locate a mining claim in accordance with the provisions of this Act, covering the land where the mineral has been discovered. If no such location is made within such period, the right to locate a mining claim covering such land shall be deemed to have been waived.

SEC. 34. Within sixty days after the completion of the acts of location of a mining claim, as hereinafter provided, the locator thereof shall record the same with the mining recorder of the province or district within which the claim is situated. A claim which shall not have been recorded within the prescribed period shall be deemed to have been abandoned.

SEC. 35. The maximum area which may be acquired under a mining claim located under the provisions of this Act shall be:

First group:

(a) Metals or metalliferous ores in lode deposits, nine hectares for an individual, an unincorporated association, a sociedad anónima, a limited partnership or a corporation.

(b) Metals or metalliferous ores in placer deposits; not to exceed eight hectares for an individual nor sixty-four hectares for a corporation, sociedad anónima, or limited partnership: Provided, That in the case of an unincorporated association the area shall not exceed eight (8) hectares for each member nor sixty-four (64) hectares for the entire association.

Second group:

Precious stones whether in lode or placer deposits, not to exceed four hectares for any qualified locator or applicant.

Fourth group:

Saline and mineral waters, not to exceed four hectares for any qualified locators or applicant.

(a) Building stone, clay, fertilizer, and other nonmetals in placer deposits not to exceed eight hectares for an individual nor sixty-four hectares for a corporation, sociedad anónima, or limited partnership; Provided, That in the case of an unincorporated association the area shall not exceed eight (8) hectares for each member nor sixty-four (64) hectares for the entire association.

(b) Nonmetals in lode deposit—not to exceed nine hectares for an individual, an unincorporated association, a sociedad anónima, a limited partnership or a corporation.

SEC. 36. The disposition of the third group of mineral lands, or lands containing mineral fuels, whether public or private, shall be governed by Act Numbered Two thousand seven hundred nineteen, as amended, entitled, "An Act to provide for the leasing and development of coal lands in the Philippine Islands" and the regulations promulgated thereunder, and by Act Numbered Two thousand nine hundred thirty-two, as amended, entitled, "An Act to provide for the exploration, location and lease of lands containing petroleum and other mineral oils and gas in the Philippine Islands" and the regulations promulgated thereunder; Provided, That the granting of permit, license, lease, or concession of such coal, or petroleum land, shall be limited to citizens of the Philippines of legal age, or to associations or to corporations organized and constituted under the laws of the Philippines; Provided, further, That the provisions of Acts Numbered Two thousand seven hundred and nineteen, as amended, and Two thousand nine hundred and thirty-two, as amended, to the contrary notwithstanding, at least sixty per centum of the capital of such association or corporation shall at all times be owned and held by citizens of the Philippines. All licenses, concessions, or leases for the exploitation, development, or utilization of such coal lands, or lands containing petroleum and other mineral oils and gas, shall be for a period not exceeding twenty-five years, renewable for another period not exceeding twenty-five years.

SEC. 37. In the case of the first, second, fourth, and fifth groups of mineral lands, no locator, applicant or lessee shall be entitled to hold or lease in his, its or their own names or in the name of any person, association, corporation, sociedad anónima, or limited partnership more than three lode mineral claims on the same vein or lode, or more than three placer mining claims, in the case of an individual, or more than three placer mining claims, in the case of a corporation, an association, a sociedad anónima, or a limited partnership on the same placer ground.

SEC. 38. Mining claims of the first, second, fourth, and fifth groups may be located either as lode or as placer claims, depending upon whether the mineral deposits therein are found in lode or in placer form; Provided, however, That if a parcel of land, by reason of the nature of the mineral deposits found therein, is subject to either lode or placer location, the prior location of either class, validly made, shall prevail; Provided, further, That in case a placer location is made first, the locator thereof must thereafter make a lode location in order to secure the mining rights to lode deposits found within the boundaries of the placer claim; Provided, further, That in such cases the locator, or his successors in interest, shall be entitled to all minerals of the group for which the mining location or locations have been made or the lease granted, which may lie within his claims, but he shall not be entitled to mine outside the boundary lines of his claim continued vertically downward; And provided, finally, That the holder or lessee shall have preferential right to locate and lease any mineral deposits of any other group found therein.

SEC. 39. Lode claims, whether located by one or more persons qualified to locate mining claims under this Act shall be located in the following manner and under the following conditions:

Any person so qualified desiring to locate a lode mineral claim shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, enter upon the same and locate a plat of ground, measuring not more than three hundred meters in length by three hundred meters in breadth, in as nearly as possible a rectangular form; that is to say, all angles shall be right angles, except in cases where the boundary line of a previously surveyed claim is adopted as common to both claims, but the lines need not necessarily be meridional. In defining the size of a mineral claim, it shall be measured horizontally irrespective of inequalities of the surface of the ground.

SEC. 40. A lode claim shall be marked by two posts, placed as nearly as possible on the line or direction of the lode or vein, and the posts shall be numbered one and two, and the distance between posts numbered one and two shall not exceed three hundred meters, the line between posts numbered one and two to be known as the location line; and upon posts numbered one and two shall be written the name given to the lode mineral claim, the name of the locator, and the date of the location. Upon post numbered one there shall be written, in addition to the foregoing "Initial post," the approximate compass bearing of post number two, and statement of the number of meters lying to the right and to the left of the line from post number one to post number two, thus: "Initial post. Direction of post number two meters of this claim lie on the right and meters on the left of the line from number one post to number two post."

SEC. 41. When a claim has been located the locator shall immediately mark the line between posts number one and two so that it can be distinctly seen. The locator shall also place a post at the point where he has found minerals in place, or on the surface vertically above such point if the discovery be underground, on which shall be written "Discovery post": Provided, That when the claim is surveyed the surveyor shall be guided by the records of the claim, the sketch plan in the declaration of location made by the locator when the claim was located and recorded, posts number one and two, and the notice on number one, the initial post. In cases where, from the nature or shape of the ground, it is impossible to mark the location line of the claim as provided in this Act, then the claim may be marked by placing posts as nearly as possible to the proper position of number one and number two posts, and noting thereon the distance and direction of such posts from such positions, which distance and direction shall be set out in the declaration of location of the claim.

SEC. 42. In addition to the requirements of sections forty and forty-one of this Act with regard to the placing of posts number one and two on the line of location, and to the marking of the line between them, each locator of a lode mineral claim shall blaze trees along the boundary line thereof by clearing or by marking the same with any other readily distinguishable signs or marks, and shall establish each of the four corners of the claim by marking a standing tree or rock in place, or by setting in the ground, when practicable, a post or stone. Each corner shall be distinctly marked with the name of the claim, the name of the locator, and the date of location, and with such works as to indicate that it is the northeast, southeast, southwest, or other corner, as the case may be, of the lode mineral claim concerned, and the posts or stones used to mark such corners shall be as follows:

When a post is used, it must be at least fifteen centimeters in diameter or twelve centimeters on each side by one hundred forty centimeters in length, and where practicable, set forty centimeters in the ground and surrounded by a mound of earth or stone one hundred twenty-five centimeters in diameter by sixty-five centimeters in height; when a stone, not a rock in place is used, it must not be less than thirty-five centimeters on each side by eighty centimeters in length, and must be set so as to project half its length above the ground; when a stone or rock in place is used, a cross must be cut in the stone the arms of which the cross must be at least twelve centimeters long, intersecting approximately at right angles and in their centers, the cutting to be at least two centimeters deep. The intersection of the arms shall constitute the corner.

SEC. 43. It shall not be lawful to move number one post of a lode mineral claim but number two post may be moved by the mineral land surveyor when the distance between posts numbered one and two exceeds three hundred meters in order to place number two post three hundred meters from number one post on the line of location. When the distance between posts numbered one and two is less than three hundred meters, the mineral land surveyor shall have no authority to extend the claim beyond post numbered two.

SEC. 44. The location line shall govern the direction of one side of the claim, upon which the survey shall be extended according to the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 45. Placer mining claims may be of an irregular pattern following the meanderings of a creek, river, or stream; Provided, That on placer grounds not confined to the beds of such creeks, rivers, or streams, or on those extending beyond the banks thereof, placer claims shall be located in as nearly as possible rectangular form.

SEC. 46. The locator of a placer claim shall post upon the same a notice containing the name of the claim, designating it as a placer claim, the name of each locator, the date of location, the number of the corners of the claim, and the number of hectares claimed. He shall also define the boundaries of the claim by marking a standing tree, or rock in place, or by setting a post, stone, or monument at each corner or angle of the claim. The trees, rocks in place, stakes, stones, or monuments used to mark the corners or angles of a placer mining claim must be inscribed with a series of consecutive numbers, thus Corner No. 1, Corner No. 2, Corner No. 3, and so forth, in clockwise direction, and at least the four end corners of the placer mining claim shall be marked with the name of the claim, the name of the locator, and the date of location. The post, stones, or monuments used to mark the corners of a placer mining claim must be of dimensions required by section forty-two of this Act for the posts, stones, or monuments to be used in marking the corners or angles of a lode mineral claim.

SEC. 47. The record of a lode or placer claim shall consist of a declaration of location which shall contain, among others, the name of the claim, the name of each locator, the date of location, the names of the sitio, barrio, municipality, province and island, in which the claim is situated, the words written on the number one and number two posts in the case of lode claims, and a true copy of the notice posted on the placer claim and shall recite all the facts necessary to the identification of the lode or placer claim, as well as a description of the claim as staked and monumented, showing the length and approximate compass bearing as near as may be, of each side or course thereof, and stating in what manner the respective corners are marked, whether by standing tree, rock in place, post, or stone and giving in detail the distinguishing marks that are written or cut on each, and also stating as accurately as possible, preferably by bearing and distance, the position of the claim with reference to some prominent natural objects or permanent monuments.

SEC. 48. No lode or placer mining claim shall be recorded unless the declaration of location be accompanied by an affidavit made by the applicant or some person on his behalf cognizant of the facts that the legal notices required by this Act for a lode or a placer claim have been posted upon the claim, that in the case of a lode claim mineral has been found in place therein, or in the case of a placer claim the ground thereby embraced is valuable for placer mining purposes, and that the ground applied for is unoccupied for mining purposes by any other person.

SEC. 49. No lode or placer mining claim shall be recorded unless the declaration of location be accompanied by proof that the locator, or each of them, in case there be more than one, is a citizen of the Philippines, of legal age, or is an association, or a corporation organized and constituted under the laws of the Philippines, at least sixty per centum of the capital of which association or corporation is owned and held by citizens of the Philippines.

SEC. 50. Proof of citizenship and of age under the clauses of this Act relating to location and lease of mineral lands may consist, in the case of an individual, of his own affidavit; in the case of an association of persons unincorporated, of the affidavit of their authorized agent made on his own knowledge; and in the case of a corporation organized under the laws of the Philippines, by the filing of a certified copy of its charter or certificate of incorporation, accompanied by the affidavit of any duly authorized representative of the corporation cognizant of the facts, certifying that at least sixty per centum of its capital is owned and held by citizens of the Philippines.

SEC. 51. The form of declaration of location of a lode mineral claim and of the accompanying affidavit required by this Act shall be substantially as follows:

Mining Recorder or District Mining Officer

SEC. 54. The register of deeds of the province concerned shall act as mining recorder for that province: Provided, however, That if circumstances so require, the President may appoint district mining officers, or mining recorders or by administrative order impose the performance of the duties of the local district mining officer or mining recorder upon any official or employee in the public service. All such district mining officers or mining recorders shall be under the direction, supervision, and control of the Director of the Bureau of Mines in so far as their duties as district mining officers or mining recorders are concerned.

SEC. 55. The Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce may establish mining districts, the boundaries of which shall, so far as is practicable, coincide with the boundaries of the corresponding provinces, but when local conditions so require two or more provinces or parts thereof may be included in the same mining district.

SEC. 56. All declarations of location, affidavits, powers of attorney, and all other documents or instruments in writing, regarding or affecting the possession of mining claims or any right or title thereto, or interest therein, shall be recorded by the mining recorder in the order in which they are filed for record, and from and after such recording, all such documents or instruments in writing shall constitute notice to all persons and to the whole world of the contents of the same.

SEC. 57. If at any time the locator of any mining claim located under the provisions of this Act, or his successors or assigns, shall apprehend that his original location notice or declaration of location was defective, or erroneous, or that the requirements of the law had not been complied with before recording, or shall be desirous of changing his boundaries so as to include ground not embraced by the location as originally made and recorded, and the locator, or his assigns, shall desire to conform the location and declaration of location thereto, such locator, his successors or assigns, may file an amended declaration of location in accordance with the provisions of this Act, with the mining recorder of the province or district in which such claim is situated: Provided, That such amended declaration of location does not interfere at the date of its filing for record with the existing rights of any other person or persons and that no lease on the mining claim affected has as yet been granted to him by the Government prior to the filing of the amended declaration of location. Such amended declaration of location, with the accompanying affidavit, shall be substantially in the following form:

SEC. 58. There shall be paid to the provincial treasurer or to the mining recorder duly authorized to receive payment, a fee of three pesos for each original or amended declaration of location of a mining claim, for each affidavit accompanying such declaration, and for each power of attorney, document, or instrument in writing, regarding or affecting the possession of mining claims or any right or title thereto, or interest therein, filed for record, and, on the presentation of the receipt of the provincial treasurer or mining recorder duly authorized to receive payment, the said declaration, affidavit, power of attorney, document or instrument in writing shall be recorded by the mining recorder: Provided,
 That the affidavit of the locator or of the mining claim or of his, its, or their agent, required by this Act, have been filed and the fees herein required have been paid. The fees shall be accounted for as other collections of the officers receiving them, and deposited to the credit of the proper province or municipality, as the case may be, in accordance with the next following section of this Act.

SEC. 59. Fifty per centum of the fees collected by authority of the preceding section shall accrue to the province and fifty per centum of the same, shall accrue to the municipality in which the mining claim is located.
 In the case of chartered cities the full amount shall accrue to the city concerned.

SEC. 60. No valid mining claim or any part thereof, may be located by others until the original locator or his successors in interest abandons the claim or forfeits his right on the same under the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 61. Conflicts and disputes arising out of mining locations may be submitted to the Director of the Bureau of Mines for decision: Provided, That such decision may be appealed to the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce within ninety days from the date of its entry.

In case any one of the interested parties should disagree from the decision of the Director of the Bureau of Mines or of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, the matter may be taken to the court of competent jurisdiction within ninety days after notice of such decision, after which time without the institution of such action the said decision shall be final and binding upon the parties concerned.

SEC. 62. Any qualified person making a valid location of a mining claim, his successors, and assigns, acquires thereby the right of exploration and occupation from the date of the registry of the claims in the office of the mining recorder; but he shall not be entitled to mine or extract minerals from the claim for commercial purposes until a lease is granted thereon as provided for in this Act: Provided, however, That if an application for lease of said mining claim is made, such application shall ipso facto serve to extend the period of such right until final action is taken thereon.

SEC. 63. At any time prior to the granting of the lease on his mining claim a holder thereof may abandon the same by giving notice in writing to the mining recorder of his intention to abandon the same, and from the date of the record of such notice all his interests in such claim shall cease.

Chapter VI.—Survey and Lease of Mineral Lands

SEC. 64. The Director of the Bureau of Mines may designate competent mineral or deputy minerals land surveyors to survey mining claims for any necessary purpose under the provisions of this Act. He is also hereby empowered to fix the bonds of duly qualified deputy mineral land surveyors and to issue the necessary regulations governing the execution and verification of surveys of mineral lands in the Philippines. All applications for official surveys of mining claims shall be filed with the Director of the Bureau of Mines and the expenses of such surveys shall be paid by the applicants. They shall be at liberty to employ any such deputy mineral surveyor to make the survey at the most reasonable rate.

SEC. 65. At the time of the official survey the corners of mining claims shall be marked with concrete monuments, iron pipes, or with such other objects of a permanent nature as may be prescribed by regulations.

SEC. 66. In all surveys the astronomical meridian shall be made within the limits of accuracy prescribed by regulations. After the technical adjustments have been made the resulting bearings and distances between consecutive corners as computed from the adjusted data, shall be adopted and recognized.

SEC. 67. Any person authorized to locate a mining claim under this Act, having claimed and located a piece of land for mining purposes who has complied with the terms of this Act, may file with the Director of the Bureau of Mines an application under oath for a mining lease thereon, showing such compliance. A plan and a technical description of the mining claim or claims covered by the application shall be filed therewith or as soon thereafter as the same may be obtained from the Bureau of Mines under the provisions of this Act. In the case of an application to lease a mining claim located on private lands, the same shall be accompanied by a written authority of the owner of the land: Provided, however, That in case of refusal of the owner of the land to grant such written authority the same shall be granted by the court as soon as the applicant deposits the amount fixed as the value of the land and as compensation for any resulting damage or files a bond to be approved by the court sufficient to insure the payment of the rental of the land as determined in accordance with section twenty-seven of this Act. Should there have been no proceeding instituted by the applicant, as provided for under section twenty-seven of this Act, the Court shall determine the value of the land and the compensation for any resulting damage or its reasonable rental for the purposes above mentioned and grant the written authority required herein.

SEC. 68. Application for a lease on a mining claim shall be filed within two years from the date of the recording of the claim in the office of the mining recorder or within two years from the date of the approval of this Act. Failure to file such application within the period above mentioned shall be deemed an abandonment of the mining claim, and the land embraced within such claim shall thereupon be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made: Provided, That the original locator, his heirs, or his assigns, who has or have thus failed to file a lease application on the claim shall not be entitled to relocate, directly or indirectly, the land embraced within such claim, or any part thereof.

SEC. 69. A single application may be filed, and a single lease may be granted covering one or more mining claims: Provided, That all such claims to be included under one lease are adjoining or contiguous to each other, and are held by the same holder: Provided, further, That the total area or number of the said claims to be covered by a single lease shall not exceed to the maximum area, or the maximum number of claims authorized to be held or leased in any province or district, or on the same vein, or on the same placer ground by any one person, association, or corporation.

SEC. 70. All applications for mining lease shall be addressed to the Director of Mines, sworn to and shall state, among others:

(a) The name and post-office address of the applicant, stating whether he is an individual, his first name and surname both paternal and maternal, his birthplace, age and citizenship, and capital intended for the exploitation of the land, and if it is a corporation or association, stating its complete title and accompanying (1) a certified copy of the deed of partnership, its by-laws and rules; (2) a certified list of the stockholders and partners, with the details above specified in so far as the individual applicants are concerned, the number of shares he possesses and the amount he paid for them; (3) a certified list of its board of directors and executive officers, with the address of their offices and residences; and (4) in case there are foreign stockholders or partners the total amount of the shares of each one of them in the capital stock.

(b) That the application is made for the exclusive benefit of the applicant and not, directly or indirectly, for that of any other person whether natural or juridical who is disqualified to acquire a mining lease under the law.

SEC. 71. The statements made in the application or made later in support thereof, shall be considered as conditions and essential parts of the lease that may be granted by virtue of such application, and any falsehood in those statements or omission of facts which may alter, change or affect substantially the facts set forth in said statements shall cause the cancellation of the lease granted.

SEC. 72. Upon receipt of the application, and provided that the requirements of this Act have been substantially complied with, the Director of the Bureau of Mines shall publish a notice that such application has been made, once a week for a period of three consecutive weeks, in the Official Gazette and in two newspapers, one published in Manila either in English or Spanish, and the other published in the municipality or province in which the mining claim is located, if there is such newspaper, otherwise, in the newspaper published in the nearest municipality or province. The first publication of such notice shall be made within thirty days after the filing of the application for lease, if such application is accompanied by an official plan and technical description of the claim or claims covered by the application, and within thirty days after the filing of the official plan and technical description of the claim or claims covered by the application, if such application was filed in advance of the filing of such plan and technical description. The Director of the Bureau of Mines shall also cause to be posted on the bulletin board of the Bureau of Mines the same notice for the same period. The applicant shall post for the same period a copy of the plat of the claim or claims applied for, together with a notice of such application for lease, in a conspicuous place on the land embraced in such plat, on the bulletin board, if any, of the municipal building of the municipality, and also in the office of the mining recorder or district mining officer of the province or district in which the claim or claims are located; and shall file with the Director of the Bureau of Mines the affidavit of at least two persons stating that such notice has been duly posted in the places above specified. At the expiration of the period of publication the applicant shall file with the Director of the Bureau of Mines an affidavit showing that the plat and notice have been posted in a conspicuous place on the claim or claims concerned and in the places above specified during such period of publication, and thereupon, if no adverse claim shall have been presented to the Director of the Bureau of Mines, it shall be conclusively presumed that no such adverse claim exists and thereafter no objection from third parties to the granting of the lease shall be heard; and the lease shall within forty-five days be granted to the applicant, or to his successor or assigns, by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, provided that all amounts then due to the Government of the Philippines, or any of its branches or subdivisions, under the provisions of this Act, shall have been paid.

SEC. 73. At any time during the period of publication, any adverse claim may be filed under oath with the Director of the Bureau of Mines, and shall state in full detail the nature, boundaries, and extent of the adverse claim, and shall be accompanied by all plans, documents, and agreements upon which such adverse claim is based. Upon the filing of any adverse claim all proceedings except the publication of notice of application for lease and the publication of notice of application and the making and filing of the affidavit in connection therewith, as herein prescribed, shall be stayed until the controversy shall have been settled or decided by a court of competent jurisdiction, or the adverse claim waived. It shall be the duty of the adverse claimant, within forty-five days after filing his claim, to commence proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to determine the controversy and to prosecute the same with reasonable diligence to final judgment, and a failure to do so shall be considered as a waiver of his adverse claim. After such judgment shall have been rendered, the party whose right to a lease on the mining claim in controversy, or any portion thereof, shall have been established thereby, may, without giving further notice, file a certified copy of the judgment with the Director of the Bureau of Mines, and the description required in such cases, together with the proper fees, whereupon a lease may forthwith be granted thereon on such mining claim or on such portion thereof as the applicant may be entitled to under the decision of the court. If the decision of the court is that several parties are entitled to leases upon separate and different portions of the mining claim, the subject matter of the application, and such parties have theretofore applied therefor, leases may forthwith be issued to the said several parties according to their respective rights as determined by the decision. If in any action brought pursuant to this section a right to a lease upon any of the claim in controversy shall not be established by any of the parties, the courts shall so find and judgment shall be entered accordingly. In such case the clerk of the court rendering judgment shall file a certified copy of the judgment with the Director of the Bureau of Mines, whereupon the proceedings under the lease application shall be dismissed and the application denied.

SEC. 74. Leases under the provisions of this Act shall be for a period not exceeding twenty-five years from the date of the execution of the lease contract, and shall be renewable under such terms and conditions as may be provided by law or another period not exceeding twenty-five years. The total period of any lease and the extension thereof shall not exceed fifty years. Such leases shall provide that the lessee may at any time during the life of the lease apply for the cancellation of the same, and surrender the property leased whenever, because of force majeure, or for other causes, it is impossible to continue profitable mining operations thereon. No such lease or renewal thereof shall be assigned or sublet without the prior consent of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce which shall be granted if the assignment or sublease is to such persons, associations, or corporations as have the qualifications required of locators, holders, or lessees under the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 75. Leases may be granted covering mining claims located on private lands: Provided, That any exploration, occupation, use, or lease of any private land pursuant to this Act shall be subject to the payment of compensation to the owner thereof as provided in this Act.

SEC. 76. Subject to the provisions of Article XII of the Constitution, the maximum area that may be leased to a person, association, or corporation under the provisions of this Act in any one province shall be as follows:

(a) For lands of the first group containing metals or metalliferous ores: not more than four hundred fifty hectares containing minerals in vein or lode deposits for any individual, association, partnership, sociedad anónima or corporation, nor more than four hundred hectares containing minerals in placer deposits for any individual, nor more than three thousand two hundred hectares containing minerals in placer deposits for any corporation, association, sociedad anónima or limited partnership: Provided, however, That in no case shall the total number of lode mineral claims that a lessee may lease, exceed two hundred fifty in the entire Philippines.

(b) For lands of the second group containing precious stones: not more than forty hectares for an individual, nor more than three hundred twenty hectares for a corporation, or an association, sociedad anónima, or limited partnership.

(c) For lands of the fourth group containing salines and mineral waters: not more than twenty-four hectares for an individual, nor more than one hundred ninety-two hectares for a corporation, an association, sociedad anónima, or limited partnership.

(d) For lands of the fifth group containing building stones in place, clays, fertilizers, and other nonmetals: not more than four hundred fifty hectares containing minerals in vein or lode deposits for any individual, association, sociedad anónima, limited partnership or corporation: Provided, however, That in no case shall the total number of such lode mineral claims exceed two hundred fifty in the entire Philippines; nor more than four hundred hectares containing minerals in placer deposits for any individual; nor more than three thousand two hundred hectares containing minerals in placer deposits for any association, sociedad anónima, limited partnership or corporation.

SEC. 77. Every lease granted under this Act shall contain a clause by which the lessee shall bind himself to comply with the provisions of this Act and with such rules and regulations for the policing and sanitation of mines, easements, drainage, disposal of waste or tailings, water rights, right-of-way, right of Government survey and inspection, and other necessary means to their economic utilization, as well as such rules for the purpose of insuring the exercise of reasonable diligence, skill, and care in the mining operation on the land covered by the lease, as may be promulgated by the Director of the Bureau of Mines and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, under and pursuant to the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 78. Every lease granted under this Act shall be construed as granting to the lessee, his successors or assigns the right to extract all mineral deposits of the group for which the lease or leases had been granted within the boundary lines of the claim or claims covered by the lease, continued vertically downward; to remove and utilize the same for his own benefit, and to use the lands covered by the lease for the purpose or purposes specified therein: Provided, That in the case of leases covering placer locations the lessee shall not be entitled to extract minerals from any lode or vein deposit found within the boundary of his, its, or their placer claims but the lessee shall have the preferential right to locate and lease such lode deposits. The same privilege shall be granted to lessee for minerals or mineral products belonging to different group or groups found therein upon the condition that the lessee shall first comply with the requirements of the law. Any such location, occupation, use, or lease permitted under this Act shall reserve to the Government the right to grant or use such easements in, over, under, through, or upon lands so entered located, occupied, leased, or used, as may be necessary to the working of the same or of other mineral lands: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, in granting any lease under this Act may reserve to the Government the right to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of the surface of the lands embraced within such lease, under existing law or laws, in so far as said surface is not necessary for use by the lessee in extracting and removing the mineral deposits from the land covered by such lease, or in beneficiation of the ores extracted therefrom, or from any other mining claim. The Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, during the life of the lease, is authorized to issue such permits for easements herein provided to be reserved, and to permit the use of the lands covered by the lease, or of such other public lands, as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of mills, mining camps, or other works incident to the mining and milling operations on the lands covered by any lease granted under this Act, or on any other mineral lands.

SEC. 79. For the privilege of exploring, developing, mining, extracting, and disposing of the minerals from the lands covered by his lease, the lessee shall pay to the Government of the Philippines, through the Collector of Internal Revenue, the rentals, royalties, and taxes provided by law. The rentals shall be due and payable in advance on the date of the granting of the lease, and on the same date every year thereafter during the life of the lease or any renewal thereof; the royalties shall be due and payable within sixty days after the shipment of the mineral or mineral products from the mines; and the tax at the time and in the manner all other real estate taxes are payable under the law. Before the mineral or mineral products are removed from the mines the Collector of Internal Revenue or his representatives shall first be duly notified thereof. The rentals, royalties, and taxes, shall be as follows:

(a) Rentals.—On all mineral lands of the first, second, fourth, and fifth groups provided for under this Act—one peso per hectare or fraction thereof. Fifty per centum of all the rentals collected shall accrue to the province, and fifty per centum, to the municipality in which the mining claim or claims is or are located: Provided, That in case of chartered cities the full amount shall accrue to the city concerned.

(b) Royalties.—On all minerals extracted from, or mineral products of, mineral lands of the first, second, fourth and fifth groups as provided for in this Act—a royalty of one and one-half per centum of the actual market value of the gross output thereof: Provided, That in the case of gold mines, their annual gross output shall be subject to a royalty of one and one-half per centum when the value of the said output does not exceed five hundred thousand pesos; two per centum when the value exceed five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed one million pesos; two and one-half per centum when the value exceeds one million pesos but does not exceed one million five hundred thousand pesos; three per centum when the value exceeds one million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed two million pesos; three and three-eighths per centum when the value exceeds two million pesos but does not exceed two million five hundred thousand pesos; three and three-fourths per centum when the value exceeds two million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed three million pesos; four and one eighth per centum when the value exceeds three million pesos but does not exceed three million five hundred thousand pesos; four and one-half per centum when the value exceeds three million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed four million pesos; four and three-fourths per centum when the value exceeds four million pesos but does not exceed four million five hundred thousand pesos; five per centum when the value exceeds four million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed five million pesos; five and one-eighth per centum when the value exceeds five million pesos but does not exceed five million five hundred thousand pesos; five and one-fourth per centum when the value exceeds five million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed six million pesos; five and three-eighths per centum when the value exceed six million pesos but does not exceed six million five hundred thousand pesos; and five and one-half per centum when the value exceeds six million five hundred thousand pesos: Provided, further, That the following rates of deduction from the royalties on the annual gross output of gold payable under the provisions of this section shall be allowed:

(1) Fifteen per centum in the case of lode mines producing gold from ores which average less than ten pesos, but more than seven pesos per ton;

(2) Twenty-five per centum in the case of lode mines producing gold from ore which average less than seven pesos per ton. The average value per ton of ore shall be determined by dividing the total gross output in pe-ses for any year by the total number of tons milled during that year for any particular lode mine.

(3) Thirty-five per centum in the case of gold placer mines.

The term "gross output" of mines or mineral lands shall be interpreted as the actual market value of mineral or mineral products, or bullion from each mine or mineral lands operated as a separate entity without any deduction for mining, milling, refining, transporting, handling, marketing, or any other expenses. The output of any group of contiguous mining claims shall not be subdivided. All the royalties herein provided to be charged shall accrue to the general fund of the Philippine Treasury, and shall be in lieu of the ad valorem tax on the market value of the output of mines provided to be levied and collected, under section fifteen hundred thirty-four of the Revised Administrative Code, as amended by Act Numbered Four thousand fifty-eight. In case mining is carried on upon private lands, the royalty due on the value of the output of such mines under any and all leases granted for the purposes shall be reduced by five per centum of the amount due to the Government under the provisions of this Act, which reduction shall be paid by the lessee to the said land owner. This privilege shall not be granted to any person acquiring an option on the surface right after any mining location has been made on the mineral found therein.

(c) Taxes.—All building and other improvements built in the land leased, except machines, mechanical, electrical and chemical contrivances, instruments, tools, implements, appliances and apparatus, used in connection with the mining and milling operations on the land leased, shall be subject to an annual real estate tax which shall be paid at the rate and in the manner all other real estate taxes are paid under the law. Fifty per centum of the real estate tax collected as herein provided shall accrue to the province, and fifty per centum of the same shall accrue to the municipality in which the mineral land leased is located: Provided, That in the case of chartered cities the full amount shall accrue to the city concerned.

In contracts of lease granted under this Act, it shall be provided that the rentals, royalties, and taxes, shall be payable in accordance with the provisions of existing law.

SEC. 80. Failure to pay the annual rentals or royalties required by this Act for a period of ninety days after demand shall cause the lease concerned to lapse and the claim or claims, with respect to which such failure to pay was made, shall thereupon be open to relocation and lease by other persons qualified to locate and lease mining claims under the provisions of this Act in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made, unless the lessee, his heirs, executors, administrators, assigns or legal representatives shall have paid all such annual rentals and royalties due and have resumed work on the claim or claims after such failure and before such relocation: Provided, That no person who may be delinquent in the payment of any rental or royalty hereinabove required to be paid on any mining claim or claims held under lease may relocate the same or any portion thereof: Provided, further, That nothing herein contained shall preclude the Government from collecting any rental, royalties, or taxes due.

SEC. 81. Any person, association, or corporation holding a lease under the provisions of this Act shall perform during each year, while the lease is in force, not less than two hundred pesos worth of labor, or improvements, on each mining claim of the first and fifth group, and one hundred pesos worth of labor, or of improvements on each claim of the second and fourth group: Provided, That in the case of a lease covering a group of two or more mining claims leased or held in common, the total amount of labor or improvements required for the said group may be concentrated on any one of the said group, either on the surface or under the ground. The period within which the work required to be done annually on all mining claims shall commence on the first day of January succeeding the date of the granting of the lease on the said claim or claims, and shall be completed on or before the thirty-first day of December of the same year: Provided, further, That failure to perform the annual labor or improvements required herein shall constitute abandonment on the part of the holder and the land shall be subject to relocation by other persons.

SEC. 82. Actual expenditures and cost of mining improvements by the holder of a lease or his grantors, having a direct relation to the development of the claim or group of claims, shall be included in the estimate of assessment work. The expenditures may be made from the surface, or in running a tunnel, drifts, cross-cuts, or trenches for the development of the claim or group of claims. Improvements of any other character, such as buildings, machinery, or roadways, must be excluded from the estimate, unless it is clearly shown that they are associated with actual excavations, such as cuts, tunnels, shafts, and so forth, and are essential to the practical development of, and actually facilitate, the extraction of minerals from the claim, or the leasehold. Labor performed or improvements made, if any, during the period from the date of the recording of the claim to the issuance of the lease thereon, if the locator or holder thereof or their successor in interest should acquire the lease, may be credited for assessment work of the said claim or claims only for the first period or year within which the work is required to be done under the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 83. At any time after the performance of the annual labor or the making of improvements upon a mining claim, but not later than sixty days after the expiration of the period fixed by this Act, the lessee or some person in his behalf cognizant of the facts, shall make and file for record with the mining recorder of the province or district in which the claim is situated an affidavit in substance as follows:

Such affidavit, when recorded in due time, shall be prima facie evidence of the performance of such labor or the making of such improvements, and shall be received in evidence by the Director of the Bureau of Mines and by all courts in the Philippines, as shall also the record thereof or a certified copy of the same.

The Collector of Internal Revenue, within sixty days from the date of the receipt of the payment of the rentals or royalties due on any mining lease, or minerals or mineral products extracted therefrom, shall inform the mining recorder concerned and the Director of the Bureau of Mines of such payments, giving the name of the claim or claims, the entry number of the lease, the date of the payment, the number of official receipts, and the name or names of the person, association or corporation for which such payment has been made. The mining recorder, upon receipt of such information, shall cause the same to be entered in his record book and to be posted on the bulletin board of his office for a period of not less than twenty consecutive days.

SEC. 84. Whenever the lessee fails to comply with any provisions of this Act or the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder, or with any of the provisions of the lease contract, the lease may be forfeited and cancelled by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce or by appropriate proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction, if necessary, and the lessee shall be liable for all unpaid rentals and royalties due the Government on the lease up to the time of its cancellation.

SEC. 85. In the event that any mining lease is cancelled by the procedure prescribed in the next preceding section hereof, the Director of Bureau of Mines shall, within thirty days after the date of such forfeiture or cancellation, cause a notice thereof to be posted on the bulletin board of the Bureau of Mines and in the office of the mining recorder of the province or district in which such claim or claims covered by such mining lease are situated, and the lands covered thereby shall be thereupon open to relocation and lease under the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 86. When unoccupied lands of the public domain, not known to contain valuable mineral deposits is necessary or convenient for mining or milling purposes a parcel of such land, not to exceed nine hectares in extent, may be located for such purpose by any person qualified to locate mining claims under the provisions of this Act, and a lease for such land may at any time thereafter be acquired by the locator for the same period of time and subject to the same terms and conditions regarding the payment of rentals and tax as provided in this Act: Provided, That no such location shall be recorded unless the declaration thereof be accompanied by an affidavit made by the locator, or some person on his behalf cognizant of the facts, to the following effect: That the land covered by the claim is necessary or convenient for specific mining or milling purposes, indicated and described therein, and that no valuable mineral deposits are known to exist within such claim: And provided, further, That if at any time after the said lease has been granted mineral deposits should be discovered within said claim and mineral or minerals be extracted and removed therefrom, on all such output the lessee of the claim shall pay to the Government a royalty at the same rate and subject to the same terms and conditions as are provided in this Act.

SEC. 87. All mineral lands not covered by lease shall be subject to real estate tax payable at the same rate and collectible at the same time and manner and subject to the same liabilities and forfeiture, as provided for in Chapter seventeen of the Revised Administrative Code, as amended.

SEC. 88. There shall be assessed and collected an ad valorem tax of one and one-half per centum of the actual market value of the annual gross output of the minerals or mineral products extracted or produced from all minerals lands, not covered by lease: Provided, That in the case of gold mines, their annual gross output shall be subject to a tax of one and one-half per centum when the value of the said output does not exceed five hundred thousand pesos; two per centum when the value exceeds five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed one million pesos; two and one-half per centum when the value exceeds one million pesos but does not exceed one million five hundred thousand pesos; three per centum when the value exceeds one million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed two million pesos; three and three eighths per centum when the value exceeds two million pesos but does not exceed two million five hundred thousand pesos; three and three-fourths per centum when the value exceeds two million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed three million pesos; four and million five hundred thousand pesos; four and one-half per centum when the value exceeds three million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed four million pesos; four and three-fourths per centum when the value exceeds four million pesos but does not exceed four million five hundred thousand pesos; five per centum when the value exceeds four million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed five million pesos; five and one-eighth per centum when the value exceeds five million pesos but does not exceed five million five hundred thousand pesos; five and one-fourth per centum when the value exceeds five million five hundred thousand pesos but does not exceed six million pesos; five and three-eighths per centum when the value exceeds six million pesos but does not exceed six million five hundred thousand pesos; and five and one-half per centum when the value exceeds six million five hundred thousand pesos: Provided further, That the following rates of deduction from the taxes on the annual gross output of gold payable under the provisions of this section shall be allowed:

(1). Fifteen per centum in the case of lode mines producing gold from ores which average less than ten pesos, but more than seven pesos per ton;

(2) Twenty-five per centum in the case of lode mines producing gold from ores which average less than seven pesos per ton. The average value per ton of ore shall be determined by dividing the total gross output in pesos for any year by the total number of tons milled during that year for any particular mine;

(3) Thirty-five per centum in the case of gold placer mines.

The term "gross output" of mines or mineral lands shall be interpreted as the actual market value of mineral or mineral products, or of bullion from each mine or mineral lands operated as a separate entity without any deduction for mining, milling, refining, transporting, handling, marketing, or any other expenses. The output of any group of contiguous mining claims shall not be subdivided.

The said ad valorem tax shall be due and payable to the Government of the Philippines through the Collector of Internal Revenue within sixty days after the shipment of the mineral or mineral products from the mines: Provided, That before any mineral or mineral product may be shipped from the mine, the Collector of Internal Revenue or his representative shall first be duly notified to that effect: Provided, further, That upon failure to pay the ad valorem tax herein levied within the time prescribed, the same penalties or liabilities as provided by existing laws for the collection of such taxes shall be imposed: Provided, finally, That the ad valorem tax herein provided to be paid and collected shall accrue to the general fund of the Philippine Treasury and shall be in lieu of any royalty or other ad valorem taxes imposed by this Act, and by section one thousand five hundred and thirty-four of the Revised Administrative Code as amended by Act Numbered Four thousand fifty-eight.

CHAPTER VII.—Timber and Water Rights, Rights of Way, Mine Personnel and Officers Charged with the Execution of the Provisions of this Act.

SEC. 89. A bona fide holder of a mining claim or group of contiguous claims under this Act, shall have the gratuitous right to cut trees or timber within such mining claim or claims for use in the development or operation of only the said claim or claims: Provided, That the cutting of said timber shall be in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Bureau of Forestry: And provided, further, That the land or lands covered by such mining claim or group of claims are not covered by any existing timber concession granted by the Bureau of Forestry.

SEC. 90. Bona fide holders of a mining claim or group of contiguous claims under this Act shall also be allowed a gratuitous water right or rights for the development and operation of such claim or claims upon filing an application therefor with the Director of the Bureau of Public Works in accordance with the existing law of waters and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder: Provided, That water rights already granted or vested through long use, recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws and decisions of courts, shall not thereby be impaired: Prov-

one-eighth per centum when the value exceeds three million pesos but does not exceed three ided, further, That the Government reserves the right to regulate water rights and the reasonable and equitable distribution of water supply so as to prevent the monopoly of the use thereof.

SEC. 91. When any mine, or mining claim is so situated that for the more convenient enjoyment of the beneficial rights on the same, a road, a railroad, tramway, electric transmission, telephone or telegraph line, or aerial transportation thereto or therefrom, or a ditch, canal, pipe line, flume, cut, shaft, or tunnel to drain or convey water, ore, waste or tailings therefrom, or a shaft or tunnel for mining purposes, may be necessary for the better working thereof, which road, railroad, tramway, electric transmission, telephone or telegraphs line, aerial transportation, ditch, canal, pipe line, flume, cut shaft or tunnel may require the use or occupancy of a mining claim or claims or other lands, owned, occupied, possessed or leased by another or others than the person or persons or body corporate requiring an easement for any of the purposes hereinbefore enumerated, which purpose are hereby declared to be for the public use or benefit for which the right of eminent domain may legally be exercised, the owner, locator, or lessee of the mine or mining claim first above mentioned, shall be entitled to a right of way, entry and possession for the uses, purposes and privileges of such roads, railroads, tramway, electric transmission, telephone or telegraph line, aerial transportation, ditch, canal, pipe line, flume, cut, shaft or tunnel, in, upon, through, under and across such mining claims or other lands, upon compliance with the provisions of this Act hereinafter provided.

SEC. 92. When the owner or occupant of any mine or mining claim desires to work the same, and it is necessary, in order to enable him to do so successfully and conveniently, that he have a right of way for any of the purposes mentioned in the foregoing sections, if such right of way cannot be acquired by agreement with the owner, occupant, or claimant of mining claims or other lands, over, under, through, across, or upon which he seeks to acquire such right of way the applicant may commence and maintain an action in the manner provided in sections two hundred and forty-one to two hundred and fifty-three, inclusive, of Act Numbered One hundred and ninety, and in the Acts amendatory and supplementary to the said sections, now or hereafter in effect, including Act Numbered Twenty-two hundred and forty-nine providing for the exercise of the power of eminent domain by the Government and its subdivisions. At least one of the commissioners to be named in accordance with section two hundred and forty-three of the Code of Civil Procedure shall, in any case brought hereunder, be a mining engineer, duly qualified as such under the laws of the Government of the Philippines, and such mining engineer or engineers need not be land holders or owners of the province where the land is situated.

SEC. 93. No person under the age of sixteen years shall be employed in, or about any mine in work connected with mining operation, and no male person or persons under the age of eighteen years, nor any girl or woman, shall be employed underground in any mine.

SEC. 94. No person shall have the general direction of the work in, or act as superintendent of, a mine, mill, or quarry, employing more than fifty persons, working underground at any one time without being duly licensed as a mining engineer or as an experienced mining or mill foreman certified as such by the Board of Examiners for Mining Engineers, unless expressly permitted to do so by the Director of the Bureau of Mines.

SEC. 95. The Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce shall be the executive officer charged with carrying out the provisions of this Act, through the Director of the Bureau of Mines, who shall act under his immediate control.

SEC. 96. The appraisal or reappraisal, valuation or revaluation of any mine, mining claim or claims with or without improvements thereon, patented, leased or otherwise, for the purpose of raising capital for the formation, organization of association, partnership or corporation or for promotion work, or for issuing shares of stock, or for determining the present net value of the mines, shall be made by the Director of the Bureau of Mines or his duly authorized representative, and no such mine, mining claim or claims, with or without improvement thereon, patented, leased or otherwise, shall be accepted as asset or basis of any asset in any formation or organization of association, partnership, or corporation for registration or incorporation without the value thereof having been first appraised or determined by the Director of the Bureau of Mines as herein provided.

CHAPTER VIII.—Penal Provisions

SEC. 97. All statements, representations, or reports required under this Act, unless otherwise specifically provided herein shall be upon oath and in such form and upon such blanks as the Director of the Bureau of Mines, approved by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, may provide; and any person, making knowingly any false statement, representation or report under oath shall be subject to punishment for perjury, upon conviction therefor by a competent court.

SEC. 98. Any person who, with intent of gain, presents, or causes to be presented, any false application, declaration, or evidence to the Government or publishes, or causes to be published, any prospectus or other information containing any false statement relating to mines, mining operation, mining claims or lease, shall be guilty of perjury, if such false statement is made under oath, and shall be punished, upon conviction, in accordance with the provisions of the Revised Penal Code. If such false statement is not made under oath he shall be punished, upon conviction, by a fine not exceeding six hundred pesos.

SEC. 99. Any person who willfully and maliciously defaces, alters, removes, or disturbs any stake, post, monument, boundary line, or any other mark lawfully placed under the authority of this Act, or destroys, injures or defaces any rules, or notices, which have been posted, concerning locations, mining application for leases, mines, and any other related subject shall be punished upon conviction, by a fine not exceeding five hundred pesos, besides paying compensation for the expenses incurred in replacing the defaced, altered, removed, or disturbed stakes, post, monument, boundary line, notices, or any other mark.

SEC. 100. Any person who, with intent of gain, willfully and unlawfully extracts minerals belonging to the Government or from a mining claim or mining claims leased, held or owned by other persons without the permission of the lawful lessee, holder or owner thereof, or steals ores or the products thereof from mines or mills, shall be guilty of theft, or qualified theft, as the case may be, and shall be punished, upon conviction, in accordance with the provisions of the Revised Penal Code, besides paying compensation for the damage caused thereby.

SEC. 101. Any person who, with intent of gain, knowingly sells, transfers or conveys any false mining claim or claims or any false right, title or interest in such mining claims which were not actually located on the ground and do not exist as such claims shall be guilty of estafa and shall be punished upon conviction in accordance with the provisions of the Revised Penal Code.

SEC. 102. Any person who, with intent of gain, knowingly places or deposits, or becomes accessory to the placing or depositing of, any mineral in any land for the purpose of "salting" and of misleading other persons as to the value of the mineral deposits in such land, or who with intent of gain, knowingly commingles, or causes to be commingled, samples of minerals with any other substance whatsoever, which increases the value or in any way changes the nature of the said minerals or substance, or substitutes samples of mineral for the purpose of deceiving, cheating, or defrauding any person, shall be punished, upon conviction, by imprisonment not exceeding a period of five years, besides paying compensation for the damage which may have been caused thereby.

SEC. 103. Any person who willfully and maliciously causes or permits sludge or tailings to accumulate in, or flow from his mining claims so as to cause danger, injury, or obstruction to any public road, rivers or streams or other public property, shall be punished, upon conviction, by a fine not exceeding two hundred pesos, besides paying compensation for any damage which may have been caused thereby.

SEC. 104. Any person who willfully and maliciously or with intent of gain, takes water from a mining mill, race, dam, reservoir, or from any other form of deposit, or prevents the water from entering said mining mill, race, dam, reservoir, or in any way interferes with the full enjoyment of water rights previously granted and lawfully held by another person, shall be punished, upon conviction, by a fine not exceeding one hundred pesos.

SEC. 105. Any person who willfully and maliciously destroys or injures any structure in or on mining claims, or on sites for reduction works, shall be punished, upon conviction, by imprisonment not to exceed five years, besides paying compensation for the damage which may have been caused thereby.

SEC. 106. Any person who willfully and maliciously sets fire to any mineral, mine, or the workings, fittings, or appliances of a mine, shall be guilty of arson and shall be punished, upon conviction, in accordance with the provisions of the Revised Penal Code, besides paying compensation for the damage caused thereby.

SEC. 107. Any person who willfully and maliciously damages a mine, unlawfully causes water to run into a mine, or into any subterranean passage communicating with a mine, or obstructs any shaft or passage to a mine, or renders useless, damages, or destroys any machine, appliance, apparatus, rope, chain, tackle, or any other thing which is used in a mine, shall be punished, upon conviction, by imprisonment not exceeding a period of five days, besides paying compensation for the damage caused thereby.

SEC. 108. Any person who willfully and maliciously obstructs the Director of the Bureau of Mines, or any of his subordinates or representatives, in the performance of their duties in connection with any mine or mines shall be punished, upon conviction, by a fine not exceeding one hundred pesos.

CHAPTER IX.—General Provisions.

SEC. 109. No grant of lands to provinces, districts or municipalities, to aid in the construction of roads, or for other public purposes, shall include any mineral lands.

CHAPTER X.—Transitory and Final Provisions

SEC. 110. During the Commonwealth of the Philippines, citizens of the United States or corporations organized and constituted under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory thereof, and authorized to transact business in the Philippines, shall enjoy the same rights under this Act as citizens or corporations of the Philippines.

SEC. 111. If, for any reason, any section or provision of this Act is challenged in a competent court and is held or declared to be unconstitutional or invalid, none of the other sections or provisions thereof shall be affected thereby and such other sections and provisions shall continue to govern as if the section or provision so annulled had never been incorporated in this Act, and in lieu of the section or provision so annulled, the provisions of law on the subject thereof in force prior to the approval of this Act shall govern until the National Assembly shall otherwise provide in the premises.

CHAPTER XI.—Repeals

SEC. 112. Act Numbered Forty-two hundred and forty-three and all laws, acts or parts thereof, and all regulations, rules and instructions or parts of the same, inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 113. This Act shall take effect upon its approval.

Approved, November 7, 1936.

FIRST NATIONAL ASSEMBLY
First Session

R. No. 2339

[COMMONWEALTH ACT No. 136]

AN ACT CREATING THE BUREAU OF MINES

Be it enacted by the National Assembly of the Philippines:

SECTION 1. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act, there is hereby created under the Department of Agriculture and Commerce an office to be known as the Bureau of Mines.

SEC. 2. The Bureau of Mines shall have one Chief to be known as the Director of Mines who shall be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly. There shall be in the said Bureau such experts and other employees to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce as may be required to carry out the purposes of this Act and of the Mining Act.

Subject to the general supervision and control of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, the Director of Mines shall possess the powers generally conferred upon Bureau Chiefs.

SEC. 3. The Director shall carry out the provisions of this Act and all laws pertaining to the administration and disposition of mines, minerals, and mineral lands, and of the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder, and in general, shall promote the development of the mining industry of the country, as follows:

The Director of Mines shall—

(a) Make topographic and geological surveys of the Philippines.

(b) Collect and disseminate information, and conduct pertinent investigations concerning mining administration and operation, the utilization of minerals, and the establishment of mineral industries.

(c) Conduct studies of mining practices and methods relating to protection of life and property, economy of operation, prevention of waste, and disseminate the results and information in appropriate bulletins or circulars.

(d) Conduct investigations relative to ore dressing and metallurgical processes with a view to opening new avenues of development and utilization of valuable minerals from their ores.

(e) Perform work on assaying and smelting and on testing and identification of rocks and minerals.

(f) Establish and operate a refining plant for the purpose of refining, and purifying, smelting, and treating gold, silver, copper, iron and other products of mines.

(g) Conduct geologic investigations relative to mine engineering, construction, and planning.

(h) Have direct supervision and control of the work and the office of mining recorders.

(i) Keep records of mining locations, leases, patents, and permits, including transfers and assignments thereof, and of all records and archives of existing claims of whatever class or description pertaining to mining grants and concessions granted under the Spanish Mining Laws.

(j) Furnish or cause to be furnished to any person applying for the same, one or more certified copies of any record kept in the Bureau of Mines, or in the offices of the mining recorders, upon payment of the following fees:

For each certification, one peso.

For each folio of legal size paper or fraction thereof, fifty centavos.

(k) Issue revocable permits for the removal or taking of stone, gravel, sand, earth and other materials, from public and private lands of the Government of the Philippines or from the beds of seas, lakes, rivers, streams, creeks, and other public waters.

(l) Require of every corporation or association formed for the purpose of mining or conducting mining in the Philippines, to keep in its office a complete set of books showing all receipts and expenditures of such corporation, the sources of such receipts, the object of such expenditures, and also all transfers of stocks or certificates of participation.

(m) Require semi-annually every corporation or association formed for the purpose of mining or conducting mining in the Philippines to submit to his office a report verified under oath of the president and secretary thereof containing: an itemized account or balance sheet for the previous semester, embracing a full and complete statement of all disbursements, and receipts, showing from what sources such receipts were derived, and to whom and for what object or purpose such disbursements or payments were made; all indebtedness or liabilities incurred, or existing at the time, and for what the same were incurred and the balance of money, if any, on hand; a statement showing the number of men employed, and for what purpose, and the rate of wages paid to each; a full and complete statement of the work done in said mine, the amount of ore extracted, from what part of mine taken, the amount sent to mill for production, its assay value, the amount of bullion received, the amount of bullion shipped, and the amount retained, if any. Copies of such report shall be furnished the stockholders or members of the corporation or association. Every such corporation or association shall likewise keep in its office, subject to inspection of the stockholders or members, a full report, under oath, of all discoveries of ores or mineral-bearing quartz made in said mine, whether by boring, drifting, sinking, or otherwise, together with the assay value thereof. All accounts, reports, and correspondence from the superintendent of operatives must be kept in the office of every such corporation or association, open to the inspection of all stockholders or members and a copy of all said accounts and reports shall be filed in the office of the Director of Mines.

(n) Have direct charge of the administration of the mineral lands and minerals and of the survey, classification, lease or any other form of concession or disposition thereof authorized under the Mining Act.

(o) Prepare, with the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, forms, instructions, rules and regulations, consistent with law.

(p) Personally or by his duly authorized representatives, administer oaths and take acknowledgements in matters of official business; issue subpoenas and take testimony in official investigation authorized by law.

SEC. 4. The Division of Mines comprising the Geological Survey Section, the Mining Technology Section, the Mineral Lands Administration Section, and the Mineral District No. 1 at Baguio, of the Bureau of Science, and the supervision of the offices of mining recorders, together with its personnel, appropriations, equipment, implements, materials, properties, records and other effects, is hereby transferred to the Bureau of Mines. The Director of Mines shall, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, organize its personnel into such divisions or sections as will insure the simplest organization and maximum efficiency.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, in the interest of the service or for reasons of economy, or due to lack of funds, may transfer any position or positions, with their respective appropriations, from the administrative, clerical, or other nontechnical force of any bureau under the Department of Agriculture and Commerce to the Bureau of Mines.

SEC. 5. Subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, the Bureau of Mines may perform any work for private parties, and charge for the service so rendered. All amounts so collected shall accrue to the general unappropriated funds of the National Government.

SEC. 6. The officers and employees of the Bureau of Mines shall have police authority over mineral lands and minerals, and shall have the power to execute the decisions and orders of the Bureau of Mines, relative thereto.

SEC. 7. To defray the expenses of the Bureau of Mines for the year nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, there is hereby appropriated, from the funds of the Philippine Treasury, not otherwise appropriated, in lieu of the appropriations for the Division of Mines of the Bureau of Science for the year nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, the sum of one hundred thousand pesos, to be expended for salaries, wages, furniture and equipment, and sundry expenses with the approval of the President.

SEC. 8. This Act shall take effect upon its approval.

Approved, November 7, 1936.

PHILIPPINE ARMY

MILITARY SERVICE REGULATIONS

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS

Obligation to Serve and Length of Service

1. Military service shall be obligatory for all citizens of the Philippines.

2. The obligation to undergo military training begins with the youth in school, commencing at the age of ten years, and shall extend through his schooling until he shall reach the age of eighteen years. At this age he shall enter the Junior Reserve to which he shall be assigned until he is twenty-one years of age when he shall become subject to service with the colors, and thereafter with the Reserve Force until he shall reach fifty years of age. The training which he may undergo prior to the calendar year in which he attains twenty one years of age is termed "Preparatory Military Training."

3. Preparatory military training:

a. Purpose—

- (1) To develop the national spirit;
- (2) To make the youth physically strong;
- (3) To make the youth morally confident; and
- (4) To prepare the youth for military service.

b. Classification—

- (1) Junior cadets: above ten years of age, attending primary and intermediate schools.
- (2) High-school cadets: attending high or vocational schools.
- (3) Junior Reserves: Eighteen to twenty years of age, both inclusive. This class includes young men who cease to attend school or for any reason shall have no schooling.

4. Reserve Officers' Training Units.—These shall be established and maintained at such colleges and universities as the President may designate, where every physically fit student shall be required to pursue a course of instruction designed to qualify him for commission as a third lieutenant of the Reserve.

5. School girls shall receive such instruction and training as the Chief of Staff of the Army may deem necessary for auxiliary service.

6. All able-bodied male citizens between the ages of twenty years and fifty years, both inclusive, except those specifically exempted, shall be classified as follows:

a. Trainees.—Those between the ages of twenty and twenty-two years who have been selected to receive military training.

b. First Reserve.—Those between the ages of twenty-two years and thirty years, both inclusive, and including also all those who have completed trainee instruction even though they may not have attained to the age of twenty-two.

c. Second Reserve.—Those between the ages of thirty-one years and forty years, both inclusive.

d. Third Reserve.—Those between the ages of forty-one years and fifty years, both inclusive.

7. For the purpose of these Regulations the term "citizens of the Philippines" includes the following:

a. Those who were citizens of the Philippine Islands at the time of the adoption of the Constitution.

b. Those born in the Philippine Islands of foreign parents who, before the adoption of the Constitution, had been elected to public office in the Philippine Islands.

c. Those whose fathers are citizens of the Philippines.

d. Those whose mothers are citizens of the Philippines and, upon reaching the age of majority, elect Philippine citizenship.

e. Those who are naturalized in accordance with law.

PART I

TRAINEE INSTRUCTION

SECTION I

PROCUREMENT OF TRAINEES—
REGISTRATION

1. Except as provided in paragraph 2 of this section, all male citizens of the Philippines who, during the calendar year 1936, have attained or shall attain the age of twenty years shall register for military service. In succeeding years young men shall be required to register in the calendar year in which they become twenty years of age.

2. The following persons are exempted from registration:

a. Members of the Philippine Scouts and the Philippine Army.

b. Young men, citizens of the Philippines, who are residing abroad. These persons shall register within five days after their return to the Philippines in order to determine their obligation for military training.

If under thirty years of age on their return, they shall be liable for military service and shall enter thereon if drawn at the next national drawing following their return.

c. Persons who, because of incarceration awaiting trial or undergoing sentence of a court of law, are prevented from registering. They shall, upon their release from custody, register for military trainee instruction with the President of the municipality or township in which they reside. If under thirty years of age at the time of release, they shall be liable for trainee instruction; if over that age, they shall not be required to serve with the colors.

3. The Provost Marshal General is responsible for supervising the process of registration. He will be assisted by District and Provincial Military Commanders, Provincial Governors, registering and deputy registering officers, municipal presidents and councils, by members of the Army detailed for the purpose, and by all individuals required to register in any calendar year.

4. Registration shall take place in suitable registration places to be prescribed by the city, municipality or municipal district government in which the registrants reside, during regular office hours, between 8 o'clock A. M., April 1, 1936, and 8 o'clock P. M., April 7, 1936. Registration shall be held during the same period in succeeding years. In case April 7th shall fall on a legal holiday, the registration period shall be extended to the following working day.

5. Those unable to visit registration places because of illness or for any other reason shall be registered by their parents, legal guardians or authorized representatives.

6. Any person failing to register for military service as herein provided shall, upon conviction, be sentenced to serve not more than one year in prison or to pay a fine of not to exceed two thousand pesos or both, at the discretion of the court. Conviction of this offense shall not exempt the person convicted from the military service herein required.

7. No person convicted of crime against the Government or of an offense involving moral turpitude shall be permitted to register for military service unless he shall have been pardoned by the President of the Philippines.

8. In cities, municipalities, and municipal districts, the municipal secretaries, acting under the immediate supervision of their respective municipal presidents, are designated as registering officers, and shall see that the registration is carried out in a proper manner. The municipal councils shall designate Government officers or employees who shall act as deputy registering officers in those registration places in other parts of the municipality.

9. In the cities of Manila and Baguio, the respective chiefs of police shall perform the duties corresponding to those of municipal presidents; they shall designate responsible officers of the police department to act as registering officer and deputy registering officers, respectively.

10. In each city, municipality, or municipal district, the municipal secretary, or other official designated as registering officer, shall keep a Military Register as a part of the permanent record of his office. All entries in the Military Register shall be written in ink. The serial numbers for each municipality shall begin with number ONE and shall continue from year to year until another series is ordered by the Provost Marshal General. The names of registrants who report directly to the registering officer shall be entered serially in the Military Register in the order that they report. Registrants who report to deputy registering officers will be given serial numbers in the order in which their names are transcribed in the Military Register from reports submitted by deputy registering officers.

11. Each registrant shall be required to furnish the following information which shall be entered in the corresponding columns of the Military Register:

a. Name.—The family name shall be written first, followed by the proper name in full, and the middle name, if any.

b. Address.—This should include the number, the street, or the sitio and barrio where registrant resides. The address should be sufficiently descriptive to insure prompt location of registrants.

c. Date and place of birth.

d. Civil status.—Whether single, married, widower or divorced.

e. Name of dependents, if any, and degree of dependency.—Example: Maria Garcia, wife; Pedro Reyes, minor child; etc.

f. Employment, nature of, and name of employer.—Example: Teacher, St. John's Academy; clerk, Elizalde & Co.; barber; etc.

g. Educational attainment, special aptitudes or qualifications.—Example: High-school graduate; carpenter; typist, etc.

h. Preference for branch of service.—That is, with Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, Air Corps, Medical Service, Quartermaster Service, Ordnance Service.

i. Preference for place of service.—That is, with element of the Regular Force at either Manila, Cebu, or Camp Keithley; or with a training cadre in the province. The period of service with the Regular Force shall be for eleven months; with training cadres the period of service shall be for five and one-half months.

12. On completion of registration formalities each registrant shall be issued a registration card bearing the serial number corresponding to his number in the Military Register of the city, municipality, or municipal district in which he resides.

13. Any change of address subsequent to registration shall be promptly reported to the registering officer who shall make appropriate notation in the Military Register and on the registration card, and if the change of address involves a domicile in another registration district, shall immediately report the facts to the Provost Marshal General.

14. Upon termination of the registration period in each calendar year, the registering officer shall immediately prepare copies in triplicate from the Military Register, of the names and description of registrants for that year, one copy of which shall be forwarded to the corresponding Acceptance Board and two copies to the Provincial Military Commander who shall forward one copy of the Provost Marshal General.

15. The District and Provincial Military Commanders or their duly appointed assistants shall supervise the process of registration in the different municipalities and municipal districts. They shall have access at all times to the records pertaining to the registration and selection of trainees, shall give necessary instruction as to the proper manner of making entries in the Military Register, and shall report all irregularities coming to their attention to the Provost Marshal General. Provincial Commanders shall submit such reports through the Provincial Governor and District Commander.

16. Registration cards shall be carefully preserved by the registrants. Each card shall constitute a certificate that the holder has carried out his first military obligation to the State.

17. The Provincial Military Commander, upon receipt of registration reports from all the municipalities and municipal districts in his province, shall immediately prepare a consolidated report of the result of registration in that province for the year in question. Said report shall include the serial number, name, address and date of birth of each registrant and shall consist of two parts: Part A shall include those young men who complete their twentieth year of age before July 1st of that year; Part B, those who complete their twentieth year after that date. This report shall be forwarded to the Provost Marshal General in sufficient time as to reach his office not later than April 30th of the year in question. A copy shall be furnished the District Commander and another shall be kept on file.

18. The Provost Marshal General, upon receipt of registration reports from all the provinces, shall apportion the number of young men to be called for training with the colors from each province, and shall immediately notify the Provincial Governor of said allotment. This number shall be prorated on the basis of the total number of registrants for the year in the several provinces of the Commonwealth.

19. The Provincial Governor shall divide the number allotted to his province into two equal parts to correspond to the A and B age-groups as described in paragraph 17 of these Regulations. On May 15th of each year or, in case the 15th shall fall on a legal holiday, on the following working day, the Provincial Governor, with the Provincial Fiscal and the Provincial Military Commander, acting as a board, shall conduct a drawing in public to determine by lot those registrants who will be called for trainee instruction in the next calendar year. Separate drawing shall be done for each age-group above mentioned; the number to be drawn shall be twice the number allotted for each age-group, the additional names to substitute for registrants who may be given deferments, exempted for physical reasons, or who fail to report on time. Registrants included in Group A, when drawn, shall report for trainee instruction on January first; and those in Group B, on July first of the year following registration.

20. After the drawing shall have been concluded, the Provincial Governor shall give an immediate and thorough publication of the names of those who shall have been drawn. He shall be responsible that each young man in his province who shall have been drawn is notified at once of this fact.

21. In the City of Manila or Baguio, the drawing shall be conducted in public by the City Mayor with the City Fiscal and an officer of the Philippine Army designated by the Provost Marshal General, acting as board.

22. The following registrants are exempted from trainee instruction:

a. Ecclesiastics regularly ordained and serving as a member of the clergy and seminary students of a recognized church or sect.

b. Physicians properly certified and practicing as such.

c. Superintendents of penitentiaries, corrective prisons, and insane asylums.

d. The personnel of the coast guard revenue cutter and lighthouse inspection services.

e. Pilots, navigators, and marine superintendents.

f. Students pursuing course of military instruction in colleges and universities designated by the President to establish and maintain Reserve Officers' Training Units.

g. Such others as may hereafter be exempted by law.

SECTION II

EXAMINATION, CLASSIFICATION, DEFERMENTS

23. Registrants who have been drawn for trainee instruction, upon being notified of this fact, will immediately report to an Acceptance Board at the time and place designated in the notification.

24. Acceptance Boards shall be appointed by the President for a term of three years for such municipalities and municipal districts as the population may require. The President shall determine the number and location of boards upon recommendation of the Provost Marshal General. For the year 1936 there shall be one Acceptance Board for every assembly district except in such provinces where difficulties of communication make it necessary to have more than one Board for such district.

25. In case there are more than one Acceptance Board in a province, said board shall be designated numerically. Example: Acceptance Board No. 1, Province of Rizal; Acceptance Board No. 2, Province of Cebu; Acceptance Board No. 4, Province of Pangasinan, etc.

26. Each Acceptance Board shall consist of five members, to wit:

a. Two members must be physicians. Whenever possible Government physicians, as Army surgeons, district health officers, or presidents of sanitary divisions, shall be appointed.

b. Where practicable, two members shall be officers of the Philippine Army stationed in the province.

c. The President shall appoint the members of the Board and designate its chairman upon recommendation of the Provost Marshal General.

27. The medical members shall advise the board in cases where the young man's physical condition for military service is in question. Decision by the Board as to action on such cases and upon all matters shall be by majority vote.

28. Young men who have been called for trainee instruction, upon reporting to the Acceptance Board, shall be required to complete a questionnaire of a prescribed form and to undergo a physical examination. The Board shall then classify the young men into the following classes:

a. Class I—Fit for unlimited service. This includes men physically fit for active service in any branch of the Army.

b. Class II—Fit for limited service only. This class shall include trainees whose physical condition is such that their service should be limited either for garrison duty or for special non-combatant branches of the Army.

c. Class III—Deferred until a later date. See Paragraph 29 below.

d. Class IV—Exempted for physical reasons. This shall include those who are found to be suffering from physical defects of a permanent nature as will prevent them from undergoing any form of military training as prescribed in trainee instruction. The physical defect will, in each case, be properly certified by the physician members of the Board and filed with the papers of the trainee registrant.

29. Deferments:

a. For three years.—The following, during the period of their employment or functions, may have their trainee instruction deferred for not to exceed three years:

(1) Such officers and employees of the insular, provincial, municipal, and municipal district governments, as the President may designate in executive orders.

(2) Officials and agents of organized police forces.

(3) Officials of land, air, and marine transport. The persons above mentioned shall be exempted from all military service except trainee instruction and except for active service in a national emergency expressly declared by the National Assembly when they shall be liable for military service or special assignment as directed by the President.

b. For one year.—Deferments may be granted for—

(1) Those who are indispensable to the support of their families.

(2) For agricultural reasons.

(3) For certain key men in industry, commerce or agriculture.

c. Persons who have been given deferments shall be liable, after the expiration of the deferment period, to undergo such trainee instruction as that prescribed for any other citizen. Provincial Governor shall keep a record of these registrants and their periods of deferments, so that they may be assigned to training stations at the expiration of their deferment periods.

d. Deferments for any cause whatsoever shall be made only upon presentation to the Acceptance Board of supporting evidence either by testimony of witnesses or by documentary evidence or both.

e. Where the Acceptance Board denies the claim for deferment of any individual, he may, within ten days, appeal his case to the Central Review Board in Manila through the Provincial Governor.

f. Where dependency was the cause for deferment and that condition continues after the termination of the period of deferment, the young man shall be liable to trainee instruction, and if drawn therefore he shall enter upon such instruction. During the period of his absence undergoing instruction, an allowance for the partial support of his dependent or dependents, who have no other means of support shall be made by the Philippine Government. The corresponding Acceptance Board shall determine the dependent or dependents entitled to this allowances, which shall be fixed by executive order.

30. The Acceptance Board shall keep a record of its activities in a record book called "Proceedings of Acceptance Board No., Province of". In the corresponding columns of this book shall be entered the serial number, municipality, name, address and classification of each registrant examined by the said board, the reason for the classification, the age-group to which he belongs, and his preference for place of service. The names of members of the board will be listed on the first page of this Register, and also on the page corresponding to the date in which change of membership may take place. When Acceptance Board is not in session, this record book shall be kept in the office of the Provincial Military Commander.

31. After all the registrants who are drawn for trainee instruction in the district each year shall have been examined and classified, the Acceptance Board shall prepare copies in triplicate from its record book, one copy of which shall be forwarded to the Provost Marshal General, and two copies to the Provincial Military Commander, who, in turn, will forward one copy to the District Commander. The Acceptance Board shall also forward a brief report to the registering officer of each municipality included in the district, giving the description of all trainees from that municipality who have been examined by the said Board, for proper notation on the corresponding column of the Military Register.

32. The expenses incident to the administration of the Acceptance Boards shall be borne by the Commonwealth Government.

Stationery and blank forms shall be obtained by requisition through the Provincial Military Commander to the Provost Marshal General. The Provincial Governor shall furnish such clerical assistance that may be needed from among the employees of the provincial government who may be spared for the purpose. Members of the Board who are not Government officials shall be paid a per diem of three pesos (P3) during the period that the Board is in session, provided that the total amount of per diem paid shall not exceed P500 in any given year. In case any member is residing in another municipality from where the Board is holding its session, he shall be furnished necessary transportation by the Provincial Military Commander to and from the place of meeting. Transportation expenses under this heading shall be chargeable to the appropriations of the Philippine Army.

33. The District and Provincial Military Commanders or their duly appointed assistants shall supervise the administration and operation of Acceptance Boards within the territorial limits of their commands. They shall have access at all times to the records pertaining to examination and classification. They shall report all irregularities coming to their attention to the Provost Marshal General. Provincial commanders shall submit such reports through the Provincial Governor and District Commander.

SECTION III

CENTRAL REVIEW BOARD

34. Composition.—The Central Review Board shall consist of five citizens appointed by the President who shall designate the Chairman of the Board. One member shall be an officer of the Army, representing the Provost Marshal General.

35. Terms of office of members.—Initially, the Chairman shall be appointed for five years, one member for four years, one member for three years, one member for two years, and the remaining member for one year. Thereafter, all appointments shall be for five years. In case any vacancy occurs before the expiration of the term of office of any member, his successor shall serve only for the unexpired portion of said term. No member shall be eligible for reappointment. Upon the expiration of the term of office of the Chairman, that office shall devolve upon the member having the longest service on the Board.

36. The Board shall hold its sessions in the City of Manila.

37. The Board shall have authority to employ such staff of assistants and the service of necessary medical examiners as may be authorized by the President.

38. All cases of appeal from the decision of Acceptance Boards which shall be forwarded by the Provincial Governors shall be reviewed by the Central Review Board. The appellant shall be authorized to be represented by legal counsel, and to present such facts and evidence in support of his case as he shall deem advisable. Decisions in all matters before the Board shall be by majority vote. The decision shall be rendered without unnecessary delay and shall be final.

39. The decisions of the Board shall be transmitted to the corresponding District and Provincial Military Commanders for necessary action.

40. Members of the Central Review Board who are not government officials shall receive a per diem of ₱10 for every day of session called by the Chairman, provided that the total per diems in any given year shall not exceed ₱3,000 for each member. The salaries of assistants and medical examiners shall be fixed by the Provost Marshal General under supervision of the Chief of Staff. Officers and employees of the Government serving as members of the Board or as assistants and examiners therefor, if any, shall not receive any additional compensation.

SECTION IV

INCORPORATION INTO THE SERVICE

41. The District Military Commander, upon receipt of the report of the Acceptance Boards within the territorial limits of his command, will immediately issue orders designating the period within which, and the training station to which each trainee will report for duty.

42. The period of training with training cadres in the provinces shall be for five and one-half months; with the Regular Force for eleven months.

43. Young men belonging to the A age-group and which are included under Classes I and II by the Acceptance Board shall report for trainee instruction on January first, following the year of registration. Those assigned for duty with the training cadres in the provinces shall be released therefrom on June 15th of the same year. Those assigned with the elements of the Regular Force in Manila, Cebu, or Camp Keithley, shall be released therefrom on November 30th of the same year.

44. Young men belonging to the B age-group, and included under Classes I and II by the Acceptance Board, shall report for trainee instruction on July 1st of the year succeeding registration. Those assigned for duty with the training cadres shall be released therefrom on December 15th of the same year. Those assigned for duty with the elements of the Regular Force shall be released therefrom on May 31st of the following year.

45. Training cadres shall be established at different points of the country at places designated from time to time by the Chief of Staff.

46. Trainee instruction with elements of the Regular Force shall be held principally at either Manila, Cebu, or Camp Keithley. Trainee coming from the military districts of Luzon shall be sent to Manila; those from the military districts of Visayas, to Cebu; and those from the military districts of Mindanao and Sulu to Camp Keithley.

47. Where the distance from home to the place of training is in excess of twenty kilometers, or where water transportation is required, transportation expenses of trainees from the towns of their residence to the designated training stations shall be borne by the Philippine Government. Military Provincial Commanders are authorized to issue transportation orders and furnish subsistence allowance to all trainees en route to their training stations. Upon completion of their trainee instruction, they shall be equally entitled to return transportation to their places of residence.

48. Upon reporting at the designated training station the young man shall be examined, and if fit for the service of his classification, he shall be assigned with an organization and sworn in.

49. If the examination discloses any cause for a change of his classification, the change shall be effected by the Commander of the training station and his assignment to training instruction varied accordingly. A report of this change shall be forwarded to the District Commander.

50. Where a change of station is necessary to provide the requisite training, a report of this fact shall immediately be made to the District Military Commander who, if he approves the proposed change, shall authorize the commanding officer to issue necessary orders covering his transportation. Upon joining his organization, he shall be required to take the prescribed oath.

51. In case of physical disability disqualifying him for military service, he shall be returned at Government expense to his home and prompt report made of such action to the Provost Marshal General through the District Commander, and to the President of the municipality or municipal district of his residence.

52. One month before the prescribed course of trainee instruction shall have been completed, the commanding officer shall submit a report to the Chief of Staff containing recommendations based on individual service records, regarding the assignment of trainees to respective organization of the Reserve Force.

53. On completion of the course of instruction, the trainee shall be given a service card, signed by the Commanding Officer of the training station, and certifying to the fact that he had already completed the prescribed course of trainee instruction and that he had been assigned by the Adjutant General to an organization of the First Reserve.

54. Any employee of the Government called for trainee instruction, or for regular annual active duty training, shall not be compelled to lose his position or to suffer a loss of pay due to his absence in the fulfillment of his military obligations.

55. Young men undergoing trainee instruction shall receive five centavos per day, in addition to meals and barracks accommodations, medical attention and clothing. Trainees pursuing courses to qualify them for duties of commissioned and noncommissioned officers shall receive the same pay. While undergoing training in the grade of probationary third lieutenant, they shall receive such allowance for subsistence as the Chief of Staff may prescribe.

SECTION V

TRANSFER TO RESERVE FORCE

56. Upon completion of the prescribed course of trainee instruction, and, unless the soldier shall enlist in the Regular Force, or shall be selected for further training to qualify him as a commissioned or noncommissioned officer, he shall be transferred to the Reserve Force and assigned to an organization thereof by the Adjutant General. From this time his name shall be carried on the rosters of the Reserve Force.

57. Upon transfer to the Reserve Force, such arms, accoutrements and clothing as shall be prescribed, shall be transferred to the mobilization center of his organization.

58. On completion of his training instruction the trainee shall pass into:

a. The First Reserve where he shall be assigned to an organization. He shall continue to serve in the First Reserve until he shall reach thirty years of age. On January first of the year in which he shall become thirty-one years of age, he shall be transferred to—

b. The Second Reserve where he shall be assigned to an organization in that echelon. He shall serve in the Second Reserve until he shall become forty years of age. On January first of the year in which he shall become forty-one years of age, he shall be transferred to—

c. The Third Reserve in which he may be assigned to an organization. He shall serve in this class until he shall be fifty years of age.

59. Trainee registrants who have not been called for trainee instruction shall, on January first of the year in which they shall become twenty-two years of age, be transferred to the unorganized section of the first reserve.

60. Enlisted men of the Reserve Force shall be examined physically as follows:

a. Members of the First Reserve, annually, upon reporting for active duty training.

b. Members of the Second Reserve, every two years.

c. Members of the Third Reserve, every three years.

d. Any member of the Reserve Force may be examined physically at such other times as the Commanding Officer of his organization may deem necessary.

61. Reserve officers shall be physically examined every time they report for active duty training, and upon their assignment to active duty.

62. Any reservist who shall become physically incapacitated for any reason shall report to his commanding officer stating the nature and extent of incapacity and the incident leading thereto. Whenever possible a medical certificate will be attached to this report. Upon receipt of this report the reservist shall be examined by an Army medical officer who will determine the nature and extent of the incapacity, and will submit a complete report thereof to the Provost Marshal General through proper channels. This report shall include a recommendation as to whether or not, in view of the physical condition of the reservist he should be exempted from further military duty.

63. Upon receipt of said medical report recommending the exemption of the reservist from further military duty, the Provost Marshal General shall return the papers noting and authorizing the cancellation of the reservist's name from the list of reserves.

SECTION VI

RECAPITULATION—DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

64. Duties of registrants:

a. To report to the registering officer or deputy registering officer in his locality during registration period.

b. To preserve his registration card to show that he has carried out his first military obligation to the State.

c. To notify the registering officer of any subsequent change of his address.

d. To report to the corresponding Acceptance Board at the time and place designated, should his name be drawn for trainee instruction.

e. To report to the training station to which he may be assigned at the time and place designated by the District Military Commander.

65. Duties of registering officer.

a. To keep and preserve the Military Register as a part of the permanent records of his office.

b. To record serially in the Military Register the names and description of all registrants who report to him or to his deputies.

c. To issue a registration card to each registrant. This card shall be signed by him and attested by the municipal president, and bear the serial number of the registrant as recorded in the Military Register.

d. To record subsequent changes of address of registrant in the Military Register and also at the back of the registration card.

e. To prepare copies in triplicate, from the Military Register, of the names and description of registrants each year, for the corresponding Acceptance Board, the Provincial Military Commander and the Provost Marshal General.

f. To record in the corresponding column of the register the classification of registrants who had been drawn for trainee instruction as reported by the corresponding Acceptance Board.

66. Duties of deputy registering officer.

a. To proceed immediately to the registration place designated by the municipal council and record the names and description of registrants who report to him during the period set for registration. Blank forms prepared for the purpose shall be used.

b. To submit his report to the registering officer immediately after the close of the registration period each year.

67. Duties of the municipal president:

a. To give necessary publicity to the Presidential Proclamation No. 23, and to the times and places of registration.

b. To exercise personal and immediate supervision over the work of the registering and deputy registering officers in his municipality to insure that the process of registration is carried on properly.

c. To see to it that all young men in his municipality report for registration in the year in which they shall attain the age of twenty years.

d. To sign all registration cards issued by the registering officer.

e. To see to it that registrants who had been drawn for trainee instruction report to the Acceptance Board at the time and place designated; and that those called to the colors report to the training station to which they had been assigned for duty by the District Military Commander.

f. To insure that records of Registration and Acceptance Boards are subject to inspection of authorized military authorities.

68. Duties of the municipal council:

a. To designate suitable registration places within their municipalities and to provide necessary facilities therefor.

b. To appoint deputy registering officers from among the government officials and employees for those registration places in the barrios and other subdivisions of the municipality.

69. Duties and responsibilities of the Provincial Governor:

a. To give timely publicity to the Presidential Proclamation No. 23; and to be sure that all municipalities are furnished copies of the same.

b. To supervise the process of registration in the different municipalities of his province.

c. To divide the number of registrants to be called for training from his province into A and B age-groups; and to hold a public drawing on May 15th of each year to determine by lot those who will be called for trainee instruction in the next calendar year.

d. To give an immediate and thorough publication of the names of those who shall have been drawn and to serve timely notice to each and every one of them advising them to report to an Acceptance Board at the designated time and place.

e. To supervise the work of the Acceptance Boards in his province, furnishing them with all necessary facilities including such clerical assistance as may be needed from among the employees of the provincial government who may be spared for the purpose.

f. To keep a record of registrants who had been given deferments in order that these might be assigned to training stations at the expiration of their deferment periods.

g. To forward to the Central Review Board in Manila cases of appeal from the decisions of the Acceptance Boards in his province.

h. To see to it that trainees from his province report promptly to the training stations to which they may be assigned by the District Military Commander.

70. Duties of the chiefs of police of the Cities of Manila and Baguio:

The same as those provided for municipal presidents.

71. Duties of the Mayors of the Cities of Manila and Baguio:

The same as those provided for Provincial Governors.

72. Duties and responsibilities of Provincial Military Commander:

a. To exercise close supervision over the recruitment of man-power in his province; to supervise registration and the administration of Acceptance Boards; and to report all irregularities coming to his attention to the Provost Marshal General through the Provincial Governor and District Commander.

b. To forward to the Provost Marshal General reports of registration from the registering officers in his province.

c. To prepare a consolidated report of the result of registration every year, grouping the registrants into A and B age-groups. This report shall be forwarded direct to the Provost Marshal General immediately upon receipt of registration reports from all the municipalities of his province, and in sufficient time as to reach the Provost Marshal General's office not later than April 30th of the year in question. A copy of this report shall be furnished the District Commander.

d. To act as member of a board with the Provincial Governor and the Provincial Fiscal, to conduct the yearly drawing of registrants for trainee instruction.

e. To see that all registering officers and Acceptance Boards are adequately provided with stationary, blank forms and record books by the Quartermaster Service of the Philippine Army.

f. To authorize the payment by the military disbursing officer in the province of the per diem allowance of those members of the Acceptance Board who are not Government officers or employees.

g. To furnish necessary transportation to and from the place of meeting of the Acceptance Board to those members who are residing in other municipalities.

h. To keep the record books of Acceptance Boards in his office when these boards are not in session.

i. To issue necessary transportation orders and furnish subsistence allowances to and from the training stations to trainees who, by law and by these regulations, are authorized to receive such transportation expenses.

73. Duties and responsibilities of District Military Commander:

a. To exercise general supervision over the recruitment of man-power in his district. He shall, either personally or by duly appointed assistants, supervise the process of registration and the operation and administration of Acceptance Boards within the territorial limits of his command. He shall report all irregularities coming to his attention to the Provost Marshal General.

b. To issue necessary orders designating the period within which and the training station to which each trainee will report for duty.

c. To insure that necessary facilities, personnel, arms and equipment are available for the needs of the different training stations in his district; and to see to it that adequate military training and discipline are maintained at all times.

d. To make necessary recommendations, from time to time, to the Provost Marshal General relative to the number, location and membership of Acceptance Boards and training cadres in his district.

74. Duties of Acceptance Board:

a. To examine the physical and mental qualification of all registrants who had been drawn for trainee instruction and classify them according to their physical condition and special qualifications into the different classes as provided for by law and by these regulations.

b. To carefully scrutinize all cases of exemption for physical reasons, and those seeking deferments, to insure that the effective operation of the law and the maintenance of essential national services will not be prejudiced thereby.

c. To keep a record of all cases examined and classified by the said Board in a record book provided for the purpose. This book shall be turned over to the Provincial Military Commander for safekeeping when the Board is not in session.

d. To prepare a report in triplicate of its operation during the year for the Provost Marshal General, the District and Provincial Military Commanders.

75. Duties of the Central Review Board:

a. To decide, without unnecessary delay all cases of appeal from the decision of Acceptance Boards.

b. To forward its decisions to the corresponding District and Provincial Military Commander for necessary action.

Maj.-Gen. Basilio J. Valdes
Deputy Chief of Staff, P. A.

76. Duties and responsibilities of the Provost Marshal General:

a. To establish in his office a Recruiting Division which, under his immediate supervision, shall be responsible for the execution of all laws and regulations regarding the registration, examination and assignment of male citizens of the Philippines for trainee instruction.

b. To make a yearly allotment of the number of young men to be called for training with the colors from each province and to immediately notify the Provincial Governor of the same.

c. To designate officers of the Philippine Army who will act as members of the Boards for the Cities of Manila and Baguio, to conduct the annual drawing of registrants for trainee instruction.

d. To submit recommendations to the President of the Philippines as to the number, location and membership of Acceptance Boards; the membership of the Central Review Board together with its staff of assistants and necessary medical examiners as provided for by law.

e. To be sure that all registering officers and Acceptance Boards are adequately provided with necessary stationery and blank forms for the proper execution of their duties as provided by law.

f. To see to it that direct communication is established between the municipal and provincial authorities and the provincial military commanders to ensure that the regulations are understood and that the measures taken to record the registration are adequate.

g. To issue orders to civil and military police authorities for the apprehension and punishment of evaders.

Brig.-Gen. Guillermo B. Francisco
Commanding General, Regular Div., P. A., Camp Murphy, Rizal.

h. To require provincial military commanders to inspect the measures taken for registration, to assure themselves of the adequacy thereof, and report any irregularity found to the Provost Marshal General in time to enable the necessary corrective action to be taken.

i. To authorize all necessary disbursements of funds as authorized by law and by these regulations.

OPINIONS ON PHILIPPINE NATIONAL DEFENSE

ONLY U. S. MENACE MAY FORCE JAPAN TO OCCUPY THE PHILIPPINES *

JAPAN HAS NO DESIGNS ON PHILIPPINES, SAYS
"OSAKA ASAHI"—LEADING NIPPON PAPER

"Japan has no designs on the Philippines. She has no mind to occupy the Islands, whether they are fortified or not. If Japan should decide to occupy the archipelago, it would be to save herself from a menace to her safety from America."

Such is the categorical expression of Japan's attitude toward the Philippines in connection with the present independence problem and the "yellow peril" scare, as given by the Osaka Asahi, leading Japanese paper, in an editorial of recent date.

The editorial analyzes the situation at length thus:

By a vote of 8 to 4 the American Senate Committee on Insular Affairs has adopted with slight modifications the bill offered by Senator Harry B. Hawes, Democrat, providing independence for the Philippine Islands. The measure, which will shortly be taken up by the Senate, grants self-government to the citizens of the islands, except in the field of foreign relations, for a period of five years, at the end of which the citizens are to decide by a plebiscite whether they should have an independent government or remain under the American flag.

This is not the first time that a bill granting independence to the Filipinos has been discussed in Congress. On the contrary, independence for the Philippines has formed the subject of debate in almost every session of Congress in recent years and the world has come to attach little importance to the question.

Much significance, however, attaches to the present action of the Senate Committee on Insular Affairs. The Hawes proposal is made under circumstances, which indicate that this time the Filipinos stand a better chance to attain their long cherished object than in the past. It is too early to predict the fate of the Hawes measure. Remembering the treatment congress has given to similar proposals in the past, it is rash to conclude that the action of the Committee on Insular Affairs assures the passage of the Hawes bill in Congress.

Several reasons can be assigned for the unusual interest the Americans are taking now in the independence movement. One of them is in doubt about the advantages of retaining the islands. The tone of the advocates of independence indicates that the Americans are getting tired of the burden of assuming responsibility for the safety of the islands.

Incidentally, the London Conference has given great impetus to the movement for granting self-government to the Filipinos, as a preparatory step to the eventual surrender of the islands, and the Hawes proposal is an indication of the change in the attitude of the Americans toward their insular possession.

Since America came into possession of the Philippines by treaty with Spain, her problem has been how to make the islands safe from foreign invasion. The importance of this question has been considerably added to in recent years as a result of the expansion of the Japanese navy.

This problem was partly solved at the Washington Conference, where America succeeded in inducing Japan to agree to the ratio of 3 in her naval strength to America's 5, in return for which she pledged not to fortify the islands. Japan's acceptance of the ratio proposed by America enabled America to reduce her armaments, in accordance with the spirit in which she had called the parley.

Agreement on the relative naval strengths of the two countries was reached only after America saw reason in the Japanese claim for a higher naval ratio, which was based on the ground that fortified Philippine Islands would constitute a real menace to Japanese safety.

On her part, America could not leave the islands defenseless, so long as Japan maintained a strong navy. America also realized that the launching of a program for arming the islands was not compatible with the purpose of the conference. As a result she decided to abandon her fortification project, thereby paving the way for the success of the parley, so far as limitation of the navies of the two countries was concerned. Needless to say, America's proposal to make the Philippines invulnerable against foreign attack had been made, with Japan as a possible enemy.

It would seem that the Americans have no cause for anxiety about the Philippines, so long as Japan keeps the strength of her navy within the limits of the Washington Treaty. But this is not the case.

That fear of Japanese occupation of the Philippines still dominates the minds of some sections of the American community is clear from the fact that the question of safety of the islands popped up during the Senate debate on the London Naval Treaty. The Senatorial opponents of the London Pact assailed the Government for giving Japan the strength assigned to her by the treaty. They regarded Japan's strength as excessive to the extent of constituting a menace to the safety of the Philippines.

In taking the lead in the attack on the London treaty generally and the ratio assigned to Japan in particular, Admiral Hilary P. Jones went so far as to declare that by giving Japan 70 per cent of the strength of the American navy, the London Treaty has made it impossible for the United States to provide adequately for the security of the Philippine archipelago.

Therefore, if America should wish to make the islands secure against possible attack by Japan, she can do so only by scrapping the Washington Treaty and the agreement signed at London and by providing herself with a navy twice as big as Japan's.

But we wonder what possible benefits America would derive from effecting fortifications on the Philippines. Fortification of the islands is conditional on scuttling the decision of the Washington conference in which she took so prominent a part. Surely America would not undo what she has done, for no other reason than that of saving her face.

Revival of American interest in proposals in the independence of the Philippines is due to America's realization of the impossibility of making the islands secure, so long as the Washington Treaty is in force. The reasoning of advocates of independence for the Filipinos presumably is that by abandoning the islands America might be relieved of her anxiety about the possible occupation of the islands by Japan, and of the fear of losing prestige in the event of the islands falling to her enemy in a Japanese-American war.

The Japanese have no doubt about the pacific intentions of America. If America is bent on conquest in the Far East, surely she would not have participated in international gatherings called to discuss arms limitation. We would be doing America an injustice if we thought even for a moment that her foreign policy was based on imperialism. Such ambitions on the part of America would be incompatible with the spirit of the Washington Treaty, by which she surrendered her right to fortify the Philippines.

On her side, Japan has no designs on the Philippines. She has no mind to occupy the islands, whether they are fortified or not. If Japan should decide to occupy the archipelago, it would be to save herself from a menace to her safety from America.

Therefore, if America sees no need for fortifying the Philippines it would seem that no good would accrue to her from continuing in the occupation of the islands. If, on the other hand, America decides to give independence to the Filipinos out of her sense of justice and humanity, it will be well and good, since by doing so she can be faithful to the spirit of the founders of the American Republic.

OVERSEAS EXPEDITIONS

Historical Examples

The reason for any over-seas expedition may be briefly stated as "National Ambition."

In the Seventeenth Century England, France and Spain launched over-seas expeditions to secure wealth. Nearly all of their expeditions succeeded since little if any organized opposition was met at the shore line of the country invaded.

In 1898 the United States took the Philippine Archipelago from Spain, partly because of a war in the western hemisphere, but mostly so that the United States might possess a colony. The United States met no opposition from Spain in her landing operations and during her initial landings she had friendship and help of the Filipinos. But after establishing a base in Manila, it took a force of 100,000 soldiers some two years to force the natives into submission. And we all are very familiar with the total lack of preparedness among the insurgents.

During the World War there was an interesting over-seas expedition in the Orient. Japan, in the fall of 1914, was intent on capturing the German base at Tsingtao. Japan wanted this base, for Germany had offered a serious threat to Japan's claim to the guardianship of Asia. Japan also wanted the rich deposits of ore which are to be found on the Shantung peninsula. Tsingtao was well manned and her fortifications cost a hundred million (U. S.) dollars. Japan took Tsingtao, but she elected to land unopposed two hundred kilometers below the fort and then captured it from the land side.

During the World War the Allies, for strategic reasons, attempted to capture the Dardanelles. A successful campaign would give Russia a seaport on the Mediterranean and the Allies could then exchange munitions for Russian wheat. The possession of Constantinople would cut Mohammedan Turkey in two and be of great moral benefit to the Allied cause. It would secure the benevolent neutrality of the Balkan states and create a strategic rear for the Allies to be used as an avenue of approach to the vulnerable rear of the Central Powers. By the spring of 1915 the Allies had every reason to believe their chances of success on the Western front were most doubtful. In a frantic effort to gain a victory, the Dardanelles campaign was attempted. But England was opposed by Turkey at the shore line. She lost 110,000 men, fifty-eight percent of her total forces, and the expedition was a pitiful, humiliating, tragic failure.

The failure of the Dardanelles campaign forced England blindly into a murderous offensive on the Western front, the success of which was hopeless from the start.

In 1917, Germany occupied a huge "position in readiness;" the Allies had the initiative, but at any time Germany was prepared to take up the offensive against any weak spot in the enemy line which might be disclosed. The first Russian Revolution in March 1917 had not taken Russia out of the fighting as the Germans had hoped. Instead of a separate peace, Russia attacked. In order to demoralize the Russian forces, Germany attacked the Russian right wing which rested on the Gulf of Riga. Since the Gulf of Riga was controlled by the Russians and it in turn offered an avenue of approach to the German left flank, Germany decided to clear the Gulf of Riga from Russian vessels. To do so, the Baltic Islands of DAGOE and MOON had to be captured. Consequently an over-seas expedition was organized. In this case the Germans were successful for the reason that the Russians did not oppose their landing.

In all these campaigns cited, and I believe you will find in all over-seas campaigns in history, the over-seas expedition succeeded if the defender allowed the attacker to land unopposed and the expedition failed if it met determined resistance at the beach.

EXTENSIVE PREPARATION NECESSARY

Before launching an over-seas expedition an attacker must possess the necessary means to insure a reasonable chance of success.

Let us outline briefly the tremendous problem facing any power which attempts an over-seas expedition. To begin with, the over-seas power must possess superior naval, air, and land forces before it attempts to invade a country. It must have complete control of the sea and shipping facilities to transport initially a force capable of gaining a foothold and establishing a land base in the hostile country. The navy must be based so that it can protect constantly the entire line of communication. The invading nation must establish air superiority beyond any question. The invading nation must have a tremendous superiority, in numbers at least, of men power.

To succeed, the expedition must be brilliantly planned.

NAVAL REQUIREMENT

At first glance, it may appear that a country is hopelessly defenseless without a navy. But such need not be the case. Naval supremacy enable a power to launch an over-seas expedition but it does not insure success, provided a determined defender is encountered.

At the Dardanelles the British had naval supremacy but all the good it did was to convey one hundred ten thousand crack regulars to their doom.

When the United States entered the World War, the combined navies of England and the United States ruled the sea. Already England alone had won a technical victory off Jutland. President Wilson saw the right flank of the Germans exposed to attack by way of the North Sea. He envisioned an over-seas expedition, under cover of the combined Allied fleets, against the German right rear from suitable ports along the North Sea. By landing sufficient troops the German right could be crushed and her entire line of communications to the Western Front could be interrupted.

But this grand plan was promptly rejected. Germany could have met any such proposed landing at the beaches with a few of her reserve divisions. And England had already tried, much to her sorrow, a similar operation against the Dardanelles.

NAVAL BASES

Not all of a power's naval force can take part in an over-seas expedition. Even in time of peace any navy operating away from its base has at least 15 percent of its effective strength laid up for repairs. England felt, during the World War, that her bases were too far from the North Sea. Her naval officers estimated that their fleet in operating 1,000 miles from its base was reduced in efficiency by 30 percent.

Assuming that an enemy base, from which ships are likely to operate against the Philippines is fifteen hundred to two thousand miles from Manila, the space factor alone reduces the effectiveness of the fleet thirty to forty percent. The enemy must also leave a substantial force in her home waters for protection of home ports; one can easily see that no country could bring all its fleet against the Philippines.

The effectiveness of a fleet varies inversely as the distance from its bases to its zone of operation. A concrete example of this principle is found in the German submarine campaign during the World War.

The German U-boat bases were too far from the commercial lanes of travel they were attempting to interrupt. Germany had more than 100 submarines available in 1917, yet only 15 or 20 were ever in operation against enemy commerce at any one time. Had the Germans based their U-boats on Ireland, rather than on Zeebrugge, they would easily have doubled their effectiveness without addition of a single U-boat.

NAVAL FIRE AGAINST SHORE TARGETS

There is a tendency to over-emphasize the value of naval fire against shore targets. Yet the ineffectiveness of navies against shore targets is most conclusive. During the early days of the World War three German cruisers, rated as first class attacked two 6-inch batteries at Hartlepool, England. The cruisers were badly damaged and forced to retire, whereas the 6-inch batteries were still in action when the vessels withdrew.

During the Dardanelles campaign, a capital ship fired all day at a minor caliber battery on the tip of Gallipoli and never succeeded in putting it out of commission.

Napoleon said: "One gun on land is worth 10 on the water." Today, ships are almost as vulnerable as they were in Napoleon's time, and shore batteries are far more accurate, powerful, and effective. The ratio given by Napoleon is more than conservative today.

With the exception of Manila, the navy of an enemy could shell and perhaps destroy any town along the coast. But this operation would have little, if any effect, on the outcome of an over-seas operation, except perhaps to make the defenders more determined than ever. It need not be decisive.

A navy can convoy an over-seas expedition; it can assist it in forcing a landing; it can establish a blockade; it can protect its own lines of communication. But it can neither lay waste nor conquer nor capture a country.

CARRIER BASED AIRCRAFT

There is also a belief prevalent that airplanes based from airplane carriers can strike a country and inflict devastating losses. Now it is just as bad tactics for bombers or other air force units to attack shore targets from airplane carrier bases as it is for the navy to attack shore batteries. An intelligent enemy will seldom use his air force based on an airplane carrier against a land target. The reason is perfectly obvious. Suppose the air force units of an airplane carrier take off with Manila as their object. And suppose one lone bomber from some place, say in the Cagayan Valley, should be fortunate enough to sink the airplane carrier. What then would become of the air force headed for Manila with only a few hours supply of fuel and no base to which it could return?

Before an enemy attempts a major landing, he must first secure an adequate land base from which his planes can operate. There is a general misconception of the effectiveness of a modern air force against the Philippines. Frankly, in all the Islands there is no target worthy of the steel of a first rate air force. Manila could doubtless be laid waste from air attacks but the result would be to make the defenders more determined to hold out to the last. Manila can only be captured and held by men on foot, with guns and bayonets.

Corregidor might be considered a good target, but it is protected by anti-aircraft and would perhaps inflict more losses on the enemy than would his bombers inflict on Corregidor. It is bad aerial tactics to attack a well defended objective. There usually are too many good targets defenseless.

Other countries have proper targets for air force; paper Tokyo, industrial Osaka; manufacturing Detroit are examples. But such targets are not to be found in the Philippines.

The enemy will use his air force to protect his communications, to support his attacks, and to harass. Air force cannot lay waste to the Philippines.

SIZE OF FORCES

The main objective of any overseas power will be Luzon in general, and Manila in particular. By capturing the seat of government, the enemy hopes more quickly to force a favorable peace.

Let us work backward and attempt to determine the size of the force an enemy must bring to the Philippines to insure a victory. Assume the enemy forced a landing at Lingayen Gulf, marched on Manila, fought two major engagements enroute, and besieged Manila which is defended by a hundred thousand Filipinos. Examples of a force defending one twice its size are rare in history. Therefore, the enemy must have at least fifty thousand effectives available after he reached Manila if he hopes to take the city.

Ranks thin down fast in a force as it invades enemy territory. In 1912, Napoleon passed through Niemen with five hundred thousand troops; one hundred twenty thousand fought at Borodino; only ninety thousand entered Moscow; he returned to Poland with only twenty thousand.

Tropical diseases, malaria and dysentery, will be as severe with men today as was a Russian winter in 1812.

It is, therefore, conservative to estimate an enemy may expect to lose one hundred thousand men during his advance from Lingayen to Manila, provided he meets determined resistance.

The British lost fifty-eight percent in their unsuccessful landing operations at the Dardanelles. Using these figures, in order for the enemy to land the necessary one hundred fifty thousand effectives, he must have started from his homeland with a minimum of three hundred thousand soldiers.

Based on the German expedition against the Baltic Islands in 1917, a force of three hundred thousand requires 85,000 animals, 25,000 vehicles, 400 field guns, 2,200 machine guns, 800 trench mortars and 23,000 tons of rations for 30 days' supply. It requires 190 transport ships, averaging 8,000 tons each, perhaps a hundred battleships with auxiliary cruisers.

PLANNING THE ATTACK

The training in the homeland must be thorough. It entails special training such as embarking on unit loaded transports by combat teams, so that each transport carries fighting units complete within itself. Training in debarking in small boats is necessary. Men and equipment must be loaded from transports into small boats. The small vessels then must go to the beaches and the men wade ashore. Animals must be swung from transport in flying stalls, and then taught to ashore. Such operations are very fatiguing on both men and animals.

Troops in an over-seas expedition can never be trained in thier home country to face the actual conditions they will be forced to face in making a real landing. Even so it is estimated that a properly trained over-seas expedition will require six to eight months' training prior to embarkation.

Here are listed some of the studies which the enemy must solve prior to the attack.

Thorough knowledge of landing beaches and surrounding waters; complete hydrographic conditions; the prevailing winds; the beach; the climate; a thorough knowledge of topography of the area defended; the resources of the country, including water, food supplies, fuel, rolling transportation; a complete terrain study of the likely theater of operations, his equipment, his strength, his morale, his determination to defend. His transports must be sheltered from shore fire, anchored beyond range of shore guns, the location of fixed defenses must be accurately known, land marks to aid navigation and aid in ranging shots must be determined. The types of bomb roofs construction along the shore line should be known, dead spaces in the terrain where reserves may be sheltered must be figured; defender's search-lights and obstructions of beaches must be destroyed; it must be determined whether or not the enemy will use gas.

In selecting suitable landing beaches the enemy must attack where he can move rapidly on his objective. He must have roads, maneuver space, and a reasonable chance of quickly reaching his objective. The objective selected must be a decisive one. Its capture must be the greatest single blow which can be inflicted on the defender; it must upset his seat of government or paralyze his resources or both.

MINDANAO FALLACY

This question of proper objective leads us to the Mindanao fallacy. There exists a false impression that an enemy could seize Mindanao, build there a powerful base, concentrate a large army and then launch an attack against Manila. Should an enemy decide to do this, it would play directly into the hands of the Filipinos. Assuming the enemy navy base is north of Luzon, the establishment of a land base at Mindanao increases the enemy line of communication and its increased demands on the enemy fleet. In no way does it solve the problem of attacking Luzon, which problem remains exactly the same whether the enemy comes from Mindanao or from foreign soil.

The capture of Mindanao would not mean the loss of the Philippine cause any more than the loss of Belgium spelled defeat for the Allies. For an enemy to seize Mindanao first and then operate against Manila, would be division of effort and a stupid mistake for the attacker.

THE ATTACK OF THE SHORE LINE

Let us assume that an enemy has organized an over-seas expedition against the Philippines, has a naval base close to Luzon, has established an airbase on land within operating distance of Manila and has planned an intelligent campaign. First, the enemy must insure success at all cost. Success against the Philippines can mean only the capture of Manila. To capture Manila, the enemy must take one main decisive effort which must succeed. All other efforts to capture Manila cause him to weaken his forces against the main force.

The enemy would very much desire the element of secrecy, but his withdrawal of transports from commercial pursuits, his securing of bases has made secrecy impossible. Long range air observation can scarcely be denied and the definite time he approaches with his landing party can easily be known.

The only secrecy possible, therefore, lists in the element of surprise. The fleet can approach a hostile shore, conceal its main effort by launching subsidiary efforts and attempt to mislead the enemy as to his real plan of attack. The defenders must plan to meet any such deception.

The difficulties of landing on a hostile shore cannot be over-emphasized. The troops have been crowded on a transport victims of sea sickness and low morale. They have suffered mental anguish enroute as a result of an inherent fear of impending danger of attack by enemy submarines or bombers and the exploding mines.

The dangers of transport vessels being sunk while men are debarking or before they debark are very great. Unless the enemy air force is defeated and all shore batteries silenced before launching the attack, the expedition is doomed to failure. And just because shore batteries are silent does not mean they are out of action. One defending bomber, hidden away at some obscure landing field, might roar out of the mists of the dawn and sink a crowded transport. An invader may think he has gained air superiority, but he can never be certain. This uncertainty of not knowing whether or not shore batteries are silenced and the fearfulness that the defending force might produce attack and bomber planes, is an impending hazard from which attacking troops will never feel easy.

Unfavorable weather conditions play havoc with the best laid plans to attack a shore line. Bad weather might even ruin the expedition without the defender having to fire a shot.

In going ashore in small boats the troops are sure to be under heavy fire which they cannot effectively return. The wading ashore from the boats is confusing, fatiguing and dangerous. As they wade in they must face the murderous, grazing machine guns of the defenders. They can scarcely fire a shot in reply and if they could the enemy would present only a scant target if he could be seen at all.

A much disputed question is whether or not it is better to attempt a landing under cover of darkness or during the day. The objections to a night operation are that darkness adds to confusion, the boats leave a white wake as they move ashore and subject the men to attack from planes, while the anti-aircraft defenses are rather helpless during darkness. On the other hand landing in darkness greatly reduces the effectiveness of the defenders' machine gun fire. Perhaps the correct time to land is so as to be at the beaches at the crack of daylight.

The support which a navy can give troops landing is none too effective because of the flat trajectory of navy guns. Fire must be lifted some little time before troops reach the beach. If the defender is at all clever in the use of camouflage and natural cover, a navy has trouble in finding a suitable shore target.

AIR FORCE ASSISTING IN LANDINGS.

If the landing is made in day-light, air force of the attacker will provide complete supremacy of the air. The planes will lay a smoke screen to cover the approach of the landing waves. The attack planes will use machine guns against the defenders along the beaches and against reserves coming forward. Artillery will be attacked with bombs, gas and machine gun fire. Such tactics will inflict losses on the defender.

Gas put down will be only nonpersistent, otherwise attacking troops might have to wade through their own gas. Smoke curtains to cover landing waves must be lifted at the beaches otherwise confusion among the attackers will result.

The inescapable fact remains, that attacking troops must still wade ashore under murderous machine gun fire from the beaches.

II

DEFENSE AGAINST OVERSEAS EXPEDITIONS

Landings

Let us turn to the defensive measure possible for the Philippine Army in its operations against an over-seas expedition. The withdrawal of civilian transport from commercial pursuits will give ample warning so that mobilization and initial disposition of troops can be made. The first contact with the enemy advance will be a defender's air observation and bombers. By a complete dispersion of the Philippine air force there is a very poor target for enemy aircrafts to attack the Philippine air force on the ground.

As the fleet and convoy approach the Philippines, they can be successfully attacked at night by an air force far inferior to their own. At night flares may be dropped from defending observation planes and defending bombers will be able to operate with comparative safety by the light of flares float-powerful, cannot entirely prevent bombing of the fleet at night time.

The next unit in action against the approaching fleet will be the offshore patrol. These high-speed vessels offer a very minute and fleeting target yet they carry deadly destruction for capital ships. The loss of these small high-speed vessels is relatively inconsequential and yet they are a devastating threat from which the invading force will never feel free.

The next element of defense which is likely to embarrass the enemy is artillery fire from the shores. If the Philippine Army has only one regiment of 155 mm G. P. G. guns, because of their high tactical and strategical mobility, they can be so placed that at least a small amount of fire may be brought to bear on the enemy transports. This being the case, the transports must anchor some 10 miles from the shore line in order to be safe from the defenders' artillery fire. If the 155 mm guns are well camouflaged, the enemy will find it practically impossible to put them out of action with his air force or artillery fire.

As the enemy comes ashore in small boats, he will be especially vulnerable to the flat trajectory fire of 75 mm guns placed properly along the shore line. Next he must pass through the deadly grazing fire of .50 caliber machine guns which will pierce his small boats even though they be metal. As the small boats come within 1,000 yards of the shore line, .30 caliber machine gun fire will cover them completely. The stokes mortars, because of their high angle fire, should not be placed at the beach but should be at the back perhaps 1,000 yards and fire on the troops as they land. Gas would be most effective in this case. Likewise, a properly defended beach should contain gas mines of mustard placed about 200 yards apart and exploded electrically as the first wave arrives at the beach.

Should the enemy elect to land at night, searchlights from the shore and flares from the air will provide clear targets for the defenders. During daylight the enemy will land under cover of smoke and artificial fog. This may reduce his casualties but will also add to his confusion in landing. In laying the smoke screen to cover the landing, the attack planes must fly low and parallel to the beach. That will offer exceptionally fine targets for the defenders and their losses may be unprecedented.

I want to impress upon you that superiority in numbers alone will not give victory in battle. Only in map problems can superiority in numbers be given full weight. Be strong initially when you meet the enemy. Meet him at the beach and do not count on raising a large force after the enemy lands. It might be too late.

There are two schools of thought reference defending an enemy landing. One teaches that an enemy is opposed lightly at the shore line with the mass of defending troops held fresh in reserve for a counter-attack against the enemy beach head. I do not subscribe to this school of thought. Get your man power into action promptly and get all possible men at the beach.

A clever enemy will always try to land on the beach which is not defended, regardless of difficult terrain. He should never do the obvious thing with his main effort. It is better for him to march hundreds of miles overland, than to land against a defended beach. One morning at the Dardanelles, six machine guns caused the British 15,000 casualties.

THEORY OF DEFENSE

All else being equal, a strict defensive attitude will never win a war.

But if a state carries on a defensive war purely to maintain its independence, and if the attacker is never able to gain a decisive victory, in the final analysis, will not the enemy be exhausted and finally fail?

Among American Army schools there is a tendency to teach that the offensive form of war is essential for a victory; that only through offensive tactics is the morale of troops to be maintained.

But such ideas have no place in modern warfare.

In 1914, the French, with their eyes fixed on the left bank of the Rhine, ignored the power and effectiveness of automatic weapons and adopted the insane cry of "Jou-jours l'attaque." It was in keeping with modern theory of combat. It has a thrilling appeal, like the beating of drums, but in the first 45 days of the war they lost 329,000 men. The French should have immediately assumed the defensive and making best use of terrain, awaited the attack of the Germans. It would have led to terrific German losses and might have changed the whole course of the war.

The loss of ten million men in the World War, bleeding white the countries involved and leaving the line stabilized and practically where it started, ought to indicate the utter futility of infantry troops against even hastily organized positions.

And if attacking troops can move no faster than by marching on foot, an alert enemy will always throw an organized defense across their path.

Now the Philippines must be attacked before it becomes involved in a war. Initially therefore it is, of necessity, on the defensive.

I do not, however, mean to say that a strict defensive attitude even, for the Philippines, would always be sound. There are sure to be times when the enemy has spent the force of his attack.

If a commander, facing such a situation, is able to time properly his counter offensive, it will be very effective. It is just like black-jacking a man who, with his back turned to you, is helpless. To determine just when this time has arrived is a delicate art.

To launch a counter offensive, the defender must know:

(a) That the force of the enemy attack is spent.

(b) That the enemy does not at the moment have available reserves to thwart your move.

(c) That you yourself have at least half your force fresh and ready to engage in the counter-attack.

"To attack an enemy thoroughly injured to war in a good position is a critical thing."

This sentence was written by Von Clausewitz, perhaps our greatest military writer, more than one hundred years before the coming of automatic weapons, the use of toxic gas and before the manufacturing era when troops can be supplied with all the ammunition they can fire.

As a result of the appalling losses which result from an infantry attack of an enemy in position, the attacker has been forced to resort to many means to aid his offense. I shall list this without developing each means. Surprise, smoke, mechanization, air force, artillery firing, war of movement and maneuver.

OFFENSE vs. DEFENSE

A common sense comparison of offensive and defensive war leads one to the inevitable conclusion that the defense is clearly the stronger form of war. But if the defense is the stronger form of war, why should any power ever assume the offensive?

A power assumes an offensive war if its mission requires it to gain an objective which it does not already possess. Such an objective might be territory, mineral resources, an army, a city, an ocean port. Since the offensive is the weaker form of war, the attacking power must possess sufficient strength to be able to suffer great losses. His form of war is costly and can lead to victory only after great sacrifices have been made.

A defensive war can exist only if the offensive takes place.

Being completely satisfied with her present possessions and not desiring to extend her boundaries, the Philippines contents herself with the more modest, defensive form of war with its obvious advantages. Unless attacked, the Philippines does not contemplate war; if attacked she will defend. As a defender, the Philippines is not likely to endanger neutrality of other nations. Offensive war is likely to involve neutrals.

Offensive and defensive principles are the same, except that in the offensive action the attack comes first, followed by defensive measures after the blow has been struck; with the defensive form of war, the defense against the attack comes first, followed by a counter-attack against the aggressor after his attack has been spent.

The attack of a rich objective cannot be pushed to a successful conclusion in one drive without interruption. During the World War, infantry could advance only as far as artillery was able to blast the way. The infantry then had to dig-in and defend while artillery was moved forward and reorganization took place. Troops had to have rest and reinforcements before they could continue. But the defense taken up an attacker at the end of an advance is far from being a prepared position. It is a position hastily organized by troops that have suffered heavy losses, are poorly supplied, disorganized and physically exhausted. More than likely the terrain does not lend itself to a defensive position and artificial defensive measures are inappropriate since a new drive forward will be made as quickly as possible. It is clear then that every attack leads to a defense.

In defensive form of war, the defender awaits the attack enjoying all the advantages and security of a carefully selected and prepared position. When the blow of the attack is spent, its action neutralized, the defense steps in, of itself. With relatively fresh troops a counter-blow is launched from a prepared position and before the exhausted attacker has time to prepare his new position for defense. Clearly then, the defense theory is impregnated with offensive principles, and a proper conception of defensive warfare is to defend by striking blows.

The differences between offensive and defensive forms of war, therefore, lie in the order in which the offense and defense take place and in the length and degree of intensity of each. But these inherent and inevitable differences make a weak force able to defend successfully against a much stronger one.

ADVANTAGES OF DEFENSE LISTED

Whether it be in business or in war, "to preserve is easier than to acquire", and all things being equal, to defend is easier than to attack. A list of the concrete advantages of the defensive form of war as especially applied to the Philippines follows:

Purely for illustrative purposes, we have assumed an enemy has captured the Lingayen Gulf region and is marching on the Central Plain of Luzon on Manila. To capture Manila, the enemy must succeed in a series of varied, difficult, trying special operations.

Do not be misled by the fact that I have elected to talk of Luzon rather than any other island and do not assume that the Central Plain of Luzon is the only terrain which can be defended. I have merely selected this plan to illustrate defensive combat principles which apply equally well to any terrain. In other words, Mindanao or the Island of Iloilo can be as easily defended as Luzon. The principles of defense are always the same, regardless of terrain on which they are applied. The National Defense Act contemplates local defense for every island of the Archipelago worth capturing.

From a study of the map of Luzon one may block out mountainous districts, swamps, and lakes and draw in the rivers in heavy lines. A glance shows that all major actions from the north against Manila must be in the Central Plain of Luzon that the action of the enemy must be characterized by frontal attack only then he must encounter any natural obstacles and pass through several easily defended bottlenecks in his march on Manila. By a study of terrain alone enemy movements can be readily anticipated and met.

One more consideration must be given by the enemy to his attack on Luzon. Anyone who has seen the Central Plain of Luzon during the typhoon season knows that the enemy attack must begin at the end of the rainy season and must be pushed to a successful conclusion before the rainy season begins again or the attacker is doomed to failure.

DEMOLITIONS

As our army retires before an enemy advance, it has all the advantages of roads, utilities and assistance of a friendly territory: it leaves nothing available to the invading force. Roads, bridges, culverts, railways, warehouses, stores, utilities supplies and equipment are all destroyed.

In Central Luzon, the delay thus effected will be great because at best there are only a few roads. However, momentary delay is indecisive and delay in repairs will be greatly enhanced if all demolitions are thoroughly mustardized so that prompt repairs will be impractical.

The delay of an advance is all important; every suspension of an attack favors the defense. If the capture of Manila can be delayed until the beginning of the rainy season, the enemy will find his attack greatly hampered and his entire line of communications under water a great part of the time.

COMMUNICATIONS

As the enemy moves deeper into the plains of Central Luzon his rear becomes a tremendously increasing problem. As a matter of fact, his flanks really extend from his front lines to Lingayen Gulf. The civil population is unfriendly. The invader is destitute of means adequately to enforce obedience and he must dot the entire zone with local garrisons to handle the incensed population.

The zone is flanked on either side by high mountain ranges which offer innumerable avenues of approach for small fast columns to strike the enemy lines of communication, his reserves and his supplies. Such attacks of night, if well planned, will be very successful.

To protect himself from these attacks the enemy must have highly mobile units ready to strike the small fast columns which do-bouch from the mountains, strike and quickly return to the hills.

The farther into the interior an enemy advances, the weaker he becomes and the stronger becomes the defender.

A force of natives from the mountain provinces as large as a regiment would be able to make devastating raids on the enemy in the Lingayen area. The enemy could scarcely afford to leave such a force in the rear, yet to destroy it in the mountains would be a tremendously difficult and long assignment.

The whole idea of these raids on the enemy rear area would be to destroy, to harass, never to allow him to sleep.

The defender is entirely free from these rear area problems.

RIVER CROSSINGS

In an advance from the North through the Central Plains the enemy will have several difficult river crossing operations. A river crossing to the attacker entails most of the hazards of landing on a hostile shore except that the attacker can make full use of his artillery and automatic weapons in covering the crossing.

The defender can clear fields of fire on the enemy side of the river, while he can take full advantage of cover on the defending side. Most of the streams to be defended are sinuous and by placing machine guns properly grazing fire may be directed up and down the stream so as best to cover the crossing.

River crossings against a determined enemy are extremely hazardous and are undertaken only when the attacker is willing to exchange enormous losses for possession of the opposite shore. Without decided superior force, physical and moral, a wise commander will not attempt to force a river crossing.

OBSTACLES

Defenders must make full use of artificial and natural obstacles. This will include a ten year program of planning so as more or less to canalize the advance of enemy forces the better to take them under fire.

In the Philippines, it will be a simple matter to delay enemy mechanized or motorized forces. Small streams can be dammed so as to raise the water level and offer many water barriers which could not normally exist. By destroying culverts, stream crossings and bridge approaches, mechanized forces would be obliged to delay until crossings were built.

The felling of trees with the tops placed toward the enemy also offers excellent obstructions. It will be difficult for the enemy to detour obstacles left in his path in the plains of Central Luzon because of the high mountain ranges on either side.

MOUNTAINS

The influence of mountains in battle is very great. No major war has ever been fought or decided by mountain fighting. Mountainous terrain is more advantageous to the defender than to the attacker. On the other hand, a small force can control a large mountainous area. A small unit in a mountain can harass a larger force in the mountains or in a nearby plain, retreat to the mountains, disperse, reform for another blow against the enemy. The harassing attack of defending troops in the mountains will therefore definitely influence the action of a large enemy in the lowlands. The mountain ranges parallel to the valley are strategic barriers enabling defending forces to strike deep in the enemy's rear, interrupt his communications and at the same time they restrict the maneuver space of the enemy confining his major action to the valley.

Fighting in woods, like mountains, is usually restricted to small forces. Woods are far more advantageous to the defender than to the attacker. Forests serve to deceive both enemy and friend. Aerial reconnaissance is difficult, using gas and automatic weapons will be effective in woods.

SWAMPS

Swamps are a more effective obstacles than are rivers. Swamps may be planked and crossed yet always in the center of them one encounters water and marsh land which is practically impassable. You can count on an intelligent enemy avoiding swamps.

DEFENSE OF A POSITION

Since at its widest part the central plains of Luzon can be defended from one mountain range to the other by Filipino troops, an enemy is forced to make a frontal attack against the defender. There are few operations in all warfare more costly than frontal attacks against an enemy in a prepared position.

The defender must make the best use of terrain in selecting a defensive position. He must choose one which the enemy must capture before he can accomplish his mission. It must be one which an enemy dare not pass by and leave in his rear. The proper selection of a defensive position forces the enemy to meet you on terms of your selection, and forces him to attack over unfavorable terrain while you occupy terrain favorable to your defense. With proper foresight the defender fights from behind prepared positions and makes the most of natural cover and natural obstacles, while the enemy must fight in the open and overcome all obstacles while under the defender's fire.

It is important that the defender secures his flanks, that he establishes his front line just below the crest of the hill, that he have his reserves under cover located so they may move out promptly for a counter-blow.

His entire communication system and supply system must take advantage of cover and concealment and yet he is able to select a field of fire for the enemy approach which will cost him maximum losses.

With automatic weapons front lines may be held lightly, yet by the time they are captured, the enemy is so disorganized that a counter-attack on him might be most destructive. Defense of a position enables the defender deliberately to slaughter the attacker from prepared positions; while the attacker, under heavy fire, must advance against an enemy he cannot see. The theory behind defensive warfare in the Luzon plains is to allow the enemy to attack, to inflict heavy losses upon him until he has reduced his strength to a point where the defender can safely launch a counter-offensive.

The theory of such a plan is to exchange terrain for time in order to meet the enemy under more favorable conditions when he is weaker.

Bottlenecks in an enemy advance on Manila should be defended by field fortifications. A study of terrain shows that any approach by land to Manila must pass through several difficult bottlenecks.

The defensive enables one to take advantage of the mistakes of the attacker. The attacker cannot see the defender's dispositions. The defender watches the attacker forming up his units to strike. If he makes a mistake it is costly.

Supply problems for the attacker are constantly increasing as their route of advance becomes longer. Supply problems for the defender do not increase but rather decrease as the enemy advances.

The defender is ready and fairly fresh for the attack when the attacker has spent his forces.

Defending forces do not need as much artillery as attacking forces. Attacking forces with artillery must blast their way; defending forces can get more casualties by the use of machine guns and gas. Automatic weapons are better defensive than offensive weapons. Weapons do not have to be moved forward in the defense and they are easily supplied.

Reserves of a defending force are better concealed and do not have to move so far forward. Offensive forces in order to claim a victory must commit all their strength when the proper time comes. They, therefore, are not likely to have fresh troops to meet a counter-attack from the defender.

The object of the defense is to gain time. If the defense is not defended and although it may retire at night such an operation may be considered a victory. A defense, if cleverly planned, need not show the true disposition of his force. The attacker, however, is forced to display his strength in the face of enemy fire.

There are criticisms of your national defense plans from political sources. Keep clearly in mind that the defense of your islands is separate from any political set up. Any country worth living in is worth defending. It is a tragic, deplorable fact, but so long as force is the law of nations and the destiny of peoples is decided by combat rather than justice, that long must people defend their home-land and their heritage. No one will defend the Philippines for you: Whether you be a commonwealth, a colony or a Republic, you must defend yourselves. If you are unwilling to do this you will forever be a subject people.

But there is a force greater than all those I have mentioned, which will be inherent in you as defenders of your country.

I refer to an inner sense of righteousness. By laws of God and men this is your country. When you take up arms to defend it you are placing your lives between your loved ones—all that you hold dear—and the fire of the enemy.

The weapons you use are therefore not terrible engines of destruction wiping out the lives of countless innocent victims, rather the people whose lives you take are themselves seeking your destruction or subjugation.

Your war against invaders will not be like a war between two nations on a common ground and caused by conflict of national policies. In such a war men blow the souls out of one another without their having any personal quarrel. They never met, lived far apart, if properly introduced might be friends. In 1917 I knew why the United States entered the World War. Today I know it was a tragic mistake. I doubt if any one knows what he fought for in the World War.

But an invader of your home-land, bent on taking it from you at once arouses a personal sense of righteousness in the breast of each defender. Public opinion is on your side—an inner sense of right gives you strength. You know why you fight.

And through this inner sense of right you will all be able to forget self-complete abnegation of all personal value that will allow you to go forward strong.

SUMMARY OF DEFENSE.

1. Attack the enemy prior to landing with your air force, torpedo boats, artillery fire.

2. Attack the enemy during landing from positions on the beach. Make supreme effort to defeat him at the beach. Hold back nothing. Take advantage in your defensive positions of terrain and cover.

3. Pay special attention to location of your reserves so that they may attack when the enemy's blow is spent.

4. Hold front line slightly, strong in automatic weapons; flanks resting on natural terrain features.

5. Use mountains and woods as cover for small fast striking columns to fall upon the enemy, his supplies, reserves and communications, and never allow him an easy moment in which to sleep.

6. Let enemy commence the attack, exhaust his strength by striking blow after blow against your position until he has reduced his strength to a point where he can be defeated before he can reorganize to defend. Then plan and push a counter-blow.

7. Make full use of your field critical points, use demolitions, obstacles, gas, and always be sure to have at least 500 yards field of fire in front of your position.

8. Plan limited objective attacks from the flanks after the enemy has attacked.

9. Remember that a draw engagement is a victory for the defender.

10. With the enemy exchange space for time, with a view to denying him his final objective till the rainy season starts. Exchange space in order to save your troops and to engage the enemy further in the interior under more favorable circumstances.

11. Plan ahead to get superior forces at the right place at the right time. Keep plans a secret and create surprise. Begin with defensive operations, abide your time and end with the offensive.

12. Keep an inner sense of righteousness in your cause and do not let reverses upset your morale.

CONCLUSION

Just as any machine gun nest can be captured if the attacker is willing to pay the price, so can the Philippines be captured if the enemy is willing to take the losses, in treasure, and in blood, which would be entailed by a determined resistance.

It has been estimated that the Philippines are worth six billions of dollars (U.S.). If your country follows the present ten year plan now so well under way; if you are determined to defend your rights and liberty and homes to the last ditch, it will cost an invader between five and ten billion dollars to take your country from you.

Over-seas expeditions are undertaken only with great risk. The attacker must be certain he can control the sea and the air before he starts from his home port. In addition, he must have thorough preparation, superior leadership and a tremendous preponderance of strength.

And even with all this strength if you are really determined to fight, nothing but good fortune will allow him to succeed.

A DISCUSSION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE PROBLEMS

By

FIELD MARSHAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR
Military Adviser to the Commonwealth Government

The "problems of the National Defense program of the Philippines" was the subject of a brief but comprehensive discussion by Field Marshal Douglas MacArthur, military adviser to the Commonwealth, before ranking officers of the United States and Philippine armies. The discussion took place on July 3, 1936, at the Military Mission's headquarters at 1 Victoria Street, Intramuros.

General MacArthur compared the military defenses of various powers and countries with the projected defenses of the Philippines and pointed out the problems connected with national defense program mapped out for the Islands.

Field Marshal MacArthur's discussion follows in full:

"The basic military problem facing the Philippine Government is whether with its present resources of population and wealth it can develop a defensive force capable of withstanding a more powerfully armed opponent. Does the old boxing adage, so often quoted in athletic circles, 'A good big man will always defeat a good little man,' unfailingly apply in war? The answer is that the axiom would apply only if the two opponents should meet the issue of combat under practically identical conditions. If each could concentrate its entire army in the battle area, and if each were compelled to solve substantially similar problems of supply, transportation, reinforcement, and tactical operation, the larger army would always win. But this equality of conditions never exists in warfare and war has therefore shown many startling reversals in which the apparently weaker opponent achieved victory. From the classic Biblical example of David and Goliath through the successful Revolutionary War which established American Independence the history of the world is replete with illustrative examples.

In the case of the Philippines, it would be an impossibility for any potential enemy to bring to the Philippine area anything like a preponderant portion of his army. He would indeed have difficulty in concentrating into the vital area as large a force as the Philippine Army, which would oppose him. Any conceivable expeditionary force might actually find itself outnumbered.

This country has the enormous defensive advantage of being an island group. Hundreds of miles of water separate it from any other land. The protective value of isolation has time and time again been demonstrated in military history. No other operation in warfare is so difficult as that of transporting, supplying, and protecting an army committed to an overseas expedition. The English Channel has been the predominant factor in the freedom from an invasion enjoyed by the British Islands throughout their modern history of many wars. Although Europe has, time and again, seethed with supposedly invincible armies, of which at least two have made elaborate and definite preparations for the invasions of the Island Kingdom, never since modern armies have come into being with their enormous size and huge amounts of impediments, has Great Britain been compelled to drive off a land attack from its shores. The British Navy has, of course, been a powerful factor in sustaining this security. But in this dual combination of defenses, the ocean obstacle has been the first and more important, and the Navy has been the one to increase the effectiveness of the first.

The United States undoubtedly owes its existence as an independent nation to the friendly Atlantic. The War of the Revolution would have most certainly resulted in ignominious defeat for the Colonies had geography separated them from the mother country by a mere land frontier rather than by 3,000 miles of ocean. In the war of 1812 this factor again permitted the colonies to withstand the forces of the mightiest empire then existing and preserved the American nation from resubmission to British control.

In the case of the Philippine Islands, we have then as its first favorable factor in solving its defensive problem, a geographical separation from every possible land enemy. It is true that there is no thought of attempting to develop here a powerful battle fleet. But it is pertinent to point out that the major duty of a great fleet is to preserve overseas communication. Inshore defense is only a subsidiary function. This function for the Philippines will be performed by flotillas of fast torpedo boats, supported by an air force. Due to the exclusively defensive posture of the Philippine nation great battle fleets are not necessary to insure its preservation. The Islands, themselves, are to be developed as a citadel of defensive strength and the essential function of air and naval forces will be that of denying transports the opportunity of anchoring close to Philippine shores for the debarkation of troops and supplies.

The threat to large surface ships residing in small fast torpedo boats supported by air detachments was recently indicated in the Mediterranean. It is significant that following the lesson there demonstrated, Great Britain, Germany, and other powers are following the Italian example in adding this particular weapon as an important category in defensive equipment.

But geography did not cease its defensive favors to the Philippines when it made them an isolated group. Nature has studded these islands with mountainous formations, making practicable landing places for large forces extremely few in number and difficult in character. The vital area of Luzon, in which dwell approximately seven million Filipinos, presents in all its long shore line only two coastal regions in which a hostile army of any size could land. Each of these is broken by strong defensive positions, which if properly manned and prepared would present to any attacking force a practically impossible problem of penetration.

But nature has still further endowed the Philippines with defensive possibilities. Sixty percent of the national terrain consists of great forest areas, impenetrable by powerful military units. The mountainous terrain, the primeval forests, and the lack of communications, combine to create a theatre of operations in which a defensive force of only moderate efficiency and strength could test the capabilities of the most powerful and splendidly equipped army that could be assembled here.

Other islands of the Archipelago possess similar defensive possibilities. In some instances no practicable landing place for large forces exist. In every case determined troops at the shore-line could deny landing to an attacker of many times their own number.

It is a human trait to magnify the potentialities of any enemy and to underestimate one's own strength. Too often we are apt to take counsel of our own fears. In contemplating the defense of the Philippines we should visualize the enormous effort necessary to launch and prosecute a huge overseas campaign. The difficulties to be overcome by the aggressor in such a situation are not even dimly understood by the laymen. Only those who have participated in or witnessed the extraordinary expenditure of energy and money required in such operations can appreciate the obstacles that invariably stand in the way of success. In the world war the United States had practically to change the entire course of its industrial activity in order to send to France the forces required there. Billions upon billions of dollars were poured into the venture and over 100,000,000 people devoted their full energy to its success. Yet, in spite of the fact that its expeditionary forces were despatched to permanent ports and bases that were in the firm possession of American allies, and no tactical operations of any kind were required in order to establish it ashore, more than a year elapsed before the American Army could place a single complete division on the battle front.

The amount of shipping that must be withdrawn from commercial activity and transformed into vessels suitable for troop transportation is so great as to present, in itself, a major problem, even to a power rich in maritime resources. To transport 300,000 men with essential equipment and supplies for only thirty days requires approximately 1,500,000 tons of shipping. The greatest total maritime tonnage of any nation operating in the Pacific Ocean is but 4,700,000 tons. These figures give only a faint indication of the serious logistical problems that must be solved whenever an overseas expedition is proposed.

Of all military operations, the one which the soldier dreads the most is a forced landing on a hostile shore. It is at that time he is at his weakest, the enemy at his strongest. His transport frequently arrives at the end of an unpleasant trip and generally unpleasant conditions have not tended to improve his morale. At the critical moment his ships are forced to come to a standstill in order to undertake the debarkation of the attackers in small boats. At this time—motionless targets, they are subjected to an intensive attack from fast moving torpedo boats and even faster whirring bombers of the air. Each small boat, with only a fraction of men, has to make its way in through a pitiless fire of artillery, machine guns and musketry—a fire of deadly accuracy because delivered from prepared and protected positions. Yet through this veritable holocaust his small unprotected boat with no means of effective response to the enemy fire must reach the shore, perhaps through a dangerous surf, to discharge its occupants in an attempt to build up a firing line to overcome an emplaced enemy. Subject to desperate counterattack on the beach, perhaps engulfed in poisonous waves of gas, deprived of the inspirational presence of great masses of his comrades, he has always the feeling that goes with a forlorn hope. Lucky indeed the command that can achieve success on such a day and in such a way.

The outstanding world war example of an overseas operation accompanied by landing against a defended shore was the allied operation at Gallipoli. In the initial stages of that abortive campaign the Gallipoli Peninsula was very inadequately defended and the early naval bombardments encountered only antiquated forts. While it is true that the land attacks were poorly coordinated and failed to achieve the element of surprise because of the warning given the defenders through naval bombardments, still errors of omission and commission of this type are invariably characteristic of attempted landings against defended beaches. The complete failure of the Allied attack is a matter of history. The only point in mentioning it here is to remark that it emphasized again for all students of warfare the tremendous difficulties attendant upon overseas operations and to indicate the degree of reluctance with which any General Staff would commit a major portion of its army to a venture of this character.

In contemplating such an attack any government would have an additional cause for hesitation. There is the tendency of wars to spread and draw into the maelstrom of battle nations that originally had no apparent cause for participating in the quarrel. The World War illustrated this tendency with particular emphasis. Any government that should prepare and send overseas a force of sufficient strength to attack the Philippines would have to consider carefully the possibility of any other potential enemy taking advantage of the situation and entering the contest at a time when the aggressor was seriously committed and possibly even embarrassed in the Philippines.

The layman might attempt to depreciate the force of the considerations I have just enumerated by quoting the experience of Italy in its conquest of Ethiopia. In doing so, he would be guilty of a fundamental error in reasoning, because the implied analogy is almost completely false. The conditions under which Italy invaded and conquered Ethiopia were fundamentally different from those that will exist hereafter the Defense Plan has reached its full development. Let me amplify:

Ethiopia had no army worthy of the name. Ethiopian troops were sketchily equipped with weapons largely mediaeval in their characteristics. Ethiopian forces were torn by internal strife; they had no effective leadership; they were loosely organized, and were in fact totally lacking in every phase of modern organization, equipment and training. Italy was not required to make a landing against a defended shoreline. She had two principal land bases from which to begin the campaign, namely, Italian Somaliland and Eritrea. Even so press reports indicated that the initial mobilization for the campaign began months and months before the first troops were actually shipped, and were so extensive as to test the capacity of Italian resources.

I have no hesitancy in stating, and I believe that my professional opinion in this matter would be substantiated by every General Staff in the world today, that had Ethiopia adopted an adequate system of military development ten years ago and thereafter continued faithfully to organize, train, and equip its military forces in that concept, the Italian armies would not be in Addis Ababa today. More than this, I do not believe that under such conditions the military conquest of Ethiopia would have been attempted.

In the face of this wealth of facts and lessons favoring the defensive potentialities of an island empire, the query naturally arises as to why there should be any serious question as to the ability of the Filipinos to defend themselves with reasonable effectiveness. The answer again is a very simple one. It is because the United States has never stationed in this American possession a sufficient force to defend the Islands against land attack. Since the end of insurrection days the American Army, including its Filipino contingent, has averaged about 10,000 men. With defending forces represented by this pitifully small garrison and with the broad Pacific lying between them and their nearest supporting troops, it was appreciated by all that the Philippines could not be held against strong surprise land attack. This fact was thoroughly understood by the professional soldier and sailor who repeatedly protested and complained 'The Philippines cannot be successfully defended with its present garrisons.' By the layman, however, the modifying phrase was ignored and it was translated in to the slogan, 'The Philippines cannot be successfully defended' and this shibboleth finally attained the dignity of an expression of popular opinion. No conclusion could be more false. An adequate garrison can defend the Philippines for as long as available supplies and provisions will sustain the Army and its supporting population. Considering the productivity of these Islands in the matter of food this period of feasible defense will undoubtedly extend, once the necessary training has been accomplished and the necessary equipment accumulated, far beyond the capacity of any attacker to maintain a large expeditionary force in these territorial waters.

The defensive possibility in the Islands is not entirely an academic question. The Philippine Insurrection of almost forty years ago gave us a valuable lesson along this line. In that campaign a poorly equipped and loosely organized force of irregulars, which probably never exceeded 20,000 in its total strength compelled the American Government, with its bases thoroughly established here and with complete command of the ocean, to support large forces here engaged in bitter field campaign for a period of several years—forces which at one time numbered almost 100,000 men. Had the Filipino Army been properly organized and adequately equipped, the resources in men and money expended by the American Government would have been multiplied many-fold.

Another great advantage accrues to an army when it serves a government whose military policy is purely and passively defensive such as it is here. Under such conditions the Army as a whole and in each of its parts is not diverted by extraneous objectives and missions, but rather is permitted to concentrate its full attention on one specific problem in one specific area. Each unit of the defending army may then, in any future war, operate on a battlefield thoroughly known to its officers and men—on a battlefield in which every part has been thoroughly prepared with the single purpose of preventing penetration by the enemy. The relative advantage enjoyed by a force occupying ground deliberately selected and organized for defense was proven by World War experience to be represented in a numerical advantage of some four or five to one.

The respect accorded to any army organized for a definite and specific defensive task as is the present instance is well illustrated in the case of Switzerland. The military system applying in that country more closely parallels the Philippine plan than does any other now in existence. The Swiss Army has no objective except to defend the homeland, within its national boundaries. It has taken advantage of every geographical feature to increase its tactical power and to make more difficult the problem of any potential invader. So clearly have the general staffs of Europe appreciated the strength of a nation organized and prepared to defend itself with the full power of its citizenship, that for decade after decade, Switzerland, although its population numbers little more than one-fourth that of the Philippines, has maintained its territory inviolate and has successfully avoided entry into any of the conflicts that have engulfed other nations to Europe.

If there are those who scoff at the thought that Filipinos can successfully defend themselves, when once their citizenry has been trained in the profession of arms and equipment in reasonable amount has been accumulated, let us not forget that the idea of Philippine self-sufficiency in this respect is essentially a new idea. Scoffers will never be lacking when any new concept is advanced. Usually, however, they are found among those who know little or nothing of the facts, but who arrogate to themselves the dogmatic wisdom of popular slogan and glib generality. Those who lightly regard the difficulties in conquering the Philippines know nothing of war themselves and next to nothing about the actual potentialities of the Filipino people, Philippine assets, and Philippine terrain. They forget that this country is numerically stronger than such nation as Turkey, Switzerland, Jugo-Slavia, Sweden, Siam, Portugal, Persia, Norway, Hungary, Greece, Finland, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Chile, Argentina, Austria, Bulgaria and many others now armed to the teeth. Canada has about two-thirds of the population strength of the Philippines. Mexico about the same population as the Philippines. Brazil is the only nation besides the United States in the American continents including North, South, and Central America that has a greater population. Indeed, only fourteen nations in the world, I have been informed, have a greater population than the Philippines. In the general staffs of the world, I assure you, you would find no dissenting voice to the assertion that, when the Philippine Defense Plan has reached fruition, it will represent a defensive strength that will give hesitation to the strongest and most ruthless nation in the world. Let me remind you that there were a multitude of skeptics who maintained that Fulton's steamboat would not float, that the Arnacal flight would not reach Madrid, that the Wright Brothers would not get their airplane off the ground, that Ericsson's Monitor would be a dismal failure, and that Marconi was a visionary at best, and possibly a lunatic at the worst. Defeatists have always been present to greet every new thought, every new idea, and every new attempt at constructive progress. Defeatists laughed at America's attempt to free herself from British control, but today the United States is possibly the most powerful nation in the world.

Defeatists ask how, within the ten years military budget of eighty million dollars, can a sufficient force be equipped including an air component and offshore patrol of torpedo boats. Planes cost 30,000 dollars each, boats 35,000 dollars. Ten year budget provides ten million for the air component, five million for the offshore patrol. To complete the fiscal analysis in broad outline, thirty millions go to the regular force and thirty-five millions to the reserves. With this latter personnel serving as a civic duty, practically without professional remuneration, a large and adequate part of this latter sum is available for military supply and equipment. Parenthetically, the yearly defense budget amounts to about 22 per cent of the estimated annual governmental income, much less than in most countries.

Only recently I saw two moving pictures that reminded me of this type of defeatist opposition. One portrayed the story of Louis Pasteur and the world's continued and incessant skepticism which so jeopardized his efforts. The other was the film showing the knock-out of Joe Louis by the German, Schmeling. Ninety-nine percent of the Sporting World vociferously proclaimed the impossibility of such an outcome. Why? They did not know the facts; they refused to listen to such an unbiased and clear thinking expert as Damon Runyon when he intimated the possibility that the German would reach his goal. He based his conclusion solely upon fact, not upon blind hysteria and imitative ballyhoo and thereby arrived at a correct estimate.

I wish to reiterate my fixed opinion that when the Philippine Defense Plan reaches fruition the people of these Islands will be in a favorable posture of defensive security. The question, of course is one that no sane man would care to see resolved in the only way that it can ever be answered finally and conclusively,—namely, by the test of conflict. But so far as the study of history and some considerable experience with armies and with warfare can lend a color of value to my opinion, I am certain that no Chancellory in the World, if it accepts the opinions of the military and naval staffs, will ever willingly make an attempt to willfully attack the Philippines after the present development has been completed.

Finally, this one impelling question naturally presents itself as lying at the heart of the issue here involved. 'If the Philippines does not prepare for its own defense, to maintain its own security and to preserve its own independence, how are these functions to be performed?' Surely, no other race or nation will expend its youth and its treasure for the defense of this Archipelago. Yet, we know that the defenselessness invite aggression and that when unprotected, economic and political independence can not continue to exist. Pacific habits do not insure peace. Trade, wealth, literature and refinement can not defend a state. If others are not to perform these functions for the Filipinos, certainly they must gird themselves for the task. Without security there can eventually be only slavery. With slavery will come national death."

U. S. GAVE ALL FACILITIES TO PHILIPPINE ARMY

DEFENSE PLAN CARRIED OUT IN FAST ORDER

The United States Army in the Philippines lent the fullest amount of co-operation possible to the Philippine Commonwealth during the new government's first year of existence. This cooperation has been manifest in a variety of ways.

At the outset, the United States War Department detailed Major-General Douglas MacArthur as Military Adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth. In General MacArthur the Philippines has one of the most brilliant officers produced by the United States Army. With wide experience in both war and peace, he is ably suited to guide the newly organized Philippine Army in path of sound and practical military teaching. He has a keen insight into the needs of a military defense of the Islands and the War Department could not have chosen more wisely.

With General MacArthur came three other brilliant officers, also loaned to the Commonwealth by the War Department. Lieutenant-Colonel Dwight Eisenhower, Lieutenant-Colonel James B. Ord, and Captain Thomas J. Davis, all officers of wide military experience. They act as General MacArthur's assistants and aides in his work here.

DEPARTMENT HELPS

From the Philippine Department came four other officers: Major Harvey W. Prosser, Captain Bonner F. Fellers, and Lieutenants William L. Lee and Hugh A. Parker. Captain Fellers organized and inaugurated the General Service School at Camp Henry T. Allen. He served as Commandant of the School through the first graduation on September 18, 1936, of 156 graduates. These graduates were then taken into the regular army organizations at the several posts in the Islands and given courses in training methods and an acclimation period of service with troops.

In the development of the Air Corps for the Philippine Army, Major Harvey W. Prosser and Lieutenants Lee and Parker undertook the training of prospective air officers at Camp Murphy. These three ably fitted officers are graduates of the Army Air Corps Training Center at San Antonio, Texas, and have instructed in that school since their graduation.

TO TRAIN RECRUITS

Recently, at Fort Wm. McKinley, 240 selected Philippine Scouts underwent an intensive training period prior to being detailed as instructors for the incoming recruits of the Philippine Army and will stay on duty with it for as long a period as their services may be needed.

Army officers in the United States are checking and making all approvals on equipment being bought by the Philippine Army from manufacturers in the United States. Miscellaneous equipment has also been loaned to the Philippine Army.

The United States still has quite a few abandoned posts throughout the Islands that are being offered to the Philippine Army as their needs for such posts may arise. The reserve officers of the new Philippine Army are also being given instructions at the various posts of the Philippine Department.

GENERAL HOLBROOK'S ADDRESS

Delivered at the Commencement Exercises of the Instructional Cadre of the Philippine Army Held at Camp Murphy on October 31, 1936

One of the important military events since the organization of the Philippine Army under Commonwealth Act No. 1 was the formal administration of oath of office to the first graduates of the Reserve Officers' Service School, Baguio, Mountain Province, which was held at Camp Murphy, Rizal, on October 31, 1936, in the presence of President Manuel L. Quezon and other distinguished guests.

Major-General Paulino Santos, chief of staff of the Philippine Army, addressing the graduates and the public, reiterated the value of the present national defense program, its purpose and meaning and its highlights. Stressing also the need for general cooperation in the carrying out of the plan, he enjoined the graduates who were to be assigned as military instructors throughout the country, to be just and fair and industrious, dutiful and considerate and never to allow themselves to be subject to charges of favoritism and partiality and of cruelty.

Major-General Basilio J. Valdes, deputy chief of staff, administered the oath of office to the Reserve Officers, while Lieutenant-Colonel Aristeo V. Simoni, chaplain, delivered benediction. Colonel Mateo S. Capinpin made the opening remarks, while the Philippine Army band assisted.

Among the graduates were former Representative Manuel Nieto, social secretary to President Quezon; Assemblyman Manuel Roxas, former Speaker of the House of Representatives; and Assemblymen Felipe Buencamino, Jr., Pedro Vera, and José Ozamis; and Daniel Victoria, former chief accountant of the Philippine Constabulary. These officers were commissioned as Third Lieutenants and immediately promoted to the rank of Major in the Reserve Force of the Philippine Army.

Major-General Lucius R. Holbrook, commanding general of the Philippine Department, U. S. Army, was the principal speaker on this occasion. The full text of his speech follows:

"MR. PRESIDENT, FIELD MARSHAL MACARTHUR, GENERAL SANTOS, COLONEL CAPIPIN, OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE PHILIPPINE ARMY, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

"This event—the assembling of the nucleus of your regular army, with the reserve officers of your first training camp and this fine body carefully selected non-commissioned officers of the Scout organization of the United States Army — is indeed outstanding in the history of the Commonwealth. You have reached your second objective in the development of the Philippine Army.

"The initial steps taken for building up the army, provided by the first Act of the Commonwealth, show keen foresight and remarkable coordination of effort. They inspire confidence in your military adviser and his staff, and in the first appointments made of a higher officer in the Philippine Army, as well as in those in immediate charge of instruction.

"I have watched the gradual development of these reserve officers through the reserve officers' school at Baguio and the course at army posts and have been much impressed with their enthusiasm and capacity. They will now go to active duty in accordance with their rank and will serve most efficiently in the preparation of the district training groups for the first enrollees coming to your camps next January, and then in the instruction of these men. This will develop them as officers of your army — they will at once function as commanders of men.

"I have had little contact with your regular army troops, but having served with Filipino soldiers for many years I know them to be faithful and true, and competent according to their instruction.

"I am especially proud of this body of non-commissioned officers selected from among thousands of our so-called Philippine Scouts at Fort McKinley, Stotsenburg, and Fort Mills, by the respective post commanders, and especially trained by the United States Army personnel under the immediate direction of General Gulick at Fort Mills and of General Humphrey at Fort McKinley—the latter under the supervision of General A. T. Smith, commanding the first Philippine Division. Everyone concerned in the selection of these non-commissioned officers, and their training for the special work required of them has been most enthusiastic, aggressive and interested.

"It is with much pride and satisfaction, General Santos, that I now present these finished products to you, in full confidence that they will be of inestimable value in moulding the first cadres of trainees into shape. Most of these non-commissioned officers have served for years in field and in garrison. They understand training, discipline and respect for authority, and count nothing a hardship, in carrying out the orders of those placed over them. Some of them have had 20, 25 or possibly 30 years of service and should be of inestimable value to your reserve officers in their administrative duties, and in handling men, in training, ceremonies, and small problems. The reserve officers have had far more advanced and liberal education, but not such long intimate contact with enlisted men in field and garrison.

"I fought against Filipino Insurgents in many skirmishes here in the Philippines in the early days—36 and 37 years ago—and I fought alongside of other Filipinos in our service at the same time—and I can assure you that under proper leadership they are excellent soldiers. I am certain that these non-commissioned officers will succeed in their new assignments and you may with confidence lean very heavily upon them. You will find them hardened to service, capable, loyal and efficient, ready to serve—real soldiers whose conduct, bearing and soldierly appearance your trainees cannot fail to emulate. May they have the spirit possessed by my brigade in France, carrying on during those long dreary months following the Armistice, whose guiding motto may well have been—

"No wind too cold,
No snow too deep,
No recall.
No mission too difficult,
No sacrifice too great,
Duty first."

"It is my belief that the first Act of the Commonwealth will always stand first in importance in the history of your assembly. It resulted from the direct insistence of your Honorable President who recognized above all the necessity for universal service in the development of your people, and in order to insure the independence of this wonderful country—when it shall walk alone.

"Perhaps you have here in your country, as we have in America, too many people who think only of their rights and privileges under the Constitution—and are always talking about the government owing them a living—never realizing that they themselves in part constitute the government—and in their lack of patriotism they forget their own obligations to it.

"No other legislation, so important as the Act prescribing universal service, can be passed by your assembly. It is a masterpiece of accomplishment — the insurance policy of your nation. We in America have never, in this regard, been able to accomplish so much. It can never be said of your country, as was so often in the past said of our own. 'That it prefers to accept the horrors of war, with its attendant loss of life, blood and treasure, to providing thorough preparedness against such a catastrophe.'

"A trained army cannot spring up over night—it is, if efficient, developed gradually by years of military thought and a fitting physical development of your people that only military training can accomplish. There must be a national and a family preparedness that will make it possible to pass from peace to war status without a disruption of home and of business. Only by a gradual development of army training and of military thought — spreadout year by year to more isolated groups can the vision of a nation in arms be realized—and readiness to meet national calamity be assured.

"Soldiering and hardships of service must become a habit of your people—before an invader can be met without disaster to the individuals concerned, to their families, and to their government. Remember that the army is yours. It will march to war only at the will of the people. It stands facing pending danger from every source and will be the first to render an aid in case of flood, fire, earthquake, local disaster, rebellion or war, but they will never move forward in unprovoked attack.

"Let us leave the development of your army in the hands of your expert soldiers, guided by your military adviser, Field Marshal MacArthur and his staff. They will assure you in efficient, well balanced, highly trained mobile force—capable of meeting any situation that may arise. Only with such an army can the prestige of the Commonwealth be assured.

"When the first division of the American Expeditionary force left for France, it was perhaps the most uncouth, ill-disciplined, untrained and motley array of troops that ever left our shores, being in great part made up of raw recruits in ill-fitting uniforms, unused to service. But we were made to understand the necessity for setting a good example for those that followed, well knowing that the eyes of the world were upon us. Our reward came when, later on, General Pershing said of us, 'Your organization landed in France as the advanced guard of America's fighting men. You were the first to confront the enemy and the first to attack him. You established the reputation of the American soldier in Europe.'

"And so it is with you. The whole world will be interested in this first experiment in making soldiers for the Philippine Army. Your methods, your efforts, your success will be watched by millions of eyes. The product of the first six months training camp will establish the reputation of the Philippine Army to go ahead and develop into a mighty fighting force—worthy of your country and of the efforts that have been put forth.

"You must be patient in working with new men—and expect to repeat, repeat and repeat. Remember that regardless of discouragement, with those who are inept, or undeveloped, success will crown your efforts if you work unceasingly for the standards set by these enlisted instructors of the United States Army. They will be the ideal toward which the recruit will naturally strive. Be patient and help him to attain his goal!

"Gentlemen of the Commonwealth: It must be an inspiration to you, as it is to me, to see this fine representative body of men — your own people—all of them trained, enthusiastic, well prepared to carry your Army development program on through the next phase, the training of the groups of instructors that will go to each of the 128 camps where enrollees are to be trained. I have great confidence in their success and in the success of the plans as they are unfolded to me for the development of your National Army."

FILIPINO RESIDENTS AT HAWAII RAISED CONTRIBUTION FOR PHILIPPINE ARMY

As a sign of their loyalty to the cause of independence, the Filipino residents of Hawaii have raised a P32,000.00 defense fund for the Commonwealth of the Philippines. The money was spent for the acquisition of an airplane and several machine guns which were donated to and accepted by the Philippine Army. Atty. Gonzalo Manibog, who arrived on November 12, 1936, on the s.s. President Lincoln, presented the donation to President Quezon and Speaker Gil Montilla and conveyed to these officials the greetings of the Filipino Hawaii community upon the completion of the first year of the Commonwealth.

The campaign for the raising of the fund was launched by the Philippine National Defense of Hawaii under Mariano Gorospe, a Filipino businessman in Hilo.

TRAINING PROGRAM AIMS TO PRODUCE USEFUL CITIZENS

As Revealed by Major-General Paulino Santos, Chief of Staff, P. A., in his Speech at the Opening of the Military Camp at San Fernando, Pampanga, January, 1937 *

Maj.-Gen. Paulino Santos

THE combined vocational and military training envisaged by Major General Paulino Santos is intended to instruct the youth of the country not only in the technique of warfare but also in the science of useful production of crops.

It is intended to enable them to defend the motherland in the event of a conflict with another nation and to make them productive citizens during times of peace. Their stay in the training camp for five and a half months or more will be taken up completely in soil cultivation, poultry and fish raising and military instruction.

Filipino soldiers who will defend the Philippines not only militarily but also economically were envisioned by Major General Paulino Santos, chief of staff of the Philippine Army, as he opened the first of the 25 military training camps completed under the national defense plan in San Fernando, Pampanga, sometime ago. If the Filipino people wish to be treated as equal by other nations, they must develop mentally, physically and economically, General Santos pointed out.

In his speech, General Santos envisioned training camps that will lead in the physical and mental development of the youth of the land through balanced diet. He said that when a Filipino possesses the stature of Europeans he does not have to demand respect, but commands it. He believes that prejudice against the Orientals is not only due to color but to mental and physical development.

He deplored the fact that the Filipino people use goods 90 per cent of which are not produced by them. He revealed that the purpose of the national defense is not only to defend the Islands from military invasion, but economic invasion as well. If his plans are carried out, he declared that by the end of ten years there will be 400,000 trained men who are not only capable of defending the Philippines from a military point of view, but well-developed men who have learned to exploit the resources of their country.

Gen. Francisco Macabulos

Relating his experience as a lad 8 years of age in 1898, General Santos said that he watched the troops of General Macabulos in his barrio in Tarlac operating against the Spanish troops and afterwards against the Americans.

"I saw our soldiers ill-supplied," he said. "After an engagement of three or four hours, they retreated because of empty stomachs. They were running away from the enemy because they could not stand the rigor of war when pitted against a well organized and well-fed army.

"From that time an ambition came to me that if I ever had the opportunity to place myself in a position where this weakness could be corrected, I would look after the proper training of our men not only how to fight, but also how they should be fed.

* The Philippines Herald, January 18, 1937.

Battalion Staff, Cadet Corps, Philippine Army

"I was very happy when Divine Providence placed in the hands of our President the best living soldier America has produced to head the Philippine Army. I broached the program to them as part of the military training of our young men and they readily approved the plan.

"This is our plan now—what you can see developing here. Lt. Amando Pineda, through his resourcefulness, started carrying out the plans here. Soon you can see mangoes, pineapples, fruit trees, growing here. There will be poultry farms, piggery, fish ponds and nurseries. In three years time we assure the people of Pampanga that they will find this station self-sufficient in food and the men who come to the training stations will never be without fruit and eggs for breakfast. They will find balanced diet in all training stations.

"This place will be in a position to return to the people the capital they invested. We intend to start nurseries here and will distribute seeds and seedlings to the people of the province free.

"This will not be only the place to train men, but will be a place in years to come where it would be possible for the Filipino people to become self-sufficient. The ration of 24 centavos a day is hardly enough to give the trainees sufficient food to develop physically. We have to resort to vocational training to give them better rations and to teach them how to exploit every inch of land that we have in our possession.

"We want to develop men who are physically strong, mentally alert."

General Santos told the provincial commanders of central Luzon provinces who gathered at the opening of the training station to maintain close relations with the people wherever they are. He said that unless the provincial commanders can have the cooperation of the local people, they will be unable to organize an army worthy of the names of Andres Bonifacio and General Antonio Luna.

He thanked Governor Pablo Angeles David for the cooperation of the provincial officials and local people in giving the land to the army and giving aid wherever possible. He said that as long as there are people who wear a soldier's uniform in the Islands, the name of Pampanga as the first province to have completed the first training station under the national defense plan will never be forgotten.

Governor Angeles David responding to General Santos' speech, said that in a fight for the conservation of national freedom national defense is the first need.

"We know here that without national defense we can't live," Governor Angeles David said. "In cooperating with the army we are not doing any more than our duty as good citizens. It is our primordial duty and it is for us to work for the stabilization of our national defense."

ON THE EVE OF THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH

PRESIDENT QUEZON

Says—

"We are building in the Philippines, not for today, not for tomorrow, but for all times," President Manuel L. Quezon said yesterday on the eve of the first anniversary of his inauguration as first president of the Commonwealth.

"In the face of considerable pessimism and distrust, we have set up a government run exclusively by Filipinos, respected by foreign nations, in whose ability and integrity the people of this country have every reason to trust loyally.

"As soon as I was installed into office I realized that the first requirement was a national defense force... If the Assembly had refused to pass the national defense act practically as the administration submitted it I would have resigned then and there.

"My next objective was to set this country on the road towards economic self-sufficiency... My idea of economic self-sufficiency would be a national economy that comprehends every aspect of the life of the people and is dedicated to the task of correcting the deficiencies of existing conditions... We must evolve an economic plan geared to the new proposition of gradually redistributing our trade preferably through commercial agreements with various countries.

"There shall be no laissez-faire in this country. I conceive it to be not only the right but the duty of the government to regulate the relation between capital and labor, between producer and consumer.

"We are also trying to evolve a scheme under which education will cease to be a luxury.

"I have been criticized for concentrating too much power in my hands. But the truth is there is not a single power I am exercising today which is not conferred on me by the constitution.

"During the past one year of our stewardship, we have taken every needful step to rear a new state that is safe, stable, financially sound, just and humane.

"My conception of life, be it of man or any of his works, precludes death or dissolution. For me there is only Birth and Growth. I leave death and the thoughts of death to the pessimists, the weaklings, and the defeatists."

MANUEL L. QUEZON
President of the Philippines

Delivered on November 15, 1936, on the Occasion of the Inauguration of the First Anniversary of the Commonwealth of the Philippines

MR. HON. COMMISSIONER,

MY FELLOW CITIZENS:

One year ago today, the government of the Commonwealth was inaugurated. Through the choice of our people it was my privilege to head this new government and to assume the responsibilities for a very difficult task. When on this same day a year ago, I took my oath of office, my heart was full of hope, but my mind of doubt, as to my ability to fulfill the duties imposed upon me by the newly born nation. Of one thing I was certain—my determination to do everything in my power to measure up to the expectations of my people. The rest I left in the hands of God. As I look back upon the year just passed, I feel that we have every right to be thankful to the Almighty for His Divine guidance and to you, my beloved countrymen, for your wholehearted support and cooperation. It is with a deep sense of humility that I turn my eyes to Him at this moment to seek further light and protection and to you for continued help in the remaining years of my administration.

I shall not at this juncture undertake to enumerate the legislation enacted by our National Assembly in fulfillment of the pledges we have made to our people, nor the administrative measures and executive orders in conformity thereto. It is enough for me to say that in my opinion the National Assembly has made a record unequalled by any legislative body in the world in carrying out our pre-election commitments. And as for the record of my administration it is for the future, and not for me, to judge. On this occasion I shall devote myself entirely to one thought, which is my most serious concern.

Ladies and Gentlemen: The task of establishing a new government is indeed a difficult one. But the mere setting up of the government and taking of administrative measures is after all but beyond the reach of an elected man endowed with real common sense, some knowledge of constitutional law and honest purpose and strong will. To establish a new government in our day, when a great social revolution is taking place and new ideas and ideals are gripping the imagination and emotions of the masses, demanding the recognition of rights which have been ignored and denied by governments since the dawn of civilization, one must have sufficient vision to see this world-wide change and wisdom to meet it fearlessly and squarely.

We are not building a nation to last during our hours and a few succeeding generations. My task—that which you have confided in me—is not only to set up the government of the Commonwealth that will last but for ten years, but to lay the foundations for the government of an independent State that will last as long as the world lasts, and, therefore, it is my duty to foresee the future and to adopt a course that will meet the problems of the new day. The time is past when we can blissfully ignore the lot of the man and woman who toil in the soil or who work in the factories. The time is past when any government can feel secure without the full support and cooperation of the masses of the people,—cooperation coming not from a sense of duty only, much less from fear, but cooperation which is the result of devotion for and loyalty to their government engendered by a sense of satisfaction and happiness which their government has insured for them. The government of the Philippines has the rare privilege and opportunity of learning from the experience of much older nations. The problem of our age is how to harmonize property right with the right to live—and the right to live is para-

SPEECH

HON. ELPIDIO QUIRINO

Secretary of the Interior

Chairman of the Commonwealth Anniversary Committee

Delivered at Malacañan Palace on Sunday, November 15, 1936

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. HIGH COMMISSIONER, MRS. QUEZON, AND LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

We commemorate today the initial fulfillment of four centuries of struggles from obscurity to freedom. In barely a year of its foundation, the Commonwealth of the Philippines has established confidence at home and inspired admiration abroad. It has met every task and responsibility leading to the recognition of a truly independent nation. Its accomplishments justify all our hopes in the future Philippine Republic.

But we cannot merely dedicate this solemn occasion to such an achievement however splendid. Much less can we, with a proper sense of history, just accredit this achievement to our epoch. There have been two great eras in our life, and we are living in a third. The first was the era of national awakening; the second, the revolutionary era; and this in which we live, the era of construction. The heroes and martyrs who before us gladly gave their lives that this country might live, deserve, therefore, as eloquent a place in this memorial.

We must not forget to honor their deeds and their valor, those who first saw the light of liberty gave their all fighting for it. They left to us as our sacred heritage their undying love for freedom. Nor must we forget that we owe a debt of gratitude to the men not of our own race but whom fortune had chosen to guide our destiny as if it were their own. Their extraordinary benevolence and solicitude for our well-being enriched the life of the nation that they helped to build.

So this occasion which is simplicity itself holds a far deeper and greater significance than is implied by the mere ceremony of unveiling a memorial tablet. For at last, after centuries of being held in doubt, of being belittled and looked upon at times with pity and contempt, our capacity as a race is vindicated. The intrepidity of Magellan, too, is happily remembered; Spain's early civilizing and Christianizing spirit justly rewarded; and America's noble work in the Orient from McKinley to Murphy fittingly glorified.

The joyous outcome of events, unfolded to our eyes by this celebration, has come sooner than even our fondest hopes had ever dreamed of largely because of the wise, aggressive and intelligent leadership of the first Filipino to occupy this historic seat of authority—Malacañan. He assumed the reins of this government in an era of depression and suffering the world over. But while the government of older and far more stable nations floundered, he steadily steered ours with a firm and unerring hand, immediately transforming this government from a foundling into one that is solvent, enduring and prosperous.

He has completed in one year a program of political and economic development for the ten-year period preparatory to the automatic grant of our independence. He has established the national credit here and abroad. He has rapidly acquired a renown in world affairs through the organization of an orderly and fearless government, thereby enhancing the national prestige. He has founded a citizen army and a centralized state police for our national defense and internal security. He has reorganized the government to effect economy in expenditures and efficiency in the public service, and, by the high standard of official integrity and morale permeating his decisions, doctrines and appointments he has everywhere gained confidence for the government.

He created councils, boards and companies which reinvigorated and revitalized all the other agencies for the proper and adequate material development of the country. He has laid ample provision for the protection and conservation of our high natural resources for the benefit of this and the succeeding generations. He has endeavored to elevate the standard of living of our masses and to provide for their security. He has set up a substantial relief and rehabilitation program for the distressed and for the amelioration of the poor and the unemployed. He has spurred the country to productive activities, laying special emphasis on the proper orientation of the people for their new duties and responsibilities.

The task of nation-building has certainly gained a great impetus under him. He has inaugurated a comprehensive program of large-scale development of the erstwhile virgin region of Mindanao. He has created four new cities and several municipalities. He has solidified our political institutions, encouraged trade and commerce, given new life to agriculture, awakened industries, mobilized men and means, and afforded new opportunities for the enhancement of the material welfare of the general populace. In these and in various ways, and in a measure far exceeding our expectations, he has endeavored to establish a well-rounded national life, securely able to withstand the ten years' transition period and calculated to outlast any change of administration or government.

Mr. President, yours has been the privilege and the great opportunity to advance the cause of your race and to carry into fulfillment the realization of the ideals of your country. We, therefore, call upon you to unveil this tablet bearing the names of our departed illustrious heroes and leaders—Burgos, Rizal, Marcelo del Pilar, Bonifacio, Jacinto, Mabini and Luna and the name of Presidents of the United States—McKinley, Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt; of American governors-general—Taft, Harrison and Murphy; and Senators and Congressmen—Cooper, Jones, Hawes, Cutting, Hare, Tydings and McDuffie. In an outstanding way they all helped and labored with unselfish devotion that our dream of independence may become a reality.

Yours, Mr. President, does not appear on this tablet, because although we are sure that posterity will similarly engrave your name in plates and letters of gold, while you live we can only fittingly write your name in our hearts—in the hearts of fourteen million people who live in everlasting gratitude to you as their benefactor and liberator for your noble deeds and unselfish leadership.

As a worthy depository of the ideals, traditions, and the hopes of this vigorous race, allow me to present, therefore, in the name of the Commonwealth Anniversary committee this Gold Memorial Tablet. With it goes the prayer of your people that the memory it seeks to hold inviolate, will ever continue to inspire faith and confidence in the guiding spirit of our heroes and martyrs and in the generous assistance of our benefactors, and that we will ever follow their example of self-abnegation and fortitude in the search for the common good.

No depth of human suffering, no height of material comfort can ever dissuade our people to deviate from our set course of right and justice. For, never as a people have we wavered to follow the path of national duty. May we all remember that our national freedom is not yet won, and that if we abandon or falter at this hour in its search, or stop to count the sacrifice to personal comfort and convenience in achieving it, we cannot, we shall never attain it. So in entrusting this tablet to you, Mr. President, we renew our faith and trust in that high ideal and in your ability to bring into complete fulfillment the cause that has been richly consecrated by your endeavor and by the lives and sufferings of our martyrs and heroes.

The Commemorative Tablet

The 24-carat gold Commonwealth first anniversary commemorative tablet which was unveiled at Malacañan Sunday, November 15, 1936, bears the names of Americans and Filipinos "who have contributed to the establishment of the Commonwealth of the Philippines."

The tablet, made from gold donated by Judge Haussermann, Jan H. Maraman and Andres Soriano, was executed by Vda. e Hijos de Crispulo Zamora.

The complete inscription on the tablet follows:

"Celebration of the First Anniversary of the Commonwealth of the Philippines

"Outstanding leaders who have contributed to the establishment of the Commonwealth of the

PHILIPPINE ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1936

(Released January 23, 1937)

GENERAL RESUME

The upward trend in Philippine business which became evident in 1935 was accentuated in 1936 and assumed some of the aspects of a boom. Export crops were generally good and, with the exception of tobacco, were in excellent demand in American and foreign markets. Prices reached higher levels than have been seen in recent years and the value of exports, including gold, was greater than in any year since 1929. Including some P42,000,000 for gold and approximately P6,000,000 for sugar benefit payments, which may be considered as equivalent to exports of sugar, the total value of exports was P320,896,000, or only about four percent below the record 1929 figure. Imports also increased but not in the same proportion, due to greater stability of prices on imported goods, and the favorable balance of trade reached a record figure. Prices of some imported goods increased rapidly toward the end of the year, indicating that there will be a considerable increase in the value of imports in 1937. Credit conditions were excellent.

Payment of P30,000,000 in sugar benefits in the later part of 1935 and early 1936, largely to a class of people who were already in good financial condition and who had no incentive to expand their productive capacity, due to sugar limitation, created a pool of funds available for investment, which found its way mainly into the mining share market. Share quotations advanced steadily and rapidly throughout most of the year, the opportunity for quick and spectacular profits attracting savings and even interesting some foreign capital. This activity was reflected in bank figures, with demand deposits nearly doubling in the course of the year, while overdrafts, loans and cash increased substantially. Debits to individual accounts, during the height of the speculative movement, averaged 150 percent greater than the previous year. There was a moderate reaction toward the end of the year. Note circulation increased markedly, due to sugar benefit and veterans bonus payments and to general prosperous conditions. In the exchange market, the peso was strong throughout the year, due to the heavy increase in exports, a reduction in remittances, particularly to Spain, and some imports of capital attracted by investment opportunities.

The commonwealth Government benefited from the marked increase in prosperity in its first full year, revenues in the General Fund increasing to about P76,675,000, compared with P65,000,000 in 1935. The 1936 figure includes P4,679,000, representing repayment by the Philippine National Bank of old advances. The increase in revenue was sufficient to cover augmented expenditures for national defense and economic measures incident to the establishment of the new Government, and a comfortable surplus was shown for the year. Actual expenditures in 1936 totaled about P71,000,000, including P9,990,000, representing a loan to the Manila Railroad Company to permit it to retire bonds. New revenue bills were passed by the National Assembly in its 1936 session to cover increased appropriations for the next year and a balance of revenues and appropriations for 1937, in the neighborhood of P80,000,000, appears probable. Receipts in the Special Funds for highways and port works in 1936 appear to have been at least 40 percent greater than in 1935, due partly to heavy imports of gasoline and lubricating oil during the end of the year in anticipation of a tax increase, partly to restoration of sugar exports to a normal basis and partly to general prosperity.

Government companies with the exception of the railroads, showed increased profits in 1936 and promise to do even better in 1937. Several new Government companies were formed or authorized, including the National Rice and Corn Corporation, which was active in the stabilization of rice prices during the year. A national Power Corporation, organized at the end of the year, is empowered to issue bonds to finance the development and operation of hydro-electric projects. A national Produce Exchange, to facilitate trading in agricultural products, is in process of organization, and a committee has recommended the organization of a National Iron Company to study the possibility of developing iron ore deposits. The National Development Company was reorganized as a public company. The national Economic Council, organized at the beginning of 1936, was engaged during the year in the study of the industrial needs and possibilities of the country. A Radio Advisory Board was organized to study the possibility of nationalizing radio broadcasting and a Government Service Insurance system was authorized to replace the pension funds.

Sugar production was on a more nearly normal basis in the 1935-36 season, with a total production of about 952,000 short tons. The crop fell short of expectations due to unfavorable weather and was insufficient to cover an export quota of 952,000 tons and a domestic quota of 70,000 tons, making it necessary to draw on the previous year's reserve. The revenue to the sugar industry was, therefore, considerably greater than the crop figure would indicate, even taking into consideration the better prices in 1936. The 1934-35 crop totaled 691,000 tons but that included 100,000 tons of reserve, which brought in no revenue. Alcohol production totaled 59,384,854 proof liters, against 54,978,000 proof liters in the same period of 1935.

Production of other export crops was in general not much greater in quantity than in 1935 but substantially greater in value. Copra production was only slightly greater than in 1935 and exports were about 10 percent greater in volume but about 31 percent greater in value. Coconut oil exports were slightly reduced in quantity but increased about 13 percent in value. Copra cake and meal and desiccated coconut exports increased moderately in volume and value. Abaca production decreased about 14 percent, while exports decreased 8 percent in volume but increased about 50 percent in value. The small tobacco crop of 1935, together with disturbances in the principal foreign market, and decreased demand in the second best market, led to a 32 percent decrease in the volume of leaf tobacco exports, with a more moderate decline in value. The tobacco crop harvested in 1936 was nearly normal, however. Cigar production was greatly reduced due to reduced demand from the United States. Lumber exports were apparently nearly 30 percent greater than in 1935 and with the domestic market also good, mills were working to capacity in the later part of the year and some of them double shifts. Production and exportation of embroideries, cordage and pearl buttons was somewhat lower than in 1935, but exports of hats improved.

Gold production increased about 37 percent and iron ore nearly 100 percent. Both are expected to show further increases in 1937 and there may be a moderate production of chromite, manganese and copper.

Production for the domestic market improved in most lines, with cement production showing an increase of about 14 percent due to greater building activity. Cigar and cigarette production for the domestic market increased only about 2 percent, doing very little toward making up for the decline in exports of cigars. The four manufacturers of canvas rubber-soled shoes increased their production nearly 25 percent and are now supplying practically the entire domestic requirements. Leather shoe factories also had a good year, sales increasing by about 20 percent. Manufacturers of soap, vegetable lard and margarine were busy throughout the year, in spite of losing most of their American market. Three new companies were organized to make soaps, perfumes and vegetable lard, but none of them had started business by the end of the year. A company was organized at the end of the year to can tuna fish.

There was a good market for most imported goods, although cotton textiles moved rather slowly during most of the year. Total imports of cotton textiles were substantially lower than in 1935, but the reduction was partly made up by heavier imports of rayon from Japan. Imports of cotton cloth from the United States continued to decline, in spite of the Japanese quota agreement. The demand for cotton textiles increased strongly in the latter part of the year but advancing local prices never quite caught up to American mill prices and the inability of American mills to offer prompt or near delivery was an added deterrent to business being placed. Japanese competition continued keen during most of the period, but was largely withdrawn at the end of the year, promising a much better market for American goods in the first half of 1937 if the mills are able to take advantage of the opportunity.

Mine and building activity brought about a marked increase in the sale of machinery and iron and steel products. Japanese competition in nails, wire and galvanized sheets increased during the year but was suddenly discontinued in December, when Japanese prices were increased as much as 50 percent. European prices on these products also rose sharply leaving the field to the United States at the end of the year.

General prosperity created a good market for automobiles and accessories, flour and other foodstuffs, electrical equipment, paints, toiletries and a variety of other goods. Automobile sales were up 17 percent, truck sales up 15 percent and radio registrations up nearly 25 percent. Sales tax receipts indicate an increase of about 23 percent in total sales recorded.

Export cargoes were about 30 percent greater than in 1935 due mainly to increased sugar shipments but partly to logs, lumber, iron ore and other commodities. Inter-island freight and passenger movement was very good throughout the year.

Railroad carloadings did not increase in spite of the larger sugar crop, due to continued competition from other forms of transportation. Scheduled airplane services to Baguio and Paracale were increasingly popular. The Manila-Iloilo-Davao service was suspended, following the loss of a plane in July, the first serious accident to a transport plane since scheduled services were started in 1933. This service, as well as the Manila-Iloilo service, will be resumed early in 1937 with an amphibian plane of improved model.

Exports, not including gold, totaled ₱272,896,106, an increase of 45 percent over 1935. The increase was due partly to sugar exports, which were nearly twice as great as the previous year, but exports of abaca, coconut products, lumber and timber, hats, cutch and maguey were also substantially greater. Cordage, embroideries, pearl buttons, leaf tobacco and cigars were exported in reduced volume and value in 1936.

Exports to the United States were 43 percent greater than in 1935 and made up about 79 percent of total exports, against 80 percent the previous year. Exports of sugar to the United States nearly doubled while exports of other products, notably coconut products, hemp and lumber, increased about 21 percent. Exports to Japan were 57 percent ahead of 1935, owing chiefly to increased shipments of iron ore, logs and hemp, and made up 6.15 percent of total exports, compared with 5.69 percent the year before. Exports to other Oriental Countries were slightly increased and exports to Europe were up 61 percent, due to heavier shipments of copra in the first half of the year and lumber throughout the year and to better prices for abaca and copra cake.

Imports totaled ₱202,252,349, or 18 percent greater than in 1935. They were slightly under the 1930 figure but much greater than in any more recent year. They increased in nearly every category, excepting cotton cloth and printed matter.

Imports from the United States were 13 percent better than in 1935 and made up 61 percent of total imports, compared with 64 percent in 1935 and an average of about 63 percent for the past ten years. Imports of cotton textiles from the United States were reduced but most other products, notably machinery, iron and steel products, electrical equipment, automobiles and tires, were received in greater volume. Imports from Japan increased nine percent and made up 13.12 percent of total imports, a slight decrease from the 14.23 percent in 1935. Rayon textiles and canned sardines account for a considerable part of the increase. There are indications that Japanese competition in this market will be less keen in the first few months of 1937. Imports from all European countries were substantially increased, notably the Netherlands, Germany, Great Britain and Belgium. Heavy imports of flour from Australia and Canada increased the value of imports from those countries.

The visible balance of merchandise trade in 1936 was favorable in the amount of ₱70,643,757. If gold exports are included, the favorable balance is increased to about ₱112,000,000, and with sugar benefit payments considered as equivalent to sugar exports, to ₱118,000,000, a record figure. The favorable balance was due as usual to a large favorable balance with the United States, which amounted in 1936 to ₱92,056,129, plus ₱42,000,000 of gold. Trade with Oriental Countries showed an unfavorable balance of ₱28,689,578, of which ₱9,742,258 was due to trade with Japan. With Europe and the rest of the world, there was a favorable balance of ₱6,960,924. In 1935, the favorable balance with the United States was ₱41,138,073 (plus ₱26,000,000 of gold), the unfavorable balance with Oriental Countries ₱25,248,500 (of which ₱13,624,220 was from trade with Japan) and the favorable balance with Europe and the rest of the world only ₱1,152,489.

The National Assembly in its first regular session passed a record number of bills, including several revenue bills increasing existing taxes and creating new ones. Among the taxes increased were the inheritance tax, income tax, firearm license fees, tax on mining production, tax on retail leaf tobacco dealers, taxes on gasoline and lubricating oil and motor vehicles license fees. New taxes include an amusement tax and a privilege tax on brokers and market vendors. The duty and excise tax on beer were increased, the former subject to American approval. A bill was passed giving the President of the Philippines the right to increase duties by a maximum of 400 percent and decrease them by a maximum of 75 percent, by executive order. This also awaits American approval. Provision was made for a comprehensive census in 1937. A number of labor bills were passed, including a bill providing for a Court of Industrial Relations, and one fixing a minimum wage for Government employees. Agriculture was the beneficiary of bills providing for warehouses for copra and tobacco, making appropriations for extermination of pests and diseases, creating a livestock promotion fund and a buntal fiber stabilization fund and creating a National Produce Exchange to facilitate trading in agricultural products. A new comprehensive mining law and a Bureau of Mines were provided to regulate mining and a Securities Commission to protect investors. Aviation was encouraged by an appropriation for airmail contracts. An export tax was imposed on shells and an embargo on buntal fiber. The President was authorized to negotiate with the President of the United States toward the holding of an economic and trade conference. A bill creating a Government-owned National Merchandising Corporation to improve the competitive position of Filipino retailers failed of approval, as did a bill to impose a 10 percent tax on certain luxuries, including automobiles.

The volume of exports may be expected to increase moderately in 1937. Sugar exports will be the same as in 1936 and copra and abaca production is apparently not likely to increase very notably in the first half of 1937, although some increase may be expected in the last half of the year. Lumber and ore shipments will probably increase in 1937 and cigar and leaf tobacco exports will probably not go any lower. Prices are high at the end of the year and if they hold at anywhere near the present level the value of exports should show a substantial increase and, including gold, might even approach the 1929 figure. Prices of some of the principal imports increased rapidly at the end of the year. Imports in 1937 are likely to increase moderately in quantity and more substantially in value and the very heavy favorable balance shown in 1936 will probably be reduced. Government revenues and expenditures will probably be balanced at around ₱80,000,000. Banks may find increased use for their resources, with the higher prices of both imported and native products. Although the Philippines are dependent to a greater extent than most countries on conditions in foreign markets, making predictions difficult, it seems probable that the Islands will experience another year of prosperity in 1937. The results of the Trade Conference planned to be held in Washington during the year will exert a psychological influence. *

FOREIGN TRADE

With value of imports and exports exceptionally heavy in December, according to the Bureau of Customs, in spite of the shortage of ships, Philippine foreign trade reached the highest total since 1929, with a balance of exports over imports larger than in any previous year. Exports, including gold, totaled about ₱314,000,000, and sugar benefit payments, equivalent to exportation of sugar, brought the figure to about ₱320,896,000, or only about ₱12,000,000 under the record established in 1929. The increase over 1935 exports, including gold and sugar benefit payments, is about 32 percent. Imports totaled ₱202,252,349, which is below the figure for 1930, but exceeds that for any subsequent year and exceeds 1935 by 18 percent. Excluding gold and benefit payments, values of imports and exports in the past six years have been as follows:

	Imports	Exports	Balance
1931	₱198,357,437	₱207,944,148	₱ 9,586,711
1932	158,790,170	190,676,161	31,885,991
1933	134,722,926	211,542,105	76,819,179
1934	167,214,221	220,807,271	53,593,050
1935	171,047,699	188,491,360	17,443,661
1936	202,252,349	272,896,106	70,643,757

The visible balance of merchandise trade (excluding gold) in 1936 was favorable in the amount of ₱70,643,757. If gold is included, being exported as a Philippine product rather than as treasure, the balance is about ₱112,000,000 (gold exports being estimated at about ₱42,000,000).

The favorable balance has been due every year since 1921 to a large favorable balance with the United States, which more than offsets an unfavorable balance with oriental countries. There is usually a moderate favorable balance with Europe. This was again the case in 1936, when trade with the United States showed a favorable balance of ₱92,056,129, plus about ₱42,000,000 of gold. Trade with Oriental countries showed an unfavorable balance of ₱28,689,578, of which ₱9,742,258 was due to trade with Japan. With Europe, there was a favorable balance of ₱6,470,986, with Canada an unfavorable balance of ₱1,115,986, and with other countries, mainly South American and African, a favorable balance of ₱1,605,924. In 1935, the favorable balance with the United States was ₱41,138,073 (plus ₱26,000,000 for gold), the unfavorable balance with Oriental countries ₱25,248,500 (of which ₱13,624,220 was from trade with Japan) and the favorable balance with the rest of the world only ₱1,152,489. The adverse trade balance with Japan was substantially reduced, exports to that country being ₱6,067,543 greater than in 1935, while imports from Japan increased only ₱2,185,581.

Exports to the United States (not including gold) were about 43 percent greater than in 1935, due largely to increased exports of sugar. Exports of products other than sugar to the United States were about 21 percent greater than in 1935, however, due to increased value of shipments of abaca and coconut products (chiefly owing to higher prices). About 79 percent of total exports went to the United States in 1936, against 80 percent the previous year.

Exports to Japan, the second largest market, were 57 percent ahead of 1935, owing chiefly to iron ore, logs and hemp, and made up 6.15 percent of total exports, compared with 5.69 percent the year before. Exports to all other Oriental Countries, excepting Hong Kong, were moderately increased, but the aggregate made up only 2.17 percent of total exports, against three percent in 1935. Exports to Europe were up 61 percent, due to heavier purchases of copra in the first half of the year and lumber throughout the year, and to better prices for abaca and copra cake. All European countries participated in the increase excepting Spain, where political conditions brought about a practical cessation of imports from the Philippines in the latter part of the year. Exports to the Netherlands were nearly eight times as great as in 1935, and to Italy nearly ten times as great, both, largely on account of copra. Exports to Germany doubled and to France, Belgium and Great Britain increased 50 to 75 percent. Sweden fell off slightly but Denmark became an important customer for the first time.

Sugar exports totaled ₱123,874,644 in 1936, or nearly double the ₱65,981,359 for 1935. Exports of abaca were reduced in quantity but up about 50 percent in value. Copra exports were up about 10 percent in quantity and 30 percent in value, while coconut oil shipments were slightly lower in quantity but up about 12 percent in value. Volume and value were greater in the case of copra cake and meal, desiccated coconut, lumber and timber, hats, cutch and maguey. Cordage, embroideries, buttons, leaf tobacco and cigars were exported in reduced volume and value in 1936.

Imports from the United States were about 13 percent over those for 1935 and made up 61 percent of total imports, compared with 64 percent in 1935. The average for the past ten years is 63 percent. Imports of cotton textiles from the United States were reduced but most other products, notably machinery, iron and steel products, electrical goods, automobiles and tires, were received in greater volume. Imports from the United States were heavy in December, in spite of a shortage of shipping, but the effects of that shortage may be expected to be felt in the first quarter of 1937, offsetting the otherwise improved competitive position of most American products.

Imports from Japan increased about nine percent and made up 13.12 percent of total imports, a decline from the 14.23 percent in 1935. Increased imports of rayon textiles, canned sardines, wire and nails, flour and a variety of other goods from Japan were noted, but imports of cotton textiles were reduced. There were indications that Japanese competition in this market might be less keen in the first part of 1937. Among other Oriental Countries, imports were notably increased from Australia (flour, butter, condensed milk), French Indo-China (rice), Siam (rice), and Hong Kong (cotton textiles). From British East Indies (sugar packing), the increase was slight and from Netherland India (mainly oil), there was a slight reduction. Imports from China fell off slightly, in spite of considerably increased imports of cotton cloth in the first half of 1936. Aggregate imports from Oriental Countries, including Japan, were 24 percent greater than in 1935 and made up 25.42 percent of total imports, against 24.33 percent in 1935.

Imports from Belgium (iron and steel products), Germany (fertilizers, iron and steel, machinery, etc.), Great Britain (cotton goods, machinery, etc.) and the Netherlands (dairy products) increased notably, from France more moderately. From Switzerland (cotton cloth, milk), there was a slight decline. Aggregate imports from Europe were 36 percent greater than in 1935 and made up 11.69 percent of the total, against 10.14 percent in 1935.

Imports from Canada (flour, insulated wire, chemicals, paper) increased about 34 percent and made up 1.19 percent of the total, against 1.04 percent the previous year. From Other Countries, mainly South America and Africa, imports increased about 22 percent, due largely to canned beef from Uruguay.

Imports of wheat flour, automobile tires, electrical machinery and apparatus, machinery, iron and steel products, dairy products and paints were 30 to 45 percent greater than in 1935, according to Customs returns. Rice imports were up nearly 1,000 percent. Imports of most other goods were increased from 10 to 30 percent, major exceptions being cotton cloth, mineral oils and tobacco products. Imports of mineral oils were heavy in December and it is believed that actual imports for the year were at least 10 percent greater than in 1935. Sales of cigarettes were up 25 percent in 1936, imports were apparently increased about as much and it is difficult to find any explanation for the reduction indicated by the Customs figure.

The above export statistics do not include gold and silver, which were exported to the United States in 1935 and 1936 as follows:

	1935	1936
Bullion, ounces	655,171	950,093
Approx. value, pesos	24,767,116	34,733,853
Gold ore, kilos	841,308	4,160,741
Approx. value, pesos	761,239	3,325,785

The bullion averages 52 to 53 percent gold and 43 to 45 percent silver.

Gold exports appear to have been under-valued in the Customs statistics. Actually, they are believed to have amounted to at least ₱42,000,000.

SUGAR

The export quota for 1936 was originally placed tentatively at 965,000 short tons, raw value. It was later increased, but not much of the increase was used, due to the short crop and the fact that any excess over 952,000 tons commercial weight, roughly equivalent to about 966,000 tons raw value, was dutiable under the Tydings-McDuffie Law. The domestic quota was set at 70,000 tons and the reserve quota at 30,000 tons, commercial weight. Actual production in the 1935-36 season totaled only about 952,000 tons commercial weight, due to unfavorable weather conditions in 1935, and the reserve, which amounted to 99,000 tons at the beginning of the season, was reduced to less than 30,000 tons by the end of the crop year, October 31, 1936.

Actual production in the 1935-36 season was about 40 percent greater than the 691,000 tons in 1934-35. The monetary return was nearly double, however. The export price was considerably better, the monthly average being ₱8.35 per picul in 1936, against ₱7.30 in 1935, and the average domestic price was also better. More important was the fact that all of the 1935-36 crop was sold, in addition to which a large part of the previous year's reserve was sold at a good price. The 1934-35 crop included 100,000 tons of reserve which brought no revenue. The total value of exports in 1936 (including about ₱4,000,000 representing 1937 quota sugar) was ₱123,874,644, which compares with ₱65,981,359 in 1935 and ₱130,909,161 in 1934. Benefit payments, equivalent to exports, totaled ₱24,931,112 in the full year 1935 and ₱5,788,198 in 1936.

Total volume of export in the calendar year was 508,974 long tons in 1935 and 899,282 long tons in 1936, according to records of the Philippine Sugar Association. This included 56,353 tons of refined in the former year and 46,605 tons in the latter.

Export quota sugar prices were firm throughout the first half of the year, during which most of the crop was sold. Starting the year at ₱7.50 per picul, the price rose to ₱9.15 at the beginning of May, falling gradually to around ₱8.00 at the end of the year. Domestic sugar quotations were slightly over export quotations at the beginning of the year, when the centrals were milling only for export, but during most of the year they ran a little behind. They were steady throughout the year at ₱8.00 to ₱8.20. New crop export quota sugar was first quoted at ₱8.00 in October.

For 1937, an export quota of 952,000 short tons, commercial weight, of duty-free sugar has been allocated on the basis of the mill and planter coefficients set for last year. The Jones-Costigan quota is considerably larger, but no arrangement for the allocation of the dutiable quota will be made prior to August, when it may be better determined whether exportation of dutiable sugar will be practicable. The probability of shipment of dutiable sugar to the continental United States depends on the relation between profit on duty-paid sugar and the speculative price for reserve sugar held in the Philippines.

The domestic sugar quota for 1937 is set at 90,985 short tons, commercial weight, and the reserve at 58,523 short tons. In addition, 6,000 to 10,000 tons, representing the difference between the duty-free export quota and the Jones-Costigan quota, may be milled as a special reserve for potential exportation. This amount is uncertain, due to the varying margin between Commercial weight and raw value. The new crop appears sufficient to fill all these quotas, with the exception that the reserve quota may not be entirely filled in Central Luzon. The total amount of sugar milled from the 1936-37 crop will, therefore, be close to 1,100,000 short tons, commercial weight, or nearly 150,000 tons more than last year. Much of the increase will not produce revenue, however, and the actual revenue from sugar will probably be no greater than in 1936, including sales of reserve and benefit payments in that year.

According to Domestic Sugar Administrator Vargas, about 15,000 short tons of the 1935-36 crop remained at the end of 1936 to meet the domestic demand. Since the 1936 domestic quota was only 70,000 short tons, the increase of nearly 21,000 tons in the domestic quota for 1937 should be ample to meet any increase in demand. It is hoped, however, that increased prosperity and lower sugar prices may encourage greater domestic consumption.

Molasses and alcohol production were increased in 1936, due to increased grinding of cane. Molasses exports were about the same as in 1935, when they totaled 45,000 tons. Production of distilled spirits in the first eleven months of 1936 totaled 59,384,854 proof liters, compared with 54,978,331 proof liters in the same period of 1935. Part of this was disposed of as distilled spirits, as follows:

	Proof Liters
	1935	1936
Produced	54,978,331	59,384,854
Removed for export	425,326	1,092,115
Removed for domestic consumption	4,307,965	4,835,391
Sold to the U.S. Army and Navy	45,305	59,375

The balance was sold as denatured alcohol, as follows:

Removed locally for industrial purposes	3,900,640	3,700,019
Exported for industrial purposes
Removed locally for motive power purposes	47,812,005	51,563,240

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration in the Philippines was finally liquidated about the middle of 1936, after making benefit payments totaling P30,719,000 as compensation for the limitation of production from the 1934-35 crop.

The contract freight rate for sugar shipments to the Atlantic Coast of the United States was set at $8.00 per ton for the year beginning October 1, 1936. It became apparent before the end of the year, however, that it was not to the advantage of the ship operators to make space available at that rate, and sugar exporters were forced to charter ships at higher rates, $10.50 to $12.00 a ton, to handle a considerable proportion of their shipments. This forced them to reduce their quotations for sugar somewhat in the latter part of December.

COCONUT PRODUCTS

Coconut products again made up the second biggest export group, as in every year since 1928. Exports increased moderately in volume and substantially in value, the total value of exports of copra, coconut oil, cake and meal and desiccated coconut in 1936 being about 20 percent greater than in 1935. Volume and value in the two years are estimated as follows:

	1935		1936
	M. Tons	Pesos	M. Tons	Pesos
Copra	256,683	22,135,993	281,370	28,981,110
Coconut oil	163,824	24,561,537	158,802	27,598,200
Copra cake and meal	103,031	3,289,883	110,511	3,735,272
Desiccated coconut	34,729	7,929,038	36,064	8,958,592
Total		57,916,451		69,273,174

Domestic factories using coconut oil in the manufacture of soap, vegetable lard and margarine for domestic use and exportation were active throughout the year and their production is estimated to have been only about eight percent less than in 1935, in spite of the fact that exportation of vegetable lard to the United States was cut down by a revision in the American Excise Tax Law. Prices of copra, coconut oil and cake and meal again fluctuated widely, but the market was very strong in the last half of the year and the average for the year was higher than in recent years.

Total copra production for the Islands is estimated at 614,812 metric tons in 1936, or four percent under the 641,507 tons estimated for 1935.

Copra production was fairly heavy in the first six months of 1936, arrivals at Manila and Cebu, the two principal manufacturing and exporting centers, amounting to 3,736,000 sacks in the 1936 period, compared with 3,051,000 sacks in the same period of 1935. American demand was only moderate and European buying dominated the market. Only 49 percent of total exports of copra went to the United States in the first half of 1936, compared with 84 percent in the same period of 1935.

The trend of prices was easy during the period and the average was about ₱2.00 lower than in the same period of 1935. The market opened the year strong with resecada advancing from ₱9.25 per hundred kilos at the beginning of January to ₱10.75 toward the end of the month. The attractive prices brought out large supplies of copra, causing a steady drop to ₱8.50 at the beginning of March. Renewed European buying forced the price up to ₱9.50 at the end of March, but unexpectedly large arrivals, with a weak oil market, brought about a steady decline to ₱7.00 at the end of April. Reduced arrivals and good European demand caused a gradual advance to ₱8.35 at the end of May and the market continued at about that level in June.

The situation was markedly different in the last half of the year. Arrivals increased somewhat less than seasonally and for the six months period amounted to only 4,279,000 sacks, compared with 4,893,000 sacks in the same period of 1935. Arrivals were particularly disappointing in November and December. European buying, which had dominated the market in the first half of 1936, fell off in July and was an inconsiderable factor during the remainder of the year, while American demand increased strongly, possibly due in part to the new American Revenue Act, which imposed an excise tax on tallow and various oilseeds not covered by the previous Act, thus diverting them to Europe to a greater extent and improving the competitive position of Philippine copra in the United States. The drought in the United States was also an important factor. From August on, export went mainly to the United States and in the last quarter almost entirely so. For the full year, exports to the United States made up 175,906 metric tons out of total exports of 281,370 metric tons, or about 63 percent. In 1935, they made up 211,386 metric tons, out of a total of 256,683 metric tons, or about 82 percent. Total exports for the year were thus about ten percent greater than in 1935, while exports to the United States were about 22 percent lower. Value of total exports was up nearly 30 percent.

The increased American demand for copra and oil brought about a firmer market and as it became clear that copra arrivals were running considerably below expectations, the price advanced rapidly, particularly in the last quarter of the year. The average price for the month increased from ₱7.82 per hundred kilos for resecada in June to ₱9.04 in July, ₱10.21 in August, ₱12.50 in September, and ₱14.25 in October. By the end of November, it had increased to ₱16.00 and throughout December it advanced steadily to ₱20.50 at the end of the year with some transactions going through as high as ₱21.00. There were at all times more buyers than sellers in the last quarter and with fancy prices offered in the United States for spot oil, mills were compelled to bid for copra, to the advantage of holders with accumulated stocks. American mills also increased their offers but found it difficult to obtain delivery at the end of the year on account of shortage of shipping space and the difficulty of getting ships unloaded on the Pacific Coast. It is not quite clear to what extent the prices of copra and oil at the end of the year were affected by the shipping situation, but the principal factors seem to be the general increase in consumption of oils, a shortage of oils in the United States, and the disappointing production in the Philippines.

Copra stocks in Manila and Cebu and other provincial ports at the end of the year totalled only 51,962 metric tons, a considerable reduction from the 87,254 metric tons at the end of 1935. Production is expected to be relatively light during the first half of 1937, particularly in Southern Luzon, where a typhoon in November appears to have done a good deal of damage. It is also believed by some authorities that the bearing capacity of the trees has been impaired during the past few months by the practice of harvesting green nuts to take advantage of relatively good prices. Sales at the end of the year were only for immediate delivery, buyers being reluctant to make future commitments at prevailing prices.

Coconut oil exports in 1936 totaled 158,802 metric tons, about three percent under the 163,824 metric tons exported in 1935. The value increased nearly 13 percent, however. Exports went almost entirely to the United States, as usual. Mills were active throughout the year but found some difficulty in buying copra advantageously due to the tendency of oil prices to lag behind copra prices. Stocks declined, amounting to only 9,909 metric tons at the end of the year, compared with 14,963 metric tons at the beginning.

Manufacturers of coconut oil products were also active throughout the year, producing soap, lard and margarine for the domestic and neighboring markets, extending as far as Java and India. Their American market was reduced, however, by changes in the American Revenue laws which made the excise tax applicable to all products of coconut oil, whether or not the first processing took place in the United States. It is estimated that about 34,534 tons of oil was consumed locally in the manufacture of these products, against 27,669 tons in 1935. Three new companies were organized to make soap, perfume and possibly lard and margarine, but none of them had started production by the end of the year.

The market was dull but fairly steady at 18 to 19 centavos per kilo during the first quarter of the year, falling to 15 centavos in April and May. The unwillingness of local mills to sell, in view of the stronger copra market, caused a gradual but steady increase to 18-1/2 centavos at the end of July. The advance accelerated in August, with increasing American demand, and by the end of the year the price had reached 37 centavos per kilo, or double the price at the end of 1935.

Copra cake and meal, the former being taken by European buyers and the latter preferred in the United States, were in good demand throughout the year. Exports totaled 110,511 metric tons, of which the United States took 53,163 metric tons, or a little less than half. In 1935, exports totaled 103,031 metric tons, of which the United States took 32,689 metric tons, or about 30 percent. European demand dominated the market during a large part of the year, particularly between March and July, American buyers being unable to compete with rising European quotations. A sudden increase in demand from the United States, presumably due to drought conditions, caused a sharp increase in price in July which Europe could not meet, and European purchases were negligible during the balance of the year. In the last two months, there were a few sales to Europe, even though prices were not competitive, due to the difficulty of making shipments to the United States. Stocks declined from 8,495 tons at the beginning of the year to 4,319 tons at the end.

The market was easy during the first two months, the price of cake falling from ₱30.00 per metric ton at the beginning of the year to ₱23.00 at the end of February. It was strong the rest of the year, due to good demand from both Europe and the United States.

and to reluctance of mills to make commitments. The cake price rose to P39.50 by the end of June and increased to P41.00 in July. The latter quotation quickly became nominal, however, as the price of meal increased rapidly to $28.00 per short ton, c. i. f. Pacific Coast, equivalent to P51.50 per metric ton, f. o. b. Manila, by the end of July. The Pacific Coast market continued its advance to $31.00 by the end of August, eased off to $27.00 but closed the year strong at $30.50. It is not generally believed that the demand is likely to continue at the same rate and some business with Europe is expected during the first quarter of 1937.

Desiccated coconut exports increased in 1936, amounting to 36,064 metric tons, compared with 34,729 metric tons in 1935. Exports were very good during most of the year but fell off somewhat in the last quarter, due to the difficulty of purchasing nuts and the increase in freight cost caused by the shipping strike, which made it necessary to route shipments through Canadian ports. Reduced production is expected in the first quarter of 1937, unless the supply of nuts increases.

An act passed by the National Assembly in its 1936 session directed the Philippine National Bank and the National Development Company to establish, operate and maintain warehouses for copra. Another act provided for a National Produce Exchange to facilitate trading in agricultural products, including copra.

Statistics for 1935 and 1936 are as follows:

ABACA (MANILA HEMP)

Abaca was again the fourth largest export commodity, in value, being exceeded by sugar, coconut products and gold. The value of abaca exports increases substantially in 1936, however, amounting to P34,177,197, compared with P22,947,933 in 1935 and P17,323,136 in 1934. The value of abaca exports has increased steadily since 1932 and the 1936 figure was the largest since 1930.

The 1936 increase was due to better prices rather than to greater volume of exports, volume being about eight percent lower in 1936. Exports by markets in the two years were as follows; in bales:

	1935	1936
United States and Canada	373,168	309,747
United Kingdom	336,174	318,216
Continental Europe	165,728	177,250
Japan	518,015	480,205
Australia and New Zealand	31,178	19,472
Other countries	24,700	28,953
Total	1,448,963	1,333,843

Although the United States is only the third best market in volume taken, it probably led in value, as the American market takes the more expensive grades.

Domestic mill consumption adds about 60,000 bales a year, mostly unbaled hemp.

Production fell off in 1936, as expected, balings amounting to only 1,295,010 bales, against 1,480,396 in 1935 and 1,441,202 in 1934. Stocks were estimated at 147,662 bales at the end of the year, or considerably under the 191,121 bales at the beginning. Production is expected to be about the same in 1937 as in 1936.

The strong market of the last half of 1935 did not carry over into 1936. Balings did not fall off to the extent anticipated, in the first quarter of the year, and all foreign markets were stagnant, with the result that prices eased off during the first four months. Holders generally were unwilling to sell at the lower prices offered and the market was inactive, though there were some sales by holders tired of waiting for an upturn. A notable decrease in balings in April and May, together with increasing interest on the part of foreign markets, particularly Europe, caused prices to advance sharply toward the end of May. The market continued strong throughout the rest of the year, closing with a notably firm tone as demand from all export markets increased in December and balings continued moderate. Holders were persistently optimistic and inactivity developed with every recession in prices during the year. A popular grade, J-2, fell from ₱12.00 per picul at the beginning of the year to ₱10.25 at the end of April, rose to ₱13.25 at the end of September and closed the year at ₱16.00. Manila prices on the principal grades at the beginning and end of the year were as follows:

Grade	January 1	December 31
CD	₱ 23.50	₱ 28.00
E	20.50	23.00
F	19.25	21.00
I	18.50	19.00
J-1	15.75	16.50
G	13.75	16.75
H	10.25	15.50
J-2	12.00	16.00
K	9.75	15.25
L-1	8.75	14.75
L-2	7.50	13.00

Freight rates were increased ₱1.50 per bale to the United States and ₱1.00 per bale to Japan, effective May 1. Rates to the United Kingdom and Continental European ports were increased 16 shillings per ton of 20 cwt., effective October 1. Further rate increases are believed likely, on account of the shortage of ships.

Cordage exports declined, due to the fact that the quota limit had been reached in 1935 and new shipments to the United States could not be resumed until the new quota year, beginning May 1, 1936. About 65 percent of the 6,000,000-pound quota for the year ending April 30, 1937, had been shipped to the United States by the end of the year. Shipments to other countries were somewhat increased in 1936. Exports in 1935 and 1936 were as follows:

	1935		1936
	Kilos	Pesos	Kilos	Pesos
United States	3,601,221	1,257,918	1,777,203	889,383
Total	7,954,407	2,323,629	6,602,454	2,317,739

RICE

The market was firm at the beginning of the year, as it became evident that the crop was far from adequate to fill domestic requirements. At the beginning of the year, luxury grades sold for ₱6.10 to ₱6.30 per cavan of 57-1/2 kilos and macans for ₱5.75 to ₱5.95. Luxury grade palay sold at ₱3.00 and ordinary palay at ₱2.85. The price moved up to ₱7.10 to ₱7.15 for luxury grades and ₱6.70 to ₱6.90 for macans in April, with palay at ₱3.10 to ₱3.30. The organization of the National Rice and Corn Corporation in April checked the advance, as that organization immediately commenced the importation of rice, which was offered for sale at ₱6.24 per cavan wholesale and 28 centavos per ganta retail. A brief flurry followed the decision of the Collector of Customs in April that the National Rice and Corn Corporation would have to pay duty since it was selling imported Rice at a profit. That decision was soon reversed, however, on the grounds that the corporation is government-owned, that profit is not its primary purpose and that such profits as are made will be used to advance its primary aim of stabilizing rice prices.

Prices were steady during the rest of the year, at ₱7.10 to ₱7.40 for luxury grades and ₱6.50 to ₱6.75 for macans, with palay at ₱3.05 to ₱3.40. There was a decline toward the end of the year, when new crop rice began to appear on the market and the National Rice and Corn Corporation, in September, dropped its retail price to 26 centavos a ganta. New crop palay was sold as low as ₱2.10 per cavan in October, but the Corporation took effective means to forestall efforts to depress prices by offering to purchase palay at producing centers at ₱2.25 to ₱2.50, depending on the grade. The year closed with palay selling for ₱2.25 to ₱2.40 per cavan, luxury rice at ₱5.45 to ₱6.50 and macans at ₱4.85 to ₱5.40.

The palay crop for the year ended June 30, 1936, was estimated by the Bureau of Commerce at 43,000,000 cavans of 44 kilos, equivalent to 21,500,000 cavans (of 57-1/2 kilos) of cleaned rice. This compares with an estimate of nearly 46,000,000 cavans of palay in 1934-35. The 1935-36 crop was about 4,000,000 cavans below normal domestic requirements and nearly 2,000,000 cavans of rice was imported. Rains in September and October relieved fears that the 1936-37 crop would be another short one, and it appears probable that the new crop will yield as much as 47,000,000 cavans, or approximately sufficient for normal domestic requirements.

One of the first measures adopted by the New Commonwealth Government was the appointment of a commission, with Honorable Manuel Roxas as Chairman, to study the rice question. This commission recommended, among other things, the formation of a National Rice and Corn Corporation, as a subsidiary of the National Development Company, with an authorized capital of P4,000,000, of which P2,000,000 should be paid in. This Corporation was formed early in April, the National Development Company supplying P1,000,000 from its own resources and P1,000,000 obtained by selling additional stock to the Government. Its purposes is to stabilize rice and palay prices by purchasing palay from the growers during the harvest season, when prices are ordinarily low, and selling rice, either domestic or imported, during periods of scarcity and high prices. During 1936, its activities were confined largely to importing rice duty free, and distributing it through commercial channels at fixed prices, thus preventing profiteering that might have come as a result of the short crop. Toward the end of the year, however, it demonstrated its ability to forestall efforts of buyers to depress palay prices during the harvesting season, by offering to purchase palay at producing centers at P2.25 to P2.50. A comparatively moderate amount of rice was purchased, but sufficient to prevent private buyers from driving prices down to a point much below the level set.

The capital of the National Rice and Corn Corporation was probably at least doubled by the sale of duty-free imported rice at a price considerably above current Saigon prices. It may be expected that this capital will be an important factor in stabilizing rice prices in the future, particularly if effective steps are taken to prevent too rapid increases in production. At the present time, the principal problem of the National Rice and Corn Corporation seems to be to lease or otherwise obtain sufficient warehouse space to store all the palay that may be offered to it. Officials report that progress along that line is encouraging.

The Roxas Commission also recommended that a tax of three centavos per sack be paid on all rice turned out by power-driven mills. The proceeds would go to increase the funds of the National Rice and Corn Corporation, to be used in stabilizing rice prices. This tax has not yet been imposed but will be considered by the National Assembly in its next session, in October (1937).

TOBACCO

With increased planting due to excellent prices for the small 1935 crop and with favorable weather conditions, the 1936 tobacco crop in the Cagayan Valley amounted to about 380,000 to 400,000 quintals, which was about 50 percent greater than the 1935 crop though slightly below what is considered normal production. Quality was about average. Prices, which had been unusually high in 1935 due to the small crop and the necessity of the largest exporter to fill contracts regardless of cost, fell off rapidly between February and April when it became clear that the 1936 crop would be a fairly good one. It is difficult to make exact price comparisons due to the absence of adequate grading standards, but the price level during the last half of 1936 was apparently around 50 percent below that for the same period of 1935. Farmers were reluctant to accept these reduced prices, but with the comparatively good supply and the lack of export demand, it became clear that there was no likelihood of an increase and most of the crop was in the hands of dealers by the end of November.

Floods in the Cagayan Valley at the beginning of December caused serious damage to seedbeds in Isabela. To some extent, it may be possible to replace destroyed seedlings, but it seems certain that a very considerable replanting of seeds will be necessary. This will make part of the crop much later and more vulnerable to weather conditions. In the province of Cagayan, there was some destruction of transplanted plants but not much damage to seed-beds. Transplanting continued shortly after the floods subsided and with the earth enriched by deposits from the floods, an increased crop in Cagayan is possible. Much depends on weather conditions but it seems almost certain that the 1937 crop in the Cagayan Valley will be below normal. Prices of Cagayan Valley tobacco increased about 30 percent, as a result of the flood, but it soon became clear that damage to tobacco in warehouses was not as great as at first believed, and with demand continuing moderate much of the gain in prices was lost.

The crop in other provinces including La Union, Pangasinan and Panay, is estimated to have been somewhere in the neighborhood of 400,000 quintals, or about the same as the previous year. Prices were steady to firm throughout the year, with the lower grades of Pangasinan and La Union tobacco particularly in demand for the manufacture of very cheap cigars by small independent producers for local consumption. The outlook at present is for an increased crop in La Union and Pangasinan in 1937, although it is too early to make any predictions.

Exports of leaf tobacco fell off sharply in 1936, amounting to only 12,545,690 kilos, a reduction of about 32 percent from the 1935 figure of 18,517,000 kilos. Exports were moderate in the first half of 1936 due to limited supplies and in the latter part of the year due to lack of foreign demand, with Spain out of the market most of the time. There was a fairly large amount exported in December to France, with other ports optional, and it will doubtless go to Spain if conditions permit. It is apparent, however, that exports will be at a relatively low level so long as conditions in that principal market continue so uncertain, and prospects for export trade in 1937 are not promising. The Japanese and Korean monopolies took a large shipment in February but were out of the market for the rest of the year, aside from a very moderate shipment in December. Exports of scraps to the United States totaled 1,000,000 kilos in 1936, or about 25 percent less than in 1935.

The manufacture of cigars fell off badly in 1936, due to the sharp decrease in exports to the United States, which fell off to 164,905,000 in 1936, a decrease of over 20 percent from the 1935 figure of 208,676,000. Exports of the better grade cigars increased in 1936, but these are still a negligible quantity. Exports to other foreign countries fell off moderately, amounting to 14,637,306 units in 1936, against 15,771,427 in 1935. Domestic sales totaled 103,865,826 in the first eleven months of 1936, or about the same as in 1935.

Production of cigarettes amounted to 2,809,000,000 units in the first eleven months of 1936, a very slight increase over 1935. Domestic sales totaled 2,753,000,000 in the eleven months period, or about two to three percent better than in the same period of 1935, while exports amounted to 16,000,000 and deliveries to the United States Army and Navy 33,000,000. Cigarette production declined steadily from 5,110,000,000 in 1928 to 2,965,000,000 in 1934, on account of increasing preference for American cigarettes. It has held even or increased very slightly, however, in the past two years.

Production of chewing tobacco totaled 193,619 kilos and production of smoking tobacco 182,547 kilos, all for domestic consumption.

Stocks of leaf tobacco in the hands of manufacturers and dealers increased in 1936, as was to be expected, with the larger crop and reduced exports. Stocks as of November 30, 1936, totaled 31,766,454 kilos, not including stocks in the hands of 40 small dealers from whom reports have not been received. Total stocks in the hands of importers and dealers of December 31, 1936, were 28,774,678 kilos.

New legislation of interest to the tobacco trade includes an Act increasing the license fee for leaf tobacco dealers from ₱20.00 a year to ₱30.00, and an Act directing the Philippine National Bank and the National Development Company to invest such amounts as may be necessary out of the funds at their disposal in building and maintenance of warehouses for leaf tobacco. The latter Act is expected to help stabilize tobacco prices by permitting farmers to store and borrow on their tobacco during the harvesting season in case they believe they can get better prices by holding it. Some authorities believe that farmers with good tobacco will be reluctant to store it in warehouses for fear of having it mixed up with tobacco of inferior quality, attempts to introduce standard grading having so far not been very successful. There is also the difficulty that farmers generally have to borrow at the time of transplanting and during the growing season, giving to the lenders the first opportunity to purchase their tobacco at prevailing market prices.

LUMBER AND TIMBER

The lumber industry had a very good year in 1936, with production and exports both increased substantially. Mill production in the first eleven months totaled 221,097,159 board feet, which compared with 207,588,288 board feet in the same period of 1935. Mills were working at capacity during most of the year and many of them were working double shifts in the last few months of the year. Lumber inventory in the hands of mills was reduced by heavy November deliveries and totaled 38,076,674 board feet at the end of November, 1936, or about 1,692,000 board feet less than the inventory a year earlier. With the excellent export and domestic demand, the inventory is believed to have been further reduced by the end of the year.

Exports increased to all major markets, excepting China, according to the Bureau of Customs. There was a total of 122,973 cubic meters of lumber, valued at P3,614,949, exported in 1936, compared with 107,854 cubic meters, valued at P3,118,992 in 1935. Nearly 60 percent of the total went to the United States, with most of the balance divided between Great Britain, British Africa, Australia and China. Exports of logs totaled 329,425 cubic meters, valued at P2,584,291, in 1936, compared with 229,808 cubic meters, valued at P1,904,527, in 1935. Logs went almost entirely to Japan. China showed an increasing tendency to take logs rather than lumber, but was a rather inactive market for either during most of the year. A considerable shipment of logs was made to Korea in October.

Lumber prices were steady to firm, averaging for the year about ten percent higher than in 1935. The average value per thousand board feet of lumber exports appear to have declined, however, due to increased shipments of lower grades, particularly to the United States. At one time, only the best grades were shipped, but with the demand increasing, there has been a tendency to ship the lower grades as well and one of the smaller mills is exporting its entire output. This increase in the proportion of lumber exported has eased the pressure on the domestic market and with the activity in the building trades and with the mines requiring an increasingly large quantity of lumber and mine timbers, domestic prices for lumber have been firm.

The heavy increase in exports of logs to Japan has caused a considerable amount of concern to the Philippine lumber industry. The Japanese market for lumber, at one time an important one, was completely lost some years ago when the Japanese tariff was adjusted to give a strong degree of preference to imports of logs rather than lumber. In recent years, Japanese lumber made from Philippine logs has been offering increasingly keener competition to Philippine lumber in Shanghai, Singapore and other markets. It has been suggested that an export tax be placed on logs or that a quota be imposed requiring a fixed ratio of lumber to logs shipped to any country, but no bill embodying any such suggestion was introduced in the 1936 session of the National Assembly. An Act passed by the Assembly and awaiting action by the American President, putting an embargo on the exportation of buntal fiber, is somewhat similar in principle and is being watched with interest by the lumber people.

An Act was passed by the National Assembly relieving forest products of payment of the wharfage tax.

MINING

Gold production continued to increase, with a new production record set nearly every month during 1936. The total for the year was ₱44,394,552, which compares with ₱32,600,683 in 1935 and ₱23,823,365 in 1934. There has been a spectacular increase in production since 1928, when gold production was valued at ₱3,808,124, or even since 1932, when it was ₱10,200,167. In those earlier years, however, production was valued at only ₱41.34 per ounce, whereas beginning with 1934, it has been valued at ₱70.00 an ounce.

The increase in 1936 was due partly to entrance into the field of five new mines, one of which may be ranked as among the leading producers, and partly to increased production by the older mines. One group of four mines, under the same management, produced gold with a total value of ₱23,588,782, or more than half the total production. Production by mines in 1935 and 1936 was as follows:

	1 9 3 5	1 9 3 6

With several new mines expected to come into production in 1937, it may be conservatively anticipated that 1937 production will exceed ₱50,000,000, which will permit gold to hold its place as third leading export commodity.

The public took an extreme interest in mining shares during the year, which in some cases exceeded anything that could be justified by actual operations or visible prospects. Many of the producing mines were nevertheless able to show good profits on their invested capital and the number of dividend payers increased from 6 to 15, the 1936 figure including one iron mining company, one management, and one investment company. Dividends paid in the two years were as follows:

	1 9 3 5	1 9 3 6
Antamok Goldfields Mining Co.	P 1,000,000	P 687,500
Baguio Gold Mining Co.	129,890

A bill passed in the 1936 session of the National Assembly increased taxes and royalties on gold production and established a code of rules for the regulation of the mining industry. Taxes remain reasonably moderate, however. Another bill established a Bureau of Mines in the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, replacing the Mines Division of the Bureau of Science.

Production and exportation of iron ore continued at an increasing rate, the one producing company shipping 596,000 tons to Japan during the year, compared with 305,000 tons in 1935. The ore averages 62 to 63 percent iron. The original contract made at the beginning of 1936 called for total shipments of 450,000 tons for the year, but that total was reached early in October and 146,000 tons additional shipped during the balance of the year. The contract for 1937 calls for shipments of 600,000 tons.

Interest continued in chromite and a number of properties were staked and some development work done. One company, which has about 100,000 tons of ore blocked out, averaging a little better than 50 percent chromium, started shipping commercially in August and shipped altogether nearly 10,000 tons before the shortage of freight space made further shipments impossible. Another company with large deposits of lower grade chromite made a trial shipment to the United States for tests of its value as a refractory material, but the shipping situation prevented further shipments.

Production of other metallic minerals was negligible. Considerable development work was done on a copper deposit in Panay, which appears to be small but of good grade, although so far development work has been insufficient to permit any very definite report on either size or quality of the deposit. Development work was done on a few manganese claims and it is reported that one, in Ilocos, is planning to make commercial shipments to the United States in 1937, but on the whole, the prospects of manganese production in the Philippines on a large scale are not, so far, impressive. Buyers of mineral ores were attracted to the Philippines during the year, one Italian metal broker opening an office and a company being organized locally to represent Japanese interests. Several new mining companies were registered during the year, as well as management companies and investment companies.

There was a lively interest in petroleum possibilities at the beginning of the year and several exploration companies were formed. The more substantial ones abandoned the field, however, primarily as a result of legal technicalities and the public interest in petroleum possibilities died down as quickly as it had arisen. Many geologists believe that it is unlikely that petroleum will be found in commercial quantities, due to the faulted structure of the islands, which prevents accumulation in pools.

Among non-metallic minerals, cement production is estimated at 729,000 barrels in 1936, a considerable increase over the 640,000 barrels in 1935 and 600,000 barrels in 1934. Prospects for 1937 appear favorable and a further increase is likely.

Production of coal continued small, only one mine being operated. An engineering company made a survey of a coal property owned by the National Development Company and almost adjacent to the plant of the Cebu Portland Cement Company. Although the quality of the coal is believed to be inferior to that of imported coal, it is expected that the considerable saving in freight cost will make it desirable to develop the property, though no decision has yet been announced.

There was a general increase in the production of other minerals, including clay products, lime, salt, sand gravel, crushed rock and rock asphalt. The latter has so far been produced only in a small way in Leyte. A considerable increase in production is expected in 1937, as a result of a contract understood to have been placed for an airplane landing field.

A committee appointed by the Chairman of the National Economic Council has recommended the formation of a National Iron Company as a subsidiary of the National Development Company. It is planned to make a survey of iron ore deposits in the Philippines with a view to determining whether it is desirable to develop deposits owned by the Government.

MOTION PICTURES

There were two producing companies in the Philippines in 1936, the Philippine Films, Inc. and the Parlatone Hispano-Filipino, Inc. They produced altogether 14 feature length pictures, averaging 9,000 feet, five shorts and four new reels. Most of the pictures were produced in Tagalog but one feature was produced in Spanish, for export, and one completed just at the end of the year was made in English, for the American market. Two of the shorts were scenic subjects, in color, mainly for the export market.

One producing company is planning to make four to six feature length pictures in Tagalog in 1937 and one feature in English, for export. The other producer has under consideration 25 pictures for 1937, including two in Spanish and one in English, for export. It is unlikely that more than half that number will be made, however.

The domestic market for pictures continued to fall off during the year. There were 148 theaters wired for sound at the beginning of the year and 63 not wired for sound. The latter were negligible, only a few silent pictures being available for showing. It is estimated that there were about 140 theaters wired for sound at the end of the year, a reduction of about six percent. First-run theaters in Manila, with air-conditioning, appear to have done well but neighborhood theaters suffered and very few provincial theaters had a satisfactory year.

A new Board of Censorship was appointed in the middle of 1936. It appears to have continued the liberal policy of the old Board and little occasion was found to make cuts in pictures during the year.

A bill enacted by the National Assembly during the year provides for a five percent amusement tax to be paid on admissions exceeding 40 centavos.

A new ordinance adopted by the Municipal Board of Manila imposes more stringent regulations regarding storage vaults for motion picture films. So far, no very considerable alterations have been required under that ordinance, however.

A municipal ordinance prohibiting the sale of standing room tickets for first-run movie theaters was declared unconstitutional by the Court of First Instance as class legislation.

TEXTILES

Imports of cotton textiles from the United States again decreased in 1936, in spite of the fact that the Japanese quota agreement was in effect throughout the year. In this agreement, the Japanese engaged to limit "Philippine imports of Japanese-made cotton piece-goods" to 45,000,000 square meters in each of the two years beginning August 1, 1935, with a ten percent margin for anticipation or carry-over and a limit of 26,000,000 square meters in any half-year. The wording of the agreement to limit "Philippine imports" was presumably for the purpose of making it clear that imports of Japanese-made goods transhipped at Hong Kong or other ports were to be included as well as direct shipments from Japan. Limitation of transshipments was found more difficult than had been anticipated, however, as these goods are imported into Hong Kong by Chinese merchants, ostensibly for the requirements of that market, and reshipped to Chinese merchants in Manila. As a result, imports of Japanese cotton piecegoods in the first quota-year, ended July 31, 1936, amounted to 52,675,000 square meters, exceeding the quota limit (including the ten percent tolerance) by 3,175,000 square meters. Of the total, 45,148,000 square meters came direct from Japan and 7,527,000 square meters was transhipped at Hong Kong. This apparently leaves only 37,325,000 square meters, including transshipments, to be received from Japan in the second quota-year. Arrivals during the first five months of the second quota-year totaled 21,625,000 square meters. Efforts were being made at the end of the year to control transshipments, with some promise of success.

The quota agreement has unquestionably limited importation of Japanese-made cotton textiles. Actual 1936 arrivals (for the calendar year) were 48,669,638 square meters, which compares with Customs figures showing 72,374,000 square meters imported in 1935 (customs figures represent liquidations of Customs entries, but actual arrivals of goods were at least as great and probably greater.) Without the agreement, it may be assumed that there would have been a substantial increase in 1936 instead of the marked decrease from the 1935 figures. Unfortunately, American textiles do not appear to have been the beneficiaries of the Japanese restraint, imports totaling only 27,583,336 square meters whereas Customs figures for 1935 show liquidations covering 35,250,000 square meters and actual arrivals were approximately as great. Imports from the United States in 1936 include about 8,250,000 square meters of embroidery cloth, compared with 10,989,600 square meters in 1935. The decreased importation of cotton textiles from Japan and the United States was partly offset by imports of cotton textiles from China and Hong Kong, which totaled 11,366,505 square meters in 1936, whereas in 1935 such imports were negligible. Imports of rayon from Japan nearly doubled, increasing from 13,692,338 square meters in 1935 to 25,618,558 square meters in 1936, as a result of the success of Japanese rayon manufacturers in making available fabrics which were bright and attractive, though perhaps not very substantial, at prices considerably lower than those at which American cotton goods could be offered. The Hong Kong and Chinese Cotton industry and the Japanese rayon industry appear, therefore, to have been the chief gainers from the quota agreement.

Demand for cotton textiles was rather slow throughout most of the year. Prices were fairly steady in the first half-year, though heavy arrivals of rayon from Japan and cotton goods transhipped at Hong Kong caused some nervousness in the market. The transhipped goods in particular had an unsettling effect on prices because they were purchased in Japan at the non-quota price, which is lower than the price for Philippine quota goods, and not being subject to the export fee, were in a position to undersell Japanese goods imported direct. Easier prices toward the middle of the year reduced the transshipment trade by making it less profitable and importation of Japanese rayon also declined seasonally. Business in all textiles was more than seasonally dull during the rainy season. By August, however, it began to be apparent that stocks were getting low and a number of inquiries were sent to the United States, chiefly for grey drills and sheetings, denims, khakis and other staples. These inquiries continued and increased in volume throughout the rest of the year but resulted in only a moderate volume of orders being placed, for the reason that American prices advanced too rapidly for the local market to keep pace. Prices in the local market advanced steadily throughout the last five months of the year but were never quite able to catch up with the American prices. The fact that American mills were unable during the latter part of the year to promise any delivery earlier than three or four months, was also a deterrent factor, due to reluctance of importers to make commitments so far ahead at high prices and also to their unwillingness to have goods arrive in volume at the beginning of the rainy season. Japanese prices advanced more moderately during the latter part of the year, and kept always well under American prices. At the end of the year, however, Japanese as well as American importers found it difficult to get any promise of reasonably prompt deliveries, mills being unable to promise any better than four or five months on many types of cloth. Japanese prices at the same time advanced sharply, while, demand became unusually urgent. The volume of inquiries for American goods was better than in some years, but importers of American textiles were unable to take full advantage of the situation on account of the great difficulty in getting their orders filled by American mills.

It appears probable that the demand for cotton textiles will continue at least during the first quarter of 1937. A seasonal reduction in demand may be expected after Easter, but the decline may very likely be less than usual as it will doubtless take some time to replenish stocks. Imports from Japan will of necessity be very light during the first seven months of 1937, under the terms of the quota agreement, and the market for American goods should benefit accordingly, if goods are available.

Imports of cotton, rayon and silk textiles in 1935 and 1936, according to the Bureau of Customs, were as follows:

It will be observed that nearly 80 percent of the bleached goods imported from the United States was embroidery cloth, which does not enter the Philippine market but is returned to the United States in the form of garments.

IMPORTED FOODSTUFFS

Flour.—Consumption of flour increased substantially in 1936, due to a shortage of rice and the increased purchasing power of the people. Imports for the year totaled 4,037,182 bags (of 49 pounds) in 1936, an increase of 18 percent over 1935 imports, and stocks were extremely low at the end of the year. Consumption is apparently running at the rate of at least 325,000 bags a month.

Imports from the United States, after declining throughout 1935, continued to fall off during the first few months of 1936, due to the fact that American prices were relatively much higher than Australian or Canadian. Imports from the United States made up only 19 percent of the total during the first quarter of the year and only 22 percent in the first half. American prices were reduced in March as the result of a subsidy and orders increased moderately. There was a further price reduction early in June, which brought American prices to a competitive level and American flour dominated the trade thereafter, until the shipping strike made it impossible to load flour at American ports in the last quarter of the year. Imports from the United States made up 37 percent of total imports in the first eleven months of 1936, compared with 27 percent in the same period of 1935. Light arrivals of American flour in December reduced the proportion for the twelve months of 1936 to 35 percent. There were, however, large stocks of American flour ordered from the United States awaiting shipment at the end of the year. The total of imports from the United States in 1936 is 59 percent greater than that for 1935. Imports from Canada and Australia also increased, while imports from Japan were somewhat reduced.

Japanese flour is apparently used only by Japanese bakers. The use of Canadian flour is mainly confined to Manila bakeries, as it requires more kneading than American or Australian flour and only the largest bakeries have machines for kneading. Stocks of Canadian flour appeared ample at the end of the year, but stocks of American and Australian flour were very low.

Imports, according to ships manifests, in 1935 and 1936 (in bags of 49 pounds) were as follows:

	1 9 3 5	1 9 3 6
American	894,448	1,419,436
Canadian	645,984	807,720
Australian	1,455,582	1,449,116
Japanese	419,100	334,100
Chinese	10,200	26,810
Total	3,425,314	4,037,182

Prices were inclined to be easy during the first half of the year, averaging about a ten percent decline between the first of the year and the first of June. American prices naturally decreased more markedly due to the subsidy. During the last half of the year, prices were firm, being on an average about 55 percent higher at the end of the year than at the first of June.

Canned Fish.—Japanese competition on canned sardines continued with Japanese prices averaging ten percent below American prices in the first half of the year. American prices increased throughout the second half of the year and were about 20 percent over American prices in October and November. In December, with no arrivals of American canned fish, the very small remaining stocks were sold at nearly 25 percent over the Japanese prices, which remained practically unchanged throughout the year. Imports of sardines from Japan exceeded those from the United States for the first time, being estimated (from ships' manifests) at 130,870 cases, compared with 109,000 cases in 1935. Imports of sardines from the United States totaled 99,224 cases in 1936, against 115,000 cases in 1935. Imports of pilchards from the United States increased, however, amounting to 76,335 cases in 1936, against 44,000 cases in 1935. Imports of sardines from Europe increased substantially, totaling 15,000 cases in 1936. There were 24,000 cases of salmon from the United States and 3,750 cases from Canada. Dried codfish came into favor as an addition to the fish diet, due to its low price, and about 24,000 packages were imported from Japan during the year.

Imports of sardines and pilchards from the United States together exceeded imports of sardines from Japan by 30 percent in volume in 1936, but it is notable that nearly 70 percent of the year's imports of American sardines and pilchards came in the first half of the year, whereas imports from Japan were about equally divided between the first half and the second half of the year. No shipments of canned fish were being made from the United States at the end of the year, due to the considerably increased cost of shipping via Vancouver.

Canned Milk.—Canned milk imports appear from a study of manifests to have increased moderately in 1936, the totals for 1935 and 1936 being as follows:

	C a s e s
	1 9 3 5	1 9 3 6
Condensed	207,109	207,764
Evaporated	539,055	552,978
Sterilized	22,299	24,018
Total	768,463	784,760

Customs returns, showing liquidations of entries rather than actual arrivals of goods, suggest a more substantial increase in value. The total value of condensed milk imports is recorded at ₱2,500,000, an eight percent increase over 1935, while evaporated milk is valued at ₱4,188,000, a 60 percent increase over 1935. The major share came from the Netherlands. Imports of condensed milk from the United States made up nearly 30 percent of the total for the first quarter, but declined during the rest of the year and were negligible in the last quarter, amounting to only nine percent of the total for the year according to the Customs figure, against 27 percent in 1935. Australia was the chief gainer, imports from that country amounting to 28 percent of the total in 1936, whereas there were no imports from Australia in 1935. Imports from Netherlands made up 56 percent in 1936 against 65 percent in 1935. Imports from Japan attracted notice around the middle of the year but were negligible in the last half and for the year made up only four percent of the total imports.

Imports of evaporated milk from the United States made up only 40 percent of the total in 1936, against 80 percent in 1935, the balance in each year coming from the Netherlands.

Local prices were steady throughout the year, with an increase of 20 centavos a case for evaporated milk in July. Retail prices on some brands of condensed and evaporated milk increased moderately in December. One of the principal importers put out a new brand at a low price during the year, in anticipation of Japanese competition which did not materialize.

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables.—Demand for apples, oranges, grapes and lemons continued good in 1936. Imports of apples appear to have increased and oranges to have decreased. Grape imports were below normal, due to frost damage to the American crop and the shipments that were received were not in the best condition. As usual, the United States got most of the business in apples, lemons and grapes and about 80 percent in value of the oranges. Japan continued to supply the biggest part of the onions and potatoes. Apples from Japan and China did not prove satisfactory to the Philippine taste. Imports of fresh fruits and vegetables from the United States fell off in November and December, due to the shipping strike, and stocks were very low at the end of the year, with prices increasing 50 percent in the last two months.

Other Foodstuffs.—Imports of fresh beef fell off to ₱785,000 in 1936, or 11 percent less than in 1935. The American share totaled 77 percent against 88 percent the previous year, Australia getting the balance. Although Customs figures indicate that the greater part of the beef imported in the past two years has been from the United States, it has apparently been chiefly Army imports, as fresh beef is hard to find in the cold stores and sells at prices sufficiently high to discourage most purchasers. Imports of canned sausage totaled ₱229,000 in 1936, an 18 percent increase, and the American share continued at around 77 percent. Imports of frozen butter totaled ₱583,000, an increase of about 20 percent. As usual, it came largely from Australia, the American share being 20 percent against 29 percent in 1935.

AUTOMOTIVE

The automotive trade had a very good year in 1936, sales of cars totaling 3,067 for the year, a 17 percent increase over 1935 sales. Sales were remarkably consistent throughout the year, the high month being October with 337 and the low month, May with 208. The usual rainy season slump was not experienced, as rising quotations for mining shares along with general prosperity yielded profits which were reflected in automobile purchases, beginning with June and continuing throughout the balance of the year. Sales reached a peak in October, due partly to fear that a luxury tax on automobile sales might be passed by the National Assembly, and fell off in November due to a reaction in the stock market and to the fact that the National Assembly adjourned without acting on the Luxury Tax Bill. December sales were comparatively moderate due to shortage of stocks, but demand was excellent at the end of the year.

Truck sales were very good in the first quarter, fell off seasonally during the rainy season and were good in the last four months of the year. Sales for the year totaled 2,279, a 15 percent increase over the 1935 figure. Sales to the sugar industry fell below expectations, but other sales were very good throughout the year, particularly to mining and transportation companies.

Imports of new cars by dealers totaled 2,826 in 1936, according to a census of all the importers. This includes 26 midget cars imported direct by a taxicab company. It is a considerable increase over the 2,594 cars imported in 1935. Imports were as usual almost entirely from the United States, although six cars were received from the German subsidiary of an American manufacturer and 23 were imported from Italy. These foreign cars appear to have found a ready market, coming at a time when there was a shortage of American cars, but it is not believed that foreign cars will become an important factor in the market.

Imports of new trucks by dealers totaled 2,129 in 1936, which compares with 1,744 in 1935. Trucks were all from the United States and included 16 diesel trucks, most of which had been sold by the end of the year.

Stocks of cars were considered normal at the beginning of the year and extremely low at the end, dealers having very few cars available to meet the demand. A shortage of medium and high-priced cars developed as early as August due to the unexpected demand for that class of car. Prospective purchasers, to some extent, satisfied themselves with low-priced cars but by the end of the year there were practically no stocks of any class of car. Sales during the year exceeded imports by 241 units.

Truck stocks were considered normal at the beginning of the year, increased to fairly large proportions at about mid-year but declined steadily in the last four months and were very low at the end of the year. Sales of trucks exceeded imports by 150 units.

Registrations at the end of 1936 totaled 28,420 cars, 17,855 trucks and buses, and 518 motorcycles. Of these, 14,213 cars, 5,017 trucks and buses and 320 motorcycles were registered in Manila and Rizal.

The used car situation was comfortable throughout the year. The demand was particularly good in the last quarter, as stocks of new cars were getting short and used car stocks were low at the end of the year.

Prospects for 1937 appear good and it is believed likely that sales of cars and trucks will approximately equal or possibly exceed those for 1936. There is an accumulated demand at the beginning of 1937 which may be expected to result in record sales for the first quarter, assuming that adequate stocks of new models become available during that period. The exceptional demand for high-priced cars as a result of stock market profits may not be repeated to the same extent in 1937, but so long as the present foreign demand for Philippine products continues, there seems no reason why there should be any abatement in the present general feeling of prosperity.

Automobile Accessories, Parts and Tires.—Business in automobile parts was good throughout 1936, showing a consistent increase over the preceding year, although the improvement was less striking than in the case of cars and trucks. Imports of parts, accessories and garage equipment totaled ₱1,929,626, a 22 percent increase over 1935. The increase in sales appears to have been more moderate, however, being estimated at 10 to 12 percent. Stocks were apparently increased, although they were considered normal at the end of the year. A notable feature was the increase in indenting, transportation companies and dealers showing a greater willingness to carry stocks themselves instead of relying on importers to carry stocks for them. There appears to be a greater proportion of new cars and trucks on the road, which will presumably not need parts to the same extent as old cars. With the greater number of cars, however, and with generally prosperous conditions, an improvement in sales of parts, accessories and garage equipment is expected in 1937.

Imports of automobile and truck tires, according to the Bureau of Customs, totaled 123,160, valued at ₱2,595,613 in 1936, compared with 93,529, valued at ₱1,829,074, in 1935. It is probable, however, that some bicycle tires were included. A careful examination of manifests indicates total imports of about 102,000 tires in the whole of 1936, an increase of about 18 percent over 1935. Sales were good throughout the year, apparently exceeding those for 1935 by at least 20 percent, as stocks were lower at the end of the year than at the beginning. Collections improved and were very good at the end of the year. Prospects for 1937 appear good, with an increased number of cars and trucks in use. Prices were increased ten percent on January 1, 1936, although five percent of this went to dealers in an extra discount. There was another increase of five percent on July 2 on all tires.

The tax on gasoline was increased to five centavos a liter (formerly four centavos) and that on lubricating oil to four centavos (formerly three centavos) a liter as of January 1, 1937. Registration fees were increased by 25 to 50 percent. These increases will probably not greatly affect the sale or use of automobiles and trucks although there may be a tendency among transportation companies to reduce rolling stock by scrapping or storing old units and failing to replace them, in preference to paying the enhanced fees. Business of transportation companies was good at the end of the year and if it continues at the present rate, there will probably be no considerable reduction in the number of trucks and buses in use. A bill which might have had a more serious effect would have imposed a ten percent tax on the first sale in the Commonwealth of certain articles designated as luxuries, including automobiles, accessories and tires. This bill was considered by the Ways and Means Committee but no action was taken on it. It may come up in future sessions of the National Assembly.

An Act passed by the National Assembly in 1936 removes the limitation on the power of the Manila Municipal Government to fix license fees for dealers in automobiles and accessories, merely requiring that the fee be reasonable. Heretofore, the fee has been limited by the Revised Administrative Code to ₱500 a year. The Manila Municipal Council was considering, at the beginning of 1937, a proposal to increase license fees for dealers in a number of goods, including automobiles.

IRON AND STEEL PRODUCTS

Imports of iron and steel products, not including machinery, totaled ₱20,080,128 in 1936, according to Bureau of Customs returns. This exceeds the ₱13,954,149 for 1935 by 44 percent. The increase seems to have been general. Imports of some of the principal items for the two years were as follows:

	1935		1936
	U.S.A.	Total	U.S.A.	Total
Bars and rods	₱ 317,402	₱ 954,767	₱ 472,092	₱1,346,571
Corrugated roofing	2,584,647	2,650,200	3,114,608	3,242,493
Plain galvanized sheets	557,322	634,016	529,832	653,567
Barbed wire	33,088	172,143	25,266	258,463
Nails	345,570	607,483	199,041	514,971
Tin plate	1,279,106	1,284,541	1,906,745	1,914,036
Cast iron pipe	348,801	384,303	388,935	470,828
Wrought iron pipe	702,888	755,383	561,246	868,591
Steel pipe	275,146	294,867	262,244	289,698

The increase in imports of bars and rods was due to the considerably greater construction activity. Prospects for continued activity in reinforced concrete building construction appear very good and a further increase in imports of bars and rods is likely in 1937. Imports of bars and rods from the United States were about 50 percent greater than in 1935 and made up about 35 percent of total imports, or slightly better than the 33 percent in 1935. American bars were consistently quoted about 20 percent higher than Belgian and other European bars during most of the year and were imported only for Government work, where they had the advantage of the Flag Law. In December, however, European prices increased so rapidly as to pass the prices of American bars, leaving the market to the latter.

Imports of corrugated roofing increased about 22 percent and as usual came almost entirely from the United States, in spite of the fact that Japanese roofing was at one time offered at a price nearly 20 percent lower. The increase in imports reflects the spread of prosperity, one of the first signs of individual prosperity among Philippine peasants being the replacement of a nipa roof with a corrugated iron roof.

Imports of plain galvanized sheets increased only slightly and the American proportion decreased from 88 percent of the total in 1935 to 81 percent in 1936, due to increased Japanese competition on the light gauges, 31 to 34. Some fault was found with the galvanizing of Japanese sheets, however, and importations were largely discontinued in the last quarter.

Imports of barbed wire increased about 50 percent, but the American share was reduced to ten percent of the total, against 20 percent in 1935. American barbed wire was competitive in price during most of the year, but there was a prejudice against it, arising from the fact that it is tightly rolled. The ordinary purchaser in the Philippines sees more value in the loosely rolled Japanese and European wire, in spite of the greater convenience of the small roll and the fact that the length and weight of the wire are plainly indicated on each roll.

It will be observed that imports of nails from the United States made up nearly 60 percent of the total in 1935, whereas in 1936 the American share was only 39 percent. Imports from Europe, particularly Czechoslovakia, increased somewhat but the principal increase was in imports from Japan, which more than doubled. Actual imports of nails from Japan appear to have exceeded imports from the United States but with the considerably lower price prevailing for Japanese nails, they made up only 35 percent of the total in value. Japan also dominated the market for plain wire, imports from Japan apparently exceeding those from the United States in value and being about twice as great in volume. Japanese prices on nails and plain wire were 20 to 23 percent under American prices during most of the year, American and European steel companies being unable to compete in price on these products in spite of the fact that it was from these same steel companies that Japanese manufactures bought most of their steel rods. At the end of the year, both European and Japanese prices increased to such an extent that they were not competitive with American prices, however.

The increase of about 50 percent in imports of tin plate is due mainly to the chance that large consignments happened to arrive at the beginning of one year rather than at the end of another. The consumption of tin plate is estimated to have increased some 15 to 20 percent, however.

About 75 percent of the volume and 80 percent of the value of cast iron pipes imported in 1936 came from the United States, the balance coming from Japan. The pipe from Japan is for the most part soil pipe, water pipe coming almost entirely from the United States. Of wrought iron pipe, 52 percent in quantity and 67 percent in value came from the United States, the balance coming mainly from Germany. Imports of steel pipe were 90 percent from the United States in volume and value. Some importers believe that the Customs figure must include a certain amount of steel pipe in the wrought iron pipe figures, as it is believed that steel pipe is imported in a larger way than wrought iron pipe, the former being preferred by the mines.

With excellent prospects for continued activity in building and mining and with a general feeling of prosperity in the Islands, there seems no reason why imports of iron and steel products in 1937 should not at least equal those for 1936. American mills at the beginning of 1937 have an excellent chance of getting a considerably better proportion of the total, as Japanese and European prices on all iron and steel products were increased up to 50 percent, or even more, during December and prices on many items were higher than American prices at the end of the year. Demand was excellent and stocks very low.

MACHINERY

Imports of machinery were valued at ₱11,718,381 in 1936, according to Customs returns, an increase of 45 percent over the ₱8,097,705 in 1935. Imports from the United States are believed to have made up about 80 percent of the total, against 74 percent in 1935. This item includes office machines, sewing machines and tractors, as well as industrial machinery and parts. Imports of some of the principal items in 1935 and 1936 were as follows:

	1935		1936
	U.S.A.	Total	U.S.A.	Total
Mining machinery	₱1,558,034	₱1,698,347	₱1,767,114	1,982,179
Pumps and pumping machinery	247,052	292,881	396,259	419,153
Stationary and marine engines	296,997	814,092	320,049	977,052
Refrigerating machinery	142,303	147,060	84,681	84,773
Sawmill machinery	83,862	85,018	145,025	145,468

It will be observed that mining machinery imports increased about 17 percent and that 90 percent of the 1936 total came from the United States, against 92 percent in 1935. In each year, most of the balance was from Germany. Mining development promises to continue and a number of properties are expected to install mills in 1937. It may, therefore, be anticipated that imports of mining machinery as well as other types of machinery used by the mines such as pumps, stationary engines, hoisting machinery, etc., will not be reduced. The United States should continue to get most of the business, in view of the preference of mining engineers for American equipment.

Imports of pumps and pumping machinery increased 44 percent, due largely to mine purchases, and American companies again got about 95 percent of the business. Imports of stationary and marine engines increased about 20 percent, also due mainly to mining activity, although in the case of both pumps and diesel engines there was a substantial demand for irrigation purposes. Imports of stationary and marine engines from the United States declined from 37 percent of the total in 1935 to 33 percent in 1936, while imports from Sweden fell from 33 percent to 20 percent. There was a notable increase in imports from Great Britain, which made up 25 percent of the total in 1936, against eight percent in 1935. This increase was due partly to the fact that an important mining development company did some financing in London in 1935 on terms which required a substantial amount of money to be spent in Great Britain.

Imports of refrigerating machinery were surprisingly small, being 43 percent below the 1935 figure, in spite of the large installation of air-conditioning machinery at the Manila Hotel and a number of small installations in offices and residences. It is possible that air-conditioning machinery is included in the Customs returns under some other heading.

Imports of sawmill machinery increased about 73 percent in 1936, as was to be expected in view of the considerable increase in the production of lumber. With lumber mills working to capacity at the end of the year, and with demand good in both export and domestic markets, a further increase in imports of sawmill machinery may be expected in 1937. Imports of logging machinery, notably tractors, were also greatly improved. Both sawmill and logging machinery came almost entirely from the United States.

Agricultural Implements.—The demand for tractors improved considerably, imports totaling 123 in 1936 compared with 110 in 1935 and 68 in 1934. The value of tractor imports approximately doubled in 1936, amounting to ₱531,717 compared with ₱269,518 in 1935, due to the fact that 1936 imports were mainly of large tractors for use in logging and in the mines. Imports of tractors were particularly heavy in December and prospects appear good for even better business in 1937.

Imports of other agricultural implements appear to have increased moderately in 1936, although details are not available.
